
A new "little Ruhr" is rising seven miles up the Cuyahoga river from Cleveland, Ohio, which will mark it as America's meeting grounds for iron ore and coal. The development is part of the Republic Steel corporation's program of expansion. A $15,000,000 plant, shown above, is under construction, which, when completed, will be the world's most continuous strip mill.

BREAKS NARCOTIC RING

Miss Joyce McAllister, twenty-seven-year-old former Santa Barbara, Calif., college student, whose under-cover detective work is credited with leading to the arrest of seven Chinese and a veteran federal agent in raids on night clubs in the Chinese quarter of Reno, Nev. The sheriff's office and the federal narcotics bureau provided her with $1,000 with which she bought narcotics, thus obtaining information leading to the arrests.

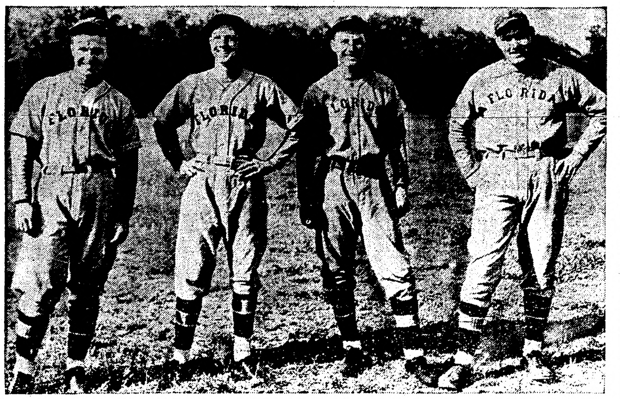
SAUSAGE

Ernest Biegajski of Buffalo, N. Y., evidently believes in safety first, for he has put on a life preserver before hoisting sail and moving out into Lake Erie in his remodeled pickle barrel schooner in which he plans to go to Europe this summer if present experiments prove successful. This is the second such boat he has built with his soldier's bonus money. The 1936 model leaked so badly that only the timely arrival of the coast guard prevented its maiden voyage from turning into a tragedy.

Sons of Diamond Daddies Good at Baseball



These four stalwarts of the University of Florida baseball team ought to be pretty good at the national pastime—if there is anything in the theory of heredity. All are sons of famous major league fathers, whose names were household words a few years ago. Left to right are Ed Manning, twenty, son of Ed Manning, former pitcher for the St. Louis Browns; Lee Meadows, Jr., nineteen, son of Lee Meadows, old Pittsburgh Pirates mound ace; Jimmy Shotton, seventeen, son of Bert Shotton, a former St. Louis Cardinal, and Wilbur White, nineteen, whose father once played third for the Chicago White S

VACATIONING they will go—Vera, Mom and Flo. And they will enjoy themselves the more because their wardrobes after Sew-Your-Own are just exactly right.

Mother in this model will be mistaken for daughter many a time because her design and dots are so very youthful. She will have various frocks in various materials developed on this theme, and in one of them, at least, the dots will be red.

Dates for Dancing.

Vera, to the right, has a date for dancing and when her escort admiringly effuses some such nonsense as, "That gown must have come on the last boat from Paris" she will toss her dark head and say, "No foreign frocks for me. I Sew-My-Own." Her dress of soft flowered material with demure braid at the neck and hem almost makes a sweet old-fashioned girl of her, but the tailored collar and trim cut label her the sophisticated young thing that she really is.

Collegiate.

Only a snappy sophomore can fully appreciate just how smart are those buttons down the back of the model to the left. Her yoke and neckline are "Oh, so new."

The Patterns.

Pattern 1297 is designed in sizes 14 to 20 (32 to 42 bust). Size 16 requires 2⅞ yards of 35-inch material plus ½ yard contrasting.

Pattern 1998 is designed in sizes 34 to 46. Size 36 requires 4⅜ yards of 35-inch material. With long sleeves 4⅞ yards of 35 inch material is required.

Pattern 1307 is designed in sizes 12 to 20 (30 to 40 bust). Size 16 requires 3⅞ yards of 39-inch material. For trimming 7½ yards of braid or ribbon is required.

Mr. Asher Frank, State Safety Director of Florida, has this to say about automobile accidents: "There no such as an unavoidable accident. If somebody didn't do something wrong, there wouldn't be any accidents."

Mr. Frank is right. The traffic accident hasn't happened yet that could not have been avoided Somewhere there was a defect - maybe in the road, possibly in the vehicle, or most likely in the driver.

To say that accidents are unavoidable is to close your eyes and mind to the truth.

All accidents are avoidable. Think that over.

The Marshall County Fair

Some of the most novel entertainment ever offered to the people of the Northwest will be presented at the 31st annual Marshall County Fair at Warren on July 1, 2 and 3.

Preparations for the event now are rapidly taking shape, according to Wm. Forsbere, president of the association.

Headlining the attractions at the 1937 fair will be the public wedding scheduled to take place during the evening of July 1. A young Marshall county couple will be married before the large crowd attending the exposition. The fair association has offered a purse of $50 to the contracting couple, while numerous gifts will be presented by merchants of Warren. The couple has already been selected, with A. C. Swandby in charge, stating that the parties live in two separate communities of the county. Who are they?

Horse racing will again be an afternoon feature with some of the finest horses in the Northwest competing in the running races. The complete race program will be announced next week.

Directors are also booking some additional afternoon attractions which will be real thrillers.

The night show with a complete change in program each evening will feature the Merry Whirl Revue of 1937, composed of a bevy of beautiful girls, gorgeous costumes, comedians, and a special lighting effects. Other professional grandstand acts include African lion acts, spiral tower acts, magic slight of hand, comedy acrobatic acts, high wire and teeter board acts and aerial acts. These acts are being brought to the Northwest to give the people of this section an opportunity to witness talent usually found only in large cities of the country said Mr. Forsberg.

The largest midway that has ever appeared in Marshall county will be on the grounds this year. iucluding giant ferris wheels, merry-go-rounds, kiddie auto and train rides, whip, gliders, whirl gyroscope and many others. DeeLangs Famous Shows is also made up of 20 big shows including a minstrel show of more than 50 persons.

The 4-H club department will surpass the fine exhibits of previous years with club members working hard to have their projects in order for the fair The 4-H clubs will also take a major place in the grandstand attractions and will be ready to present various numbers on the programs. The crowing of the 4-H club style Queen in beautiful revue will be a feature.

In our year's program of work we have resolved to have better conducted Club meetings which includes better attendance. Remember, we meet the second Friday of every month unless otherwise stated.

We also wish cooperation on our principle of lunch. if one is called on to serve, their attendance will be appreciated. Our treasury needs the money.

As loyal 4-Hers, let us remember these things and cooperate "to make the best better."

Sentinels of Health
Don't Neglect Them!
Nature designed the kidneys to do a marvelous job. Their task is to keep the flowing blood stream free of an excess of toxic impurities. The act of living—life itself—is constantly producing waste matter the kidneys must remove from the blood if good health is to endure.
When the kidneys fail to function as Nature intended, there is retention of waste that may cause body-wide distress. One may suffer nagging backache, persistent headache, attacks of dizziness, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes—feel tired, nervous, all worn out.
Frequent, scanty or burning passages may be further evidence of kidney or bladder disturbance.
The recognized and proper treatment is a diuretic medicine to help the kidneys get rid of excess poisonous body waste. Use Doan's Pills. They have had more than forty years of public approval. Are endorsed the country over. Insist on Doan's. Sold at all drug stores.

"Oh, I don't think so. He took engineering and they've got a rattling good engineering school. Bryn's family went there. They're part of the Stanford tradition. They always shine in football."

"Bryn's family?" Grandmother repeated slowly. Deborah, sick at heart, caught Tubby's eye. At sight of her face his own slowly lengthened. His mouth fell open. "But surely," Grandmother went on, "surely his family all went to Princeton. I remember quite distinctly. That would be, his father and his uncles. He has no brothers."

"I . . . I was thinking of his mother's family," Tubby said at last, still watching Deborah.

Deborah went across the veranda and rang the little silver bell. "You look tired, dear," she told her grandmother. "You must have some refreshment. Let me take Mr. Forbes away, and you rest for a few minutes before the tea comes."

Grandmother lifted her fan and moved it softly before her face. "I will be glad of some tea, Deborah," she murmured.

The tray came almost as she spoke, and at the same moment came the whine of Bryn's motor up the road. Almost immediately he was down the drive, and had given the group on the veranda one glance. His car stopped; a few seconds later he came around the corner of the house and to the foot of the steps. He walked up them slowly, his face unsmiling, his eyes on Tubby. Tubby put his cup down on the floor and stood buttoning his coat. Bryn stood waiting.

"Ah—er . . . I hope you can give me a few minutes of your time," Tubby began nervously. "It is in a noble cause, worthy sir. I am one whose sole interest is in the welfare of the nation. In other words, I should like to leave with you a small sample of my wares, just a small sample, sir, in forty-seven volumes. Nine dollars down and nine dollars a month till death do us part. This magnificent work . . ."

"Is it a book on etiquette?" Bryn inquired coldly.

"Etiquette? Oh, indeed, nothing of the kind. Although, of course, it contains chapters on etiquette. How to . . . to bathe the baby, and what soup to serve. That is the sort of thing you mean?"

"There should be something about invitations," Bryn answered. "Isn't there anything about not accepting invitations before they are offered? Or any remarks about getting bounced out of places where you haven't been asked?"

"Bryn," Deborah whispered, frantic, using his name almost for the first time. "Bryn, Grandmother thinks you mean it. Tell her."

Bryn turned toward Grandmother. She was leaning back on her pillows pale as death, her hand at her heart. She thought Tubby was an impostor.

But Bryn went across to her. "Are we upsetting you, Grandmother?" he asked, kneeling beside her. "I'm sorry. We don't mean it. The rosy-cheeked person standing so hang-doggedly, if there is such a word, before us, is one of my intimates. I have been more than good to him in the past. Many a time and oft I have shared with him my last bite and let him slap at the mosquito. You see how his presence affects me. My tongue goes off at a tangent. Did we frighten you?"

She began to smile at him. "How foolish of me to be upset," she said. "I might have guessed that you were joking. Deborah knew Mr. Forbes at once, and he brought your picture . . . but I thought . . . I was afraid . . ."

Bryn walked slowly, head bent, from the door of Grandmother's room, that night, to the door of his own. He had just helped her upstairs and had seen her to her own rooms with a last cheerful good-night smile. But as her door had closed, his smile faded.

There was a light under his own door. He opened it, went in, and closed it quietly behind him. Tubby sat in the armchair beside the window, waiting for him, a guiltily expectant look on his face.

"For the last two weeks," Bryn said evenly, "I have moved heaven and earth to create a good impression, to make everything go smoothly and comfortably, no questions asked. Give me another two months and you could have come up here and done your damnedest. But right now . . . well, you couldn't have chosen a better time. I'm still a new broom."

Tubby groaned. "I didn't know I was putting my foot in it," he said dismally. "She told me herself that you'd explained everything, and she called you Bryn. 'What difference does it make,' she said, 'what he's called?' Naturally, I thought you'd done the sensible thing, and confessed."

"Confessed what?"

Tubby was silent.

"What you've succeeded in doing is raising a question at the back of her mind. She doesn't actually mistrust me, even yet, but she wonders a little. I don't know what in the devil you told them, but it was certainly enough. There wasn't a suspicion in her mind as to my identity. Now you've succeeded in giving her something to puzzle over. She never quizzed me about my people before. Tonight she asked me questions. If Deborah hadn't been there I'd have had to wreck the show."

"Listen," Tubby said desperately. His face was almost pale. "I didn't know this whole business meant so much to you, Bryn. I thought it was all a lark. You said it was. I knew Deborah was beautiful, and sweet—anybody can see that—and that you . . . well, that you were interested in her. You'd be blind if you weren't . . ."

Bryn interrupted him. "And what did you say about Sally and Madeline? Whatever you said seems to have been adequate. Grandmother gave me a bad half hour, after Deborah was gone, tonight. She got me into her sitting room and quizzed me. She suggested delicately that Deborah's feeling might be quite distinctly hurt at the thought that there had been other girls in my life who had meant so much to me."

There was a long silence

"Bryn," Tubby broke in on him, "did Grandmother actually expect you and Deborah to fall into each other's arms the moment you met and . . . well, have everything all settled between you?"

"She hoped we would, yes."

Tubby gulped. "I don't quite understand her point of view," he went on. "Here's Deborah . . . she's nothing but a child. She doesn't know anything. She's as . . . fresh as a spring morning, and as unconscious about . . . well, about . . . that is, about . . ."

"You needn't flounder. I am aware of your meaning. In Victorian times a girl was supposed to be pure and entirely ignorant. Deborah doesn't know anything. She may have a few funny little ideas, but she doesn't know. That's one of the present difficulties. She's terrified. Well, a Victorian girl was supposed to have for her prospective husband only such feelings as respect and admiration and perhaps a gentle affection. Deborah was supposed to have those for Stuart Graham. They'd been inculcated in her. So Grandmother hadn't any compunction about handing her over to him." Bryn's face was contracted. "Poor little kid," he said under his breath.

Tubby began. "Does she think . . . does she expect . . . because if she does . . ."

"She does," Bryn said with bitterness. "She thinks that a wedding ring is a kind of magic talisman. If she knew that Deborah and I were . . . strangers, she'd die. Marriage is a kind of enclosure, to her. Deborah and I are one forever, she thinks, and the future is safe and secure. If life is smooth and unruffled she may live for years. If she is unhappy, troubled, she will just drift out. And if anything did happen to her, Deborah would never be happy again. She would always think she'd failed her."

Tubby stood up. He moved across to his friend, and faced him. "Bryn," he said steadfastly, "I don't want to make any more mistakes. I think I'm sure, but I'd like your word for it. I never saw you like this before. Is it the real thing, Bryn? It's got you, at last? You are in love with Deborah?"

Bryn pulled away. He went across to the window, and stood looking out at the stars. He turned and said, "Yes."

Tubby swallowed. Then, "I'm sorry I acted like a fool."

"It's all right, Tubby. Either . . . either it does come out all right, or it doesn't. Nothing you said would make any difference to Deborah, not even if you told her I'd been in love with half a dozen girls. She doesn't care anything about me."

"Listen," Tubby said. "Why don't you just show her how you feel, Bryn? I mean, put your arms around her and, well, kiss her. Can't you do that?"

"No."

"Why?"

"She gave me an opportunity once. I was afraid to. She wouldn't understand. You've got to remember that she doesn't understand anything. I'd frighten her. She might never get over it. If I've got a chance at all, Tubby, it's in letting her get used to me. Once she has confidence in me, really trusts me, once we get to be friends, then perhaps I can . . . oh, touch her hand once in a while. But if I frightened her now—I'm sunk."

"She wouldn't be frightened. I guess you're in love, all right. You're too modest, Bryn. She wouldn't be frightened. She'd find herself returning your kiss. It's more or less an unconscious process anyway, isn't it?"

Bryn stared at him, the gray eyes dreaming, far away. They came back to earth. Tubby had a suggestion.

"Why not get Sally and Madeline up here? Oh, Simon too, of course. Sally wouldn't come without him, and he'd be useful. You said Grandmother wanted young company for Deborah. Company now, and such company as my delightful sister, and her delightful husband, and his more than delightful sister . . . the way's been paved by those presents, you see, and my mention of the family relations . . . her mind would be too fully occupied to brood over you. We can tip the kids off. They're all good sports. And, for the deepest part of the plot—you know how Sally trots around at Simon's heels day and night, and kisses him at all the most awkward moments, and how they always hang on each other's arms?"

"Tubby," Bryn said after a moment, "you are a fool. Nevertheless . . ."

"Exactly."

Bryn considered, whistling softly. His eyes began to sparkle. Tubby, seeing them, reached across the writing table for paper and a pen. He wrote a note. He sealed it in an envelope. He addressed it to Mrs. Simon Vallance, at Hillsborough, California. "There," he said. "They're dying to come, anyway. So are a good many other people, as far as that goes."

Calling Upon Bermuda's Varicolored Finny Tribe

Trip Underseas in Diving Helmet Lends Thrill to Visitors.

Summer visitors and budding scientists have found a new thrill in Bermuda. One of the most popular diversions of the summer is amateur helmet diving, made possible through the government acquarium on Harrington sound.

"Although not a new idea, this is the best opportunity the public has been given to enjoy this unique sport, and hundreds of sightseers, including many women and children, are taking advantage of the privilege," says a bulletin from the National Geographic society.

Heavy Helmet Becomes Light

"After visiting the aquarium, one of the finest in the world, more adventurous ichthyologists add to their acquaintances among Bermuda's fish families by descending beneath the clear, calm waters of Harrington sound to view them in their natural surroundings. It is an Alice in Wonderland experience feeling fish frisk about you unseparated from your touch by a tank's glass walls.

"Divers on their first descents are apt to be nervous. Clad only in bathing suit and sneakers, the novice may eye with apprehension the strange-looking metal helmet with its snakelike air hose. The helmet, flanked with lead weights, rests heavily on the shoulders, but as soon as one ventures to descend the gently sloping sea-floor, and lower one's head under the surface, the air-filled helmet seems much lighter. In fact, its weight is scarcely felt.

"Water rushing in under the open helmet almost to the mouth may cause alarm, but air pressure holds it at about chin level, and one soon relaxes again. Should the diver feel ear pressure, as in elevators, it can be alleviated by swallowing. Once he becomes accustomed to the silvery bubbles, and the gentle gurgling of the air as the pump forces it out under the bottom of the helmet, and assured that the water will not rise above his chin, the newcomer in Neptune's realm is ready to look out of the glass window in the front of the helmet and enjoy the strange spectacle of being at home with the fish.

Underwater View of Fish Ideal.

"Wandering through this twilight, underseas world one has the queer feeling of being a disembodied spirit, of pressing against warm wind, of wading, not up to one's ankles only, but with one's whole body. Distances under water are strangely deceiving. The diver progresses through sunlit water for what seems a city block only to be told on his ascent that he has covered no more than a score of feet.

"Those who think all fish are silvery and torpedo shaped are surprised by the variety of beautiful colors and the strange shapes of Bermuda's fish. While one gets some slight idea of them by gazing down through a glass-bottomed boat towed slowly over the reefs, one can see them still better, without distortion or foreshortening, through the helmet. Colors of birds and butterflies are lasting, but the radiant, iridescent Colors of fish fade at death. Many fish, pale and uninteresting looking on ice in Bermuda's markets, appear full of brilliant coloring that flashes and changes when seen alive under the water.

Red Squirrelfish, striped Yellow Grunts, Sergeant-Majors, Angelfish, and many others dart past the helmet's window.

"Many forms of sea life, other than fish, attract the attention of the diver. On the rocks are chitons, related to snails, whose shells are arranged in overlapping plates. Pulled loose from a reef, they curl up like miniature armadillos. Lovely sea anemones wave pastel-colored tentacles to and fro like the languid arms of odalisques.

"On the sand are puffy black sea puddings, tiny scuttling crabs, crawling starfish, and spiny sea urchins. Stepped on, the spines of these so-called 'hedgehogs of the sea' frequently break off in one's foot.

"Bermuda is an ideal place in which to observe fish by means of helmets for two reasons. The Gulf stream, which flows like a warm sapphire river through the Atlantic north of Bermuda, protects the islands from cold and insures a teeming supply of semi-tropical fish. The islands are coral formations on the top of a submarine mountain, and thus scientific dives may be made very near shore, to observe both deep and shallow water species of fish."

Cecil Rhodes Knew Little Aboout America

The fact that there are today more Rhodes scholars from the United States at Oxford than from all the British dominions put together, is due to an extraordinary error on the part of Cecil Rhodes.

"He believed there were still only the original thirteen states in the Union of America," says Sarah Gertrude Millin in her biography of Rhodes. "Nor did the solicitor who drew up his will, know better."

In assigning his scholarships, Rhodes alloted so many for each state and colony and a complimentary few r Germany.—Kansas City Star.

To the Point

No man can be made a fool of if he doesn't possess suitable material for the job.

It is not how fast an automobile can go that counts, but how quickly it can stop.

It takes some people so long to be sure they are right that they have no time left to go ahead.

There is a lot of parking space on the straight and narrow path.

If you haven't time to read, you haven't time to succeed.

The man who goes out and paints the town red feels blue in the morning.

High Bridges

The bridge highest in the air is the Viscus railroad span in the Andes in Peru—15,000 feet above sea level. The bridge highest above the water spans the Arkansas river at the Royal Gorge in Colorado—1,050 feet above the surface of the stream.

Prohibition Facts

Alcohol was once eliminated from the United States Pharmacopea as a discarded therapeutic agent. In other words old John Barleycorn was given the boot by U. S. Medicine. But he found his way back, though he is still persona non gratia with the more progressive practioners. And now he is being eased out of British medical circles.

The regular London Letter in the Journal of the American Medical Association quoting from a recent book by Dr. C. C. Weeks showed that combining the figures of all classes of hospitals, the average use of brandy had dropped from 6.8 oz. per patient in 1900 to less than .7 oz. in 1934, with the trend still downward. In the leading London hospitals the decline has been 90 per cent—from 10 oz. to 1 oz. per patient. In the provincial hospitals the reduction has been slightly greater. In the London Hospital for mental cases the decrease reaches almost a fade-out, the consumption having declined more than 99 per cent. Prof. John Hay is quoted in connection with pneumonia tests in the Royal Southern Hospital of Liverpool where concurrent tests were made of treatment with and without alcohol with the result of a steady diminishing of administration of the drug, from 2589 oz. to 914 oz. in 1924, 25 oz. in 1927, to 1 oz. in 1928. "Since then neither in the hospital nor in the extensive ambulance service has any wine or spirit been used in the treatment of many thousands of patients," according to Dr. J. D. Rolleston, the superintendent.

"The popular belief in alcohol as a remedy," says the Medical Research Committee, "is based largely on the illusion that it has an important stimulant action on the heart or the respiration, and on vital activities in general. Rational medicine has long abandoned this belief, but it still lingers in popular practices."

NORTHWEST SCHOOL NEWS

The skimping of poultry feeding rations when feed prices are high is false economy according to A. M. Pilkey, Poultryman at the Northwest Shool of Agriculture, Crookston. Great care and good judgment are required in poultry feeding aspecially when the egg feed ratio is twnty-five per cent higher, than one year ago.

Mr. Pinkey says that with feed prices declining and the 1937 poultry hatch below 1936, the outlook for good egg and poultry prices is considerably brighter than at hatching time. This means according to Mr. Pinkey, that the flock owner who has a fine flock of early pullets will do well to give them the best care. Pullets shoud reach maturity not later than October 1, in order to be in maximum production when prices are best.

114 LOSE LICENSES IN RECORD DRIVE ON TIPSY DRIVERS

One hundred and fourteen Minnesota motor vehicle drivers lost their drivers license last month as police, sheriffs and highway patrolmen tightened their drive on reckless and intoxicated operators. Setting an all-time high mark in license revocations in May, Gill W. Carmichael, director of the Drivers License division of the state Highway department, in a report to N. W. Elsberg, state highway commissioner, reported steady progress as the state's police forces close in on drunken drivers.

For the first five months of 1937, 361 drivers have lost their licenses on revocations and of these 349 were drunken drivers, Mr. Caricheal said. Since the bureau started in 1934, there have been 2,713 revocations and of these 2,597 were convicted of driving while drunk. While revocations leaped to a new high in May, the 114 comparing with 72 the same month last year, suspensions dropped from 100 in 1936 to 79 for May, 1937.

Hennepin county led in revocations with 36 and Ramsey had 18, Brown, Koochiching, Mower and Steele counties had three each, Beltrami, Dakota, Douglas, Freeborn, Rice and Rock had two each and the others were scattered through 18 counties, with one each.

PATROL TAKES FLING AT HOUSE TRAILERS

Every house trailer, and all towed vehicles being transported on the streets and highways of Minnesota, will be violating the new traffic code if they are not equipped with brakes that can be operated by the driver of the towing car. This is the warning of the Minnesota Highway patrol. Most manufactured house trailers are so equipped, according to Captain Frank Corcoran, of the patrol, and dealers who transport new machines can obtain proper equipment. Section 105 of the new traffic code provides: "Every trailer, semi-trailer or other vehicle of a gross weight of 1,500 pounds or a highway, shall be equipped with more, when drawn or pulled upon a highway, shall be equipped with brakes adequate to control the movement of and to stop and to hold such vehicle and so designed as to be applied by the driver of the towing vehicle from its cab, excepting trailers owned by farmers when transporting agricultural products produced on the owners farm or supplies back to the farm of the owner of the trailer, and except disabled vehicles being towed to a place of repairs." The average house trailer weighs from 1,800 to 2,000 pounds, Captain Corcoran said.

WILL HOLD GRAND DETOUR PLOW CENTENNIAL

From the picturesque little village of Grand Detour, in northwestern Illinois, will come the first half of the National Broadcasting Company's Farm and Home Hour on June 25 (11:30 a.m., central standard time), when the network picks up that community's celebration in honor of the founder of the steel plow industry.

The occasion is an important one to agriculture, because it was the steel plow which opened up the middle west to farming after the settlers found their old wooden and iron plows would not turn over the new soil.

The first permanent steel plow factory was established at Grand Detour 100 years ago by Maj. Leonard Andrus. A memorial to him will be dedicated at the centennial program.

Dean C. L. Christensen of the University of Wisconsin college of agriculture, widely known farming authority, will deliver the principal address. Leon R. Clausen, president of the J. I. Case Company, of which the original plow works is now a division, and others also will speak. Music will be supplied by the Kable Brothers 129th Infantry band of Mount Morris, nearby.

CAPITOL NEWS REVIEW

By the time this column is printed the conservative Senate may have already changed its mind and decided to pass the bill which provides for the exemption from the state real estate levy on city homes and farms for the first $4000 valuation.

Although the conservatives at the outset of the special session put up the bars against this type of legislation since the passage of the homestead exemption bill by the House pressure upon the Senators from the folks back home is known to be very great. Senator A. J. Rockne, conservative leader, in a letter to the editor of one of the Twin City dailies, states that he is rather surprised "that a matter of so little consequence to the ordinary taxpayer as the so-called $4000 exemption law should create such a furore," but both he and his conservative colleagues are known to be considerably worried over this public furore. In fact, they are so worried that observers are beginning to predict that the Senate will pass this bill recommended by Governor Benson before the special session comes to a close.

The conservative Senators know that they are "on the spot." They have shouted loud and long about tax relief for those who own homes and farms. And although they, in reality, never meant tax relief for this group at all but for the large and wealthy taxpayers, they know that there is an election in the offing and that they will be asked some very embarrassing questions by their constituents. They are beginning to feel that their continued opposition to tax relief for the home owner and farmer might spell their defeat when they come up on election day. And this fact augers well for those who own their homes and their homes.

The natural resources of the state have given little advantage to Minnesota "largely because of the barrier of the long and short haul clause which prevents our railroads from making rates to enable Minnesota industries to market their products in distant territories in competition with industries located nearer tidewater," declared Governor Benson in a telegram this week to Senators Ernest Lundeen and Henrik Shipstead.

He urged the Minnesota Senators to do their utmost to bring the Pettengill bill to repeal the long and short haul clause onto the floor of the upper chamber, stating that "passage of this bill will increase employment incident to transportation and benefit our farmers by creating a large home market for their products."

* * * * *

The need for a complete investigation of tax dodgers comes to the front with the recent remark of J. P. Morgan that he did not see why income tax evasion should be considered a moral issue. Why, Mr. Morgan asks in effect, should any one care if a person can evade paying taxes so long as he can get away with it?

Congress has just acted on this issue and named a joint group to carry on an investigation. The American people have an urgent need to know who the socially criminal people are that can evade taxes—and pretend to justify themselves in the fashion of Amrica's ace financier. If some of our "best people" will then be put on the same level as other lawbreakers, so much the worse for them and the class of society they represent.

In the appointment last week of Sam L. Hauge, Bagley, as assistant commissioner of agriculture, farmers of the state will find an able and true friend. Along with Commissioner of Agriculture Ommodt he has a thorough-going knowledge of farmers' problems through many years of direct participation in their affairs. He is a member of the state committee of the Farmer-Labor Association.

Seven Minnesota congressmen signed a petition to bring the Frazier-Lemke farm refinincing bill onto the floor of the House of Representatives last week, but only 80 of the 218 names needed have been secured. Strongest supporters of the petition are from Wisconsin and Minnesota. All Minesota's Farmer-Labor Congressmen are supporting the measure which would provide 3 billion dollars to refinance farm mortgage at interest of one and one-half per cent.

Swedish consumers cooperatives have broken so many trusts that they feel that is their mission now, according to Jacob Baker, assistant national WPA administration and chairman of the President's Committee of Inquiry on European Cooperative Enterprise, who spoke in Minneapolis this week.

When Baker asked the prime minister of Sweden what one thing had helped farmers of his country the most, the prime minister promptly answered that it was the breaking up of the galosh monopoly by the cooperatives. The same galoshes that sold for $2.50 when the trust held sway now sell for 92 1|2 cents. Hardly a pair of the former wooden shoes is now to be seen around barns, the prime minister pointed out, because farmers can now buy rubber boots so cheaply.

Governor Benson's suggestion made before the fourth district American Legion convention that ex-servicemen take the lead in a movement of tolerance towards the views of those who are seriously striving to find a solution to present-day social and economic ills, may prove food for thought for future soldiers as well as for those who already have served in the armed forces of our country.

"We cannot solve the trying problems of today," Governor Benson told the Legionnaires, "by being intolerant of the views of honest persons who are sincerely striving to better society."

Quite obviously, there is something very seriously wrong with a system which is unable to solve the question of poverty and suffering in the midst of material plenty, yet those who have the courage to criticize the system and to advance remedies for consideration are branded as enemies of society. The Legion, with its tremendous prestige, could do much real service to our country in a crusade for tolerance which would be a campaign for true Americanism, squaring with the traditions and ideals of this country.

LET 'EM PASS, AVOID FINES, PATROL WARNS

If the other fellow comes up behind you on a highway, toots his horn and starts to pass, don't race him, its expensive This is the warning of the Minnesota Highway patrol. It might cost you $100 or it might send you to jail for 90 days. That's the maximum penalty provided by the new traffic code. Since the new law becomes effective the patrol has arrested a score of drivers for violating Section 34, which forbids speeding to prevent passing.

An Iowan resented a car passing him near Fairmont. He "stepped on it" and was traveling 55 miles an hour when a highway patrolman caught him. He paid $10 fine and $4 costs. A man from Blue Earth paid $12.50 for the same offense.

"It's a silly practice," said Chief John P. Arnoldy of the patrol, "and a dangerous one. When one vehicle pulls out into the left lane to pass legally, it is highly dangerous if another vehicle refuses to let it pass for it will probably be difficult to get back into line in case a car approaches in the opposite direction. Patrolmen have been instructed to pick up all offenders."

Clothes That Look the Part

NOW, Milady, that you've seen all three, which will you choose, the lovely dance frock, an easy-to-sew runabout model, or a slick all around the clock dress to flatter your every move and moment? It's a personal question but one you'll surely want to toy with since Sew-Your-Own makes the answer so easy.

Any Time After 8:30.

The romantic fashion at the left will make memorable occasions of your summer parties as only a lovely appearance can. Its two pieces are young, cool and streamlined. For the Miss whose interest centers about matinee goings-on, there's a dashing shorter style—it differs only in length, and either will be picturesque in marquisette, dimity, or organdie.

A Tip for Tea Time.

When you're keeping up with the Joneses, wear this stylish all occasion dress. It will do great things for you socially, and, figuratively speaking, it will cut inches from those high spots and make you feel pounds lighter. Think of what that means to chic and comfort when things get hot out your way. Dark sheer crepe is the material that lends top charm to this creation.

Fore and Aft.

Easy to sew and always ready to go is this new spectator frock for young women and those who want to turn back the clock. With this number handy there's no need to pause for reflection about what to wear. And that holds good whether you're bound for sports, business, or society. It is becoming as a sun tan, as simple to sew as a dress can be, and a cinch to launder. Why not make a carbon copy for the morning after? Remember summer chic depends upon the company your wardrobe keeps. Be sure it's amply supplied with cool convenient Sew-Your-Owns!

The Good Old Days.

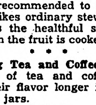
SANTA MONICA, CALIF.—Taking pen in hand to write Uncle Sam's check for that next installment, I look longingly backward to what I'm sure was the golden age of our generation.

It was the decade that began soon after the turn of the century and ended with 1914.



Irvin S. Cobb

Kings lolled securely on comfy thrones and dictatorships in strong nations were undreamed of.

Without shaking the foundations of the financial temple, Teddy Roosevelt was filing the alligator teeth of predatory wealth.

People laughed at the mad suggestion that there could ever be another great war—let alone a world war.

With suffrage in prospect, women were going to purify politics.

Taxes were a means unto an end and not the end of our means.

Standards of living climbed faster than did the costs of living.

Automobiles were things to ride in at moderate speed, not engines to destroy human life with.

Millions actually believed that, if prohibition by law ever became effective, drunkenness would end and crime decrease.

Yes, I'm sure those were indeed the happy days—the era when the Twentieth Century limited started running and W. J. Bryan stopped.

Synthetic Imitations.

WE STOPPED at a wayside station advertising pure orange juice; there's one every few rods. Next to autograph hunters, oranges are the commonest product of California.

The drink was the right color. But there didn't seem to be any orange in it. The best you could say for it was that probably its mother had been badly frightened by an orange.

I made inquiry, and an expert told me some roadside venders—not many, but some—were peddling an essence compounded of chemical flavoring and artificial extracts because it kept better than the genuine article.

I thought America had reached tops in the gentle arts of substitution and adulteration when we began making pumpkin pies out of squash and maple syrup out of corn stalks and buckwheat flour out of a low grade of sawdust—anyhow, it tastes like that—and imported English sole out of the lowly flounder and scallops out of skate fins. But when, in a land where a strong man couldn't tote a dollar's worth of oranges on his back, there are parties selling synthetic imitations—well, just let the East equal that magnificent stroke of merchandising enterprise!

Poor Little Rich Men.

LET us take time off to pity the poor little rich man who owns a large but lonesome sea-going yacht.

During the depression, the species grew rare—there were money lords then who hardly had one yacht to rub against another—but, with better days, a fresh crop lines the coasts.

No matter how rich, the owner feels he must use his floating palace. He may be content with a saucer of processed bran and two dyspepsia tablets, but no yacht crew yet ever could keep soul and body together on anything less than double sirloins. So he goes cruising—and gosh, how he does dread it!

For every yachtsman who really gets joy out of being afloat, there usually is another to whom the great heart of the nation should go out in sympathy. You almost expect to find him putting ads in the paper for guests who can stand the strain; everything provided except the white duck pants.

Problems on Wheels.

AMERICA'S newest problem goes on wheels. One prophet says by 1938 there'll be a million trailers and three million people aboard them. Roger Babson raises the ante—within twenty years, half the population living in trailers and all the roads clogged.

So soon the trailer-face is recognizable. It is worn by Mommer, riding along behind, while Popper smiles pleasantly as he drives the car in solitary peace—getting away from it all. Have you noticed how many trailer widows there are already?

But as yet nobody reckons with the chief issue: think of the increasing mortality figures when the incurable speed bug discovers that not only may he continue to mow down victims with head-on assaults, but will garner in many who escaped his frontal attack by sideswipes of the hitched-on monster that is swinging and lunging at his rear like a drunken elephant on a rampage!

To catch 'em going and coming—that should be a motor maniac's dream of earthly joy.

YOU SAVE by reducing breakage and repairs. Ground Grip Tires cushion tractors and farm implements, reduce jolts and jars.

YOU SAVE by doing better work. Ground Grip Tires will not pack the soil and do not injure plants.

YOU SAVE with Firestone Patented Construction Features. Gum-Dipping saturates and coats every cotton fiber in every cord in every ply, counteracting internal friction and heat and providing the extra strength necessary to stand the tremendous stresses and strains of traction pulling. The patented construction of Two Extra Layers of Gum-Dipped Cords under the Tread binds the tread and cord body into one inseparable unit. The patented tread design with deep cut, rugged bars is self-cleaning, providing greatest traction and drawbar pull.

YOU SAVE with the Firestone Cut-Down and Change-Over Wheel Program. By this plan your present implement wheels can be cut down and flat steel rims of uniform diameter welded to the ends of the spokes. Then by use of Firestone Demountable Rims the tires can be taken off one machine and put on another. You need only a few sets of tires to put all your farm implements on Ground Grip Tires.

YOU SAVE in buying NOW as tire prices are advancing. The price of crude rubber has gone up 110% and cotton more than 25% during the past two years. Call on your nearest Firestone Implement Dealer — Tire Dealer or Auto Supply and Service Store today.

Bible Camp To Open Soon

Only a few days now and a number of boys and girls from this vicinity will leave for Baudette to attend a week of Bible Camp. Those who are going should leave their names with the local pastor as soon as possible as he will be in charge of the transportation. The cost is very small, considering that it takes care of resistration, lodging, board, recreational activities and all the expenses of the camp. $4.00 is the rate per person this year. The 1937 camp promises to be better than ever. The new Auditorium is under construction A fine green roof will top this splendid meeting place which local organizations have already made contributions. The building will be finished with logsiding suggesting a rugged log-structure. The 30x60 floor space will furnish room for seating several hundred people - - space far recreation on rainy days - - a place for fellowship and visiting. Screens will keep the uninvited guests (mosquitoes) on the outside. The north and west walls will be quite open allowing a fine view of the Rainy river and Canadian shore. The sleeping cabins have been improved. A new boat will be launched in time for the camp. The menu for the week has been worked out.

Want Dimples? Device Will Make 'Em

It's simple now to have those charming dimples. All you have to do is apply this dimpling machine shown being demonstrated by Miss Evangeline Gilbert of Rochester, N. ## Big Ones Are Biting This Fishing Season

Two fine fish such as these are enough to account for a happy smile on any fisherman's face. Lakes and streams are yielding bigger catches than in recent years, sportsmen report, and fishermen find their angling made easier when a little outboard motor eliminates the backbreaking effort of getting to the spot where the big ones are biting.

What Irvin S. Cobb Thinks about

Summer Influenza.

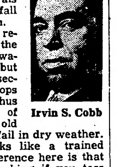
SANTA MONICA, CALIF.—In this favored land we are now starting to celebrate the customary seasonal rite of having our summer influenza.



Irvin S. Cobb

Summer influenza is distinguished from winter influenza by the fact that the former does not set in until September, thereby providing intervals for spring and fall to slip in between.

The symptoms remain practically the same. The eyes water copiously, but the nose runs second. The head stops up thoroughly, thus providing proof of the fallacy of the old adage—all sinus fail in dry weather. The patient barks like a trained seal, but the difference here is that the seal stops barking if you toss him a hunk of raw fish.

One could go on at length, but it's difficult to continue a writing job when you're using a nasal inhalent to punctuate with and have a taste in your mouth like moth balls smothered in creosote dressing.

The Art of Cussing.

MY OLD chum Burgess Johnson, once an editor but now a college professor, tells a credulous bunch of advertising men that Mark Twain was the champion all-time all-American cusser—could cuss five solid minutes without repeating himself.

Pardon me, Burgess, but Mark Twain never did any such thing. Once I heard him at his out-cussingest best—denouncing a publisher who had offended him. He swore for five minutes all right, but over and over again he used the same few familiar oaths which the English-speaking race always have used. He didn't introduce a new or an original one.

I studied the art of cussing, both by note and by ear, under such gifted masters of profanity as southern steamboat mates, New York newspaper men, London cab drivers, western mule whackers and north woods timber choppers.

With my hand on my heart I solemnly affirm that not one of these alleged experts ever employed any save the dependable age-seasoned standbys, to wit, seven adjectives, two strong nouns, one ultrastrong noun and one compound phrase—the commonest of all.

Romance for King Zog.

FOR about the fifth time comes a plaintive plea from Albania, one of those remote little border countries of eastern Europe where every now and then peace threatens to break out. They have a king over there. At least they had a king at the time of going to press with this dispatch. His name is King Zog. This is neither a typographical error nor a vaudeville gag. The name positively is Zog, and radio comedians may make the most of it.

For many months he has been paging the world for a wife. The qualifications call for the lady to have $5,000,000. His majesty would also like for her to turn Mohammedan, but the main requirement is that $5,000,000 bank roll.

California's Coastline.

WHILE it's quite a roomy coastline, California has at present only one coastline. This is a source of mortification to patriotic native sons, Florida having two such, one on either side, besides a dampish area in the middle known as the Everglades.

Still, in a way, California's silvery strand continues to excel. Within easy speeding distance we have at least one beach resort where, when Palm Springs folds up on account of the heat, many of our artistic colony go to relax. So wholeheartedly do some go in for this that often you may stand off a quarter of a mile and hear them relaxing.

Occasionally a relaxationist relaxes so completely that it takes weeks for him to get over it. His friends leave him at the seaside only to gather at the bedside.

The Changing World.

IT WAS Susan B. Anthony who dedicated her life to the cause of emancipation for her sex. But it was her grandniece who lately attained the headlines by suggesting that, with the addition of a buckle here and a ribbon there, a nightie would make a suitable evening gown for almost any occasion.

Thus do we see how from one generation on to another is handed down the flame of genius and service to womankind.

But, although the inspired suggestion is already weeks old, there still are no signs that it is finding advocates among the queen bees of the cultural hive. Maybe the reason is that a belle of the Hollywood artistic group would feel so ostentatiously overdressed if she wore a full-fashioned nightie to a social function.

Modern-to-the-Minute

AS RIGHT as rain, and as cooling, are these clever young modes for the woman who sews. Each is simple to make, pleasant to wear, and may possibly be the difference between a modern and a mediocre wardrobe for you this summer. Sew-Your-Own wants to help you look your best, to stamp you modern-to-the-minute, and therefore is anxious and proud to present today's trio.

A Two Piecer for Chic.

If he tells you you're just a nice armful you are the right size and type to wear the blouse 'n' skirt shown above, left. The waistcoat idea is very much the thing in blouses. The skirt is terribly young and figure flattering. What more could any little heart desire? You can have this smart ensemble for a song and a minimum of stitches. Think of the countless summer occasions ahead that all but specify this very outfit.

Not Smart Matron.

You should sue for slander anyone who calls you a Smart Matron when you don this gratifying new fashion (above center). You step into an entirely new size range when you step forth in this frock. So simple is its technique—merely a deftly designed feminine jabot, softly draped contours, and a meticulously slender skirt—yet so effective. It will thrill you in marquisette chiffon or lace, and it will keep you deliciously cool.

Snappy for Sports.

Play the net or the grandstand in the sports dress at the right and feel perfectly confident in any event. There isn't one among us who hasn't a real yen for a streamlined all-of-a-piece sportster that's on and off in a jiffy, launders easily, and comes up smiling time after time. You can concoct something clever of seersucker or pique and complete the whole thing in an afternoon. Why not order your size today and have all-summer benefit of a really companionable sports dress?

The Patterns.

Pattern 1302 is for sizes 14 to 42. Size 16 requires 2¼ yards of 39 inch material for the blouse, 2¼ yards for the skirt.

Pattern 1286 is for sizes 36 to 48. Size 38 requires 4⅜ yards of 39 inch material.

The Path of Duty

AND, as the path of duty is made plain,
May grace be given that I may walk therein,
Not like the hireling, for his selfish gain,
With backward glances and reluctant tread,
Making a merit of his coward dread,
But, cheerful, in the light around me thrown,
Walking as one to pleasant service led;
Doing God's will as if it were my own,
Yet trusting not in mine, but in
His strength alone!

HELP KIDNEYS
To Get Rid of Acid and Poisonous Waste

Your kidneys help to keep you well by constantly filtering waste matter from the blood. If your kidneys get functionally disordered and fail to remove excess impurities, there may be poisoning of the whole system and body-wide distress.

Burning, scanty or too frequent urination may be a warning of some kidney or bladder disturbance.

You may suffer nagging backache, persistent headache, attacks of dizziness, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes—feel weak, nervous, all played out.

In such cases it is better to rely on a medicine that has won country-wide acclaim than on something less favorably known. Use Doan's Pills. A multitude of grateful people recommend Doan's. Ask your neighbor!

When Bryn went downstairs next morning there was apparently no one awake in the big house. Gary and Deborah were sure to be up, but they were not in sight. He stood for a moment on the top step, breathing in the fresh cool air, and then went around the house and down the brook toward the bridge, on his way to the engine house.

He had filled the gasoline tank in the engine and was rinsing his hands in the icy brook water when he heard a footstep on the bridge and looked up to see Deborah approaching. He stood up and dried his hands on his handkerchief. She came to stand a little above him on the raised plank, looking down at him. To his surprise, the strain of yesterday had not set a greater coldness toward him in her dark eyes. She was smiling a little at him now, her lips curving. She was smiling at him, and Grandmother was not watching. He stared at her.

"I followed you because I want to talk to you, if you don't mind," she said.

"Why, of course I don't mind. Is there something I can do?"

She hesitated. When he looked up, the long lashes had dropped and lay close to her cheek. She began to examine the moss, too. "I'm not a very nice person," she said at last. I apologized once before for being so difficult, but I don't think I tried any harder not to be difficult. I mean it, this time. You were awfully thoughtful, last night, when Grandmother was so queer and afraid. You do love her, don't you? You're quite honest about it? You would do anything to spare her pain?"

"Yes."

She nodded. "I can see that. I don't think I quite believed it until yesterday afternoon, when you came home again, and last night, when you were so troubled. I've been very selfish. I've been thinking of myself all the time, and feeling trapped, and hating it. I haven't been half as thoughtful of Grandmother as you have. I've demanded things for myself more than for her, thought about myself first, and what . . . what my position was. You haven't thought about yourself once. You haven't complained. And this isn't your problem, after all, and yet you've put yourself into such a position that if anything went wrong, you would lose most. You signed the note for Mr. Holworthy, and assumed all the financial responsibility, and you've given me your name. I didn't quite see it all until Tubby came yesterday. And he talked about your friends and then he went on and nearly ruined everything, and suddenly I saw how dreadfully unfair that would be for you, and how horrid I've been." She looked at him gravely. "Will you forgive me?"

"You haven't been horrid, Deborah. You've been . . ." Bryn began, and caught himself in time. But she did not notice.

"Yes, I have. You don't know all the things that have been going on in my mind. I'm sorry." She put her soft hand out, momentarily, and patted his, lying on the railing. Bryn did not move.

"Bryn."

"Yes. D . . . Deborah."

"Grandmother is in a strange state of mind. Last night I was very worried. I went into her room to tuck her up and kiss her good-night. She looked up at me directly and asked me if I were happy. She hasn't asked me before. Not in the same way. I think she began to suspect everybody, even me."

"Did you tell her you were happy?"

"Yes. But . . . she's going to be watching very closely for proof." She stopped. The color began to rise under her white skin. Bryn watched it, bewitched. Her eyes were lowered.

"What . . . what are we going to do about it?" he asked, lost.

"Happy with you," Deborah explained, as if he did not understand.

"Does she think I'm in love with you?"

"Yes," Deborah replied, and flushed violently. "You're a much better actor than I am. I'm sure she's beginning to suspect me."

"When you go out the door," Bryn explained, "I stand and look after you. And when I hear you coming I go to meet you. And when you're talking I keep looking at you, and when you're away I talk to her about you. I tell her how beautiful you are, how much more beautiful than any girl I ever knew, with those lovely eyes, and your lashes, as long as a dream, and your mouth, and your little white chin, and the way you blush . . . and your throat, so soft and white, and the way you move your shoulders, and the color of your hair, and the way it curls." He drew a deep breath.

"Oh, dear," she sighed. "No wonder she thinks I'm not in love with you. I haven't told her once anything about you. I've hardly mentioned you."

"Well," Bryn said after a moment, "I'll tell you. When you're in love, Deborah, you hate to be away from your . . . from your sweetheart for a second. Everything she does is perfect and lovely and sweet. You want to lift her in your arms and hold her tight against you, so close that you can hear her heart beating. You want to hear her say that she'll never leave you again, no matter what happens, that she doesn't care anything about anybody else in the world but you. And if it happened that she didn't love you," Bryn went on slowly, "there'd be a sick empty feeling where your heart ought to be, and you'd wish you were a kid again, so you could cry. But if she did love you, and she knew you weren't sure about her, she'd put her arms around you, and put her cheek against yours, and maybe even . . . kiss you."

Deborah was staring at him. After a moment she said breathlessly, "Is that the way you love your . . . your own girl?"

"Yes, Deborah."

"I don't know anything about that way of loving," she said at last. "I couldn't pretend that to Grandmother."

"No," Bryn said.

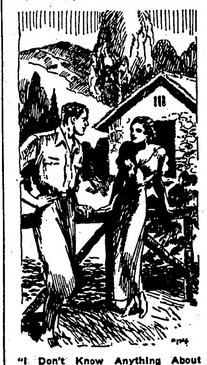
"It wasn't so much what I ought to say to Grandmother, anyway," she said. "I hadn't really thought of talking to her about you. It was the way I ought to act. I was wondering . . ."

"Yes?"

"It's really Gary's idea," she said hastily. "He came to me about it this morning. He's afraid Grandmother might get to wondering about us. You see, she thinks we . . . we love each other the way other people do when they're married," she explained.

"I suspected as much," Bryn said lightly. "Well, is there something I can do about it?"

"I'm afraid she's going to be watching for a while, anyway. Until she's satisfied. I was wondering . . . it's Gary's idea, you know. There's a little sewing room just at the head of the stairs. There's a door into my sitting room. Grandmother never goes in there; if you don't mind dreadfully, you could have it for your bedroom."



"I Don't Know Anything About That Way of Loving."

"Why, no," Bryn said calmly. "I wouldn't mind. I'd have to go out and in through your sitting room, though. Wouldn't you dislike that?"

"What I was trying to tell you when I first started to talk," she reminded him, "is that it's too late for me to keep thinking what I like and what I don't."

So it was settled.

CHAPTER VII

"If this isn't heaven," Sally sighed, looking about her in supreme content, "then don't bother to tell me I'm not dead. I don't want to be disturbed."

She sat on the cool grass in the wavering shadow of the tree against whose smooth trunk Deborah was leaning. The leaves overhead rustled softly in the faint noonday breeze. Nothing else anywhere in the whole pleasant picture spread before them moved under the white sunlight. They had congregated, all six of them, on the highest corner of the sloping lawn, the orchard behind them, a smooth stretch of sward unrolling down to the stone walls below, broken only by the bright flame of a bed of wallflowers half-way down the slope.

"Me, too," Simon muttered. He lay stretched out in the grass, his pipe in his mouth, his head on Sally's knee.

Bryn sighed. He shifted his position and moved a few inches closer to Deborah. He turned on his stomach, propped himself on his elbows and gazed up at her. A few days ago, before these others had come, and after she and Bryn had decided to be friends, she would have smiled down at him a little. It was fun to smile at Bryn, once one had started. He always looked as if he liked being smiled at. But now, Deborah pretended not to know that he was looking at her, and regarded steadily the hills far away. Because Madeline was here now, and Madeline might not like it.

A mist came into her eyes, as she thought of Madeline, and the hills swam in a noonday fog. Poor Madeline wasn't happy, for all her pretense at light-heartedness, Deborah told herself. How could she be happy, seeing Bryn married, actually married, to another girl, a girl who wore a wedding ring that he had given her, who had taken his name? Bryn was lovely. Even with Madeline here, he hadn't changed his attitude to Deborah a bit. He acted exactly as if they really were married, really loved each other, and he didn't try to keep Madeline from seeing.

In as Much as Young Man Qualified for Job, He Got It

"Well," inquired the man in the swivel chair as the seventy-fourth applicant of the day strode into his office, "have you had a thorough education in art?"

"Yes, sir," answered the young applicant confidently, "I have."

"Studied in Europe?"

"Yes. Four years at the Beaux Arts."

"And you're sure you could guide visitors through this place competently?"

"Yes, I am sure."

"Well, we shall see. What were the three Greek orders?"

"Ionic, Corinthian and Doric."

"Good! What are the outstanding features of Gothic architecture?"

"Pointed arches, vertical accent, skeletonal framework with small wall space and large windows. This contrasts with the Romanesque where—"

"Whoa. Whoa. That's enough. And you'd be able to explain reproductions of great painters to inquiring visitors?"

"Certainly. The perspective of Fabriano, the power and religious fervor of Masaccio, the splendid chiaroscuro of Leonardo, the relentless realism of Rembrandt, the brilliant color tones of Veronese, born 1528, died—"

"You'll do. Now go and get your overalls on," concluded the proprietor of the Ducal Filling Station, Inc., "and give that customer out there a few gallons of gas." — Parke Cummings, in Cleveland Plain Dealer.

WILBUR SHAW.

Gum-dipped cords PROVIDE THE EXTRA MARGIN OF SAFETY ON THE SPEEDWAY OR THE HIGHWAY

THOUSANDS said that tires could not stand the terrific grind. They said cars had been built with much greater speed, turns in the track had been repaved with granite-like surface, yet Wilbur Shaw drove to victory on Firestone Gum-Dipped Tires setting a new record of 113.58 miles per hour on one of the hottest days in the history of the Indianapolis track.

Think of the terrific impact on these tires as the cars roared into the treacherous turns and out again. Tons of force straining, pulling, and twisting inside the tire, yet not one cord loosened, not one tread separated from the cord body—all because Gum-Dipping, the Firestone patented process, successfully counteracted the internal friction and heat that ordinarily destroy tire life.

You will never drive your car at these record-breaking speeds, but for the safety of yourself and family you need the safest, strongest and most dependable tires. See your nearby Firestone Dealer or Firestone Auto Supply and Service Store. Join the Firestone SAVE A LIFE Campaign by equipping your car with a set of new Firestone Gum-Dipped Tires—the safest tires that money can buy.

School Officers Held Meeting

New laws relating to liability insurance and teachers' contracts were discussed by T. C. Engum, director of rural education with the state department of education at a Marshall County School Officers conference at Warren high school on Tuesday of last week.

Approximately 350 school officers attended the session, which was the first held in the county over a period of several years. Much valuable information regarding school operation was given the school officers in attendance, said Nels M. Engen, county superintendent of schools who was in charge of the event.

The powers and duties of school officers, the powers of the voters at the annual school meetings, school costs, distribution of state aids, and school levies were also topics discussed by Mr. Engum.

Mr. Engum led a discussion regarding school incomes and accounting for local school boards. He also conducted a question box and a general discussion regarding school problems.

In speaking to the gathering, Mr. Engum complimented highly the type of administration and supervision the Marshall county schools were receiving through Mr. Engen, stating that it was very seldom that school boards in this county found it necessary to refer matters to the state department for information. H. O. Hanson and R. A. Werner from here attended the meeting.

At the end of the celebration hundreds and hundreds of people will be dead because of failure to comply with safe practices.

Avoid congestion - control your speed - put your car in perfect mechanical condition - and above all DRIVE CAREFULLY.

It's smart to be careful - death takes no holiday.

County Directors Had Meeting

The County Directors of the Northwestern Minnesota Association of Conservation Clubs met at Hotel Warroad at Warroad on Saturday evening to discuss plans for the annual meeting of the Sportsmens Clubs affiliated with the association.

Dr. N. M. Leitch of Warroad, President of the Association called the meeting to order at 8 p. m. after those who attended had enjoyed a fine supper at the hotel which is operated by Geo. Arnold.

A. A. Trost, Marshall County Attorney of Warren who is Secretary-Treasurer of the association read the report of the last directors meeting which was held at Warroad last winter. He also explained some of the progress and accomplishments made by the association since that meeting.

The annual meeting of the many sportsmen clubs that belong to the association will be held at Thief River Falls on Monday, July 26, 1937. It was decided that the annual meeting be called to order at 4 p. m. so that the resolutions and other business can be gone over before the evening session.

Speakers for the evening session will be engaged from the Wild Life Bureau at Winnipeg and from the Federal Resettlement Project in Lake of the Woods county. It was also brought out that Congressm Buckler and other prominent men will be invited to attend the annual meeting.

Plans are going forward to make arrangements to accomodate about a thousand sportsmen at the annual meeting. Interest in this association of sportsmen clubs in the seven northwest counties of Minnesota has grown fast the past year according to reports made by county directors.

H. O. Hanson, Director for Marshall County, attended the meeting Saturday evening at Warroad. He was accompanied by A. P. Thompson, local lumber dealer here.

J. A. Raltson of Thief River Falls came here last week to take over the City Barber Shop.

Mechanical Reveille Supplants Bugler

Private Frank Kaufhold, of the Second air base at Mitchell field, N. Y., seems amazed as he hears Mitchell field's new mechanical bugle blow the familiar strains of "Reveille." His own bugle is now outmoded with the new contraption that has been adopted here. Although it takes some of the romance from army life, bugle calls, mechanical ones we mean, now have exceptional clarity and perfection.

what Irvin S. Cobb thinks about:

The New NRA Bill.

SANTA MONICA, CALIF. — They do say the new NRA bill, as drawn by the Gallagher and Shean of the administration, Messrs. Corcoran and Cohen, is more sweeping than was the original NRA.

Even Gen. Hugh Johnson, once as conversational as Mrs. Astor's parrot, but lately exiled amid the uncongenial silences, crawls out from under a log in the woods with lichens in his hair, but the lower jaw still working smoothly in the socket, to tell how drastic a thing it is.

Irvin S. Cobb

Critics assert this legislation will cover business like a wet blanket over a sick pup, and point out that the number of sick pups benefited by being tucked under wet blankets is quite small. However, these fussy persons belong to the opposition and don't count. Anyhow, they didn't count much at the last election except in Maine, Vermont and one backward precinct in the Ozark mountains.

Friendly French Visitors.

IT SEEMS we were cruelly wrong in ascribing mercenary motives to those French financiers who've been dropping in on us lately. They came only to establish more cordial relations. Of course, there's a new French bond issue to be floated, but these visits were purely friendly and altruistic.

Still and all, I can't help thinking of Mr. Pincus, who invaded the east side to invite his old neighbor, Mr. Ginsburg, whom he hadn't seen in years, to be a guest at Mrs. Pincus' birthday party.

He gave full directions for traveling uptown, then added:

"Vere we lif now it's von of dose swell valk-up flats. So mit your right elbow you gif a little poosh on the thoid button in the doorjam downstairs und the lock goes glick-glick und in you come. You go up two floors und den, mit your other elbow, you gif one more little poosh on the foist door to the left und valk in—und vill mommer be surprised!"

"Vait," exclaimed Mr. Ginsburg. "I could get to that Bronnix. I got brains, ain't it? But ulso I got fingers und thumbs. Vót is de pooshmit-elbows stuff?"

Murmured Mr. Pincus gently:

"Surely you vouldn't come empty-handed!"

Visiting Ancient Ranchos.

UNDER the guidance of Leo Carillo, that most native of all native sons, I've been visiting such of the ancient ranchos as remain practically what they were before the Gringos came to southern California. You almost expect to find Ramona weaving in a crumbly patio.

What's more, every one of these lovely places is lived on by one of Leo's cousins. He has more kinfolks than a microbe. They say the early Carillos were pure Spanish, but I insist there must have been a strong strain of Belgian hare in the stock. When it came to progeny, the strain was to the Pacific coast what the Potomac shad has been to the eastern seaboard. It's more than a family—it's a species.

And a mighty noble breed it is—producing even yet the fragrant essence of a time that elsewhere has vanished and a day when hospitality still ruled and a naturally kindly people had time to be mannerly and the instinct to be both simple and grandly courteous at once.

Privileges of Nazidom.

THE German commoner may be shy on the food rations and have some awkward moments unless he conforms to the new Nazi religion. But he enjoys complete freedom of the press—or rather, complete freedom from the press. And lately another precious privilege has been accorded him.

He may fight duels. Heretofore, this inestimable boon was exclusively reserved for the highborn. But now he may go forth and carve and be carved until the field of honor looks like somebody had been cleaning fish.

This increase in his blessings makes me recall a tale that Charley Russell, the cowboy artist, used to tell:

"The boys were fixing to hang a horse thief," Charley said. "He only weighed about ninety pounds, but for his heft he was the champion horse thief of Montana. The rope was swung from the roof of a barn. Then they balanced a long board out of the loft window, and the condemned was out at the far end of it, ready for the drop, when a stranger busted in.

"Everybody thought he craved to pray, but that unknown humanitarian had a better notion than that. In less'n a minute he came inching out on that plank and there wasn't a dry eye in the crowd as he edged up behind the poor trembling wretch and slipped an anvil in the seat of his pants."

Cool, Smart, Comfortable

COOL is the word for Carrie when she wears one of these smart new frocks by Sew-Your-Own. No matter whether she's three or thirty, a June bride or a proud mama, Carrie will find what she needs for summer comfort here.

Left to Right.

The young frock with the interesting middle and sporty inverted pleat is one that's going in for extra credit at summer school. It has that advanced chic which readily distinguishes co-eds' clothes. If you're campus bound (or just bound for an ordinary vacation) be sure to have a couple of versions of this fashion first with you. Then you'll be set for that heavy summer schedule.

Lines for a Princess.

Second to none in the summer is this princess dress. As fit for golf as it is for dancing, you can see at a glance that this is the one dress you can't be even half-way happy without. Fresh in spirit, dainty in detail and becoming to all figures this simple-to-sew frock will introduce countless women to new chic this season. Come on, Milady, shake hands with Chic.

Tot's Tidbit.

Only when we're very young are we privileged to wear dresses as cute as this one. The most unaccustomed seamstress can make it with its half dozen pieces; the merest remnant will suffice for material. There is more than ordinary intrigue packed in the diminutive skirt that shows a couple of darling dimpled knees so lusciously sun tanned. Use it as a cool, cool top with panties as the ideal hot weather attire, or slip it on as an apron—either way it will be a fine little companion for mother's pet this summer.

That night, as usual, Deborah went into Grandmother's room to make sure that she was settled comfortably, and to kiss her good-night. Grandmother was sitting up in her big bed, her silvery hair brushed smooth and drawn back into a neat little braid.

"Deborah."

"Yes, Grandmother?"

"Do you not like these friends of Bryn's, my darling?"

Deborah looked up in surprise. "Why, yes. Yes, of course. I think they are lovely. Sally is sweet. She is like a talking doll. And she is very kind."

"And Madeline?"

"Nobody could help liking Madeline," Deborah replied. "She's charming, isn't she, Grandmother? I love to hear her talk. It's so slow and lazy. It's because she and Simon are from Texas, Sally says. And Madeline is beautiful. Don't you think she's beautiful, Grandmother?"

"Not as beautiful as you are, my child," Grandmother answered fondly. "But she is very attractive." She was silent again. Then, "If you like them, Deborah, and find them pleasant company, what is it that has been troubling you ever since they arrived?"

"Troubling me?" Deborah answered, startled. "But . . . I am not troubled."

"Oh, Deborah," Grandmother said reproachfully.

Deborah raised her eyes, and there was a deep, happy smile in them.

"I am happy, Grandmother darling," she said.

"And you love Bryn? He loves you, of that I am sure. But of your love for him . . . sometimes I am not so sure. You admire him? You think him strong and thoughtful and quick, and kind?"

"Yes, Grandmother."

"You respect him? You are proud of whatever he does?"

"Yes, Grandmother."

"And," she put her hand out gently and lifted Deborah's chin. "Why, you are blushing, child! Surely that ought to be sufficient answer to my next question, but I must have your words, Deborah. Forgive me. But you know your complete happiness means everything to me. Deborah, tell me; when you see him, and he smiles that twinkling smile of his, don't you want to go to him, and caress his cheek, as you are caressing mine, and put your hand on his hair, and touch his shoulder? Isn't that what you'd like to do, Deborah?"

Deborah caught her breath. Her eyes darkened. Her lips quivered faintly. And then, "Yes, Grandmother," she said.

"Of course," Grandmother said happily. "Well, then you love him. You couldn't help loving him. Go, my child. Kiss me good-night, and leave me. I shall rest, tonight. I am happy."

Out in the hall, safely away from the door, Deborah stood and put both her hands over her face. Her brain was whirling. There was a dreadful lump in her throat, and something ached in her breast. Alone in the darkness, she stood, trying to calm herself, trying to be cool and uncaring again.

A voice spoke to her. It was Bryn. He was in the hall beside her. He was whispering, so as not to disturb Grandmother.

"Deborah," he was saying anxiously, "Deborah, what has happened?"

Deborah did not answer. Instead, she dropped her hands and stared up through the shadows at his face. He drew a quick breath, then put his arms out and held her close to him. His coat was rough under her cheek.

"Deborah, sweetheart," he said brokenly, "what's happened to you? Why are you trembling?"

For only a second she lay there, and then she lifted her head and pulled herself away. "Don't touch me," she said in a furious whisper. "Oh, don't you dare to touch me!" and she flew down the stairs and out to the others, sitting talking in the welcome darkness of the veranda.

Deborah sat on the couch before the long balcony window in her own sitting room. The afternoon was very hot. Bryn and Tubby and Simon had gone following the brook, looking for a pool to swim in.

There was a knock at her door. Deborah ran quick fingers over her eyes. Her heart bumped. She scrambled from the couch, preparing to dash into her bedroom before calling out to Bryn that he might go through to his own room. It was not Bryn. Sally's voice floated plaintively through the keyhole. "Deborah! May we come in?"

"Oh," Deborah said limply, and then, "Yes, of course, Sally. Please do. And she tightened her dressing gown around her.

Sally, in floating black chiffon pyjamas and tiny black mules, came through the door, followed by Madeline in dull green. "Were you sleeping?" Sally inquired. "Curl yourself up again, Deborah. Everything about you is like the Sleeping Beauty herself," Sally said.

Deborah looked at Sally. "I think you're sweet, too, Sally," she said shyly.

Sally flew up from her chair, flung her arms around Deborah and kissed her. "That was darling," she said. "Wasn't that darling, Madeline?"

Madeline sighed. "Yes," she agreed. "But you don't need it. You've got Simon. You don't have to suffer in silence and alone, as I do."

Sally began to laugh. "You don't exactly go around languishing, you know, idiot," she said.

Madeline sighed. "Not outwardly, perhaps. But inwardly, I suffer."

"Piffle," Sally answered. She turned to Deborah. "Does she look as if she were suffering?"

"Not exactly," Deborah said faintly.

"She isn't, either. She knows perfectly well it's all a question of time. And, I must say, Madeline, it looks much more hopeful lately than it ever did. Doesn't it?"

Deborah couldn't stand it any longer. "Does she mean she's . . . in love . . . with somebody?" she asked faintly.

"Tubby," Sally answered. "Can you imagine it?"

"Tubby?"

"Tubby. Isn't it ridiculous?"

"I don't see anything ridiculous about it," Madeline objected. "He may not be what one would call a romantic figure, I admit. He is a number of pounds overweight, but he's very good-tempered. And his hair won't lie flat; but I always liked originality. And I like his dimple and I'm crazy about his lisp. I could listen to him forever, if only he'd say a few of the right things. Deborah, honestly now, don't you think Tubby's a dear?"

Deborah was still staring at her. Now she gave a deep sigh and sank back against the couch. "Yes," she said. "Yes. I think he's wonderful. I think he's marvelous. I think he's just as nice as he can be."

CHAPTER VIII

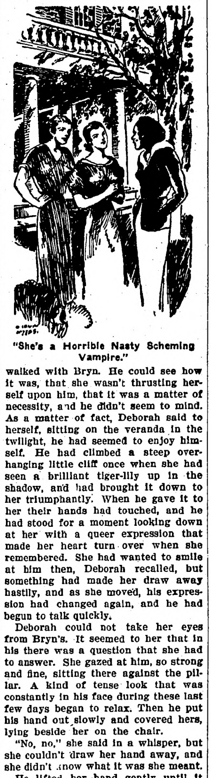
It had been a happy afternoon, the happiest afternoon, Deborah decided, that she had ever known. The four of them, Sally and Simon and she and Bryn, had gone for a walk in the pine woods up on the hill. At first she had walked beside Sally, but Sally had obviously wanted to be with Simon, and Deborah had dropped back and walked with Bryn. He could see how it was, that she wasn't thrusting herself upon him, that it was a matter of necessity, and he didn't seem to mind. As a matter of fact, Deborah said to herself, sitting on the veranda in the twilight, he had seemed to enjoy himself. He had climbed a steep overhanging little cliff once when she had seen a brilliant tiger-lily up in the shadow, and had brought it down to her triumphantly. When he gave it to her their hands had touched, and he had stood for a moment looking down at her with a queer expression that made her heart turn over when she remembered. She had wanted to smile at him then, Deborah recalled, but something had made her draw away hastily, and as she moved, his expression had changed again, and he had begun to talk quickly.



"She's a Horrible Nasty Scheming Vampire."

Deborah could not take her eyes from Bryn's. It seemed to her that in his there was a question that she had to answer. She gazed at him, so strong and fine, sitting there against the pillar. A kind of tense look that was constantly in his face during these last few days began to relax. Then he put his hand out slowly and covered hers, lying beside her on the chair.

"No, no," she said in a whisper, but she couldn't draw her hand away, and she didn't know what it was she meant.

He lifted her hand gently until it was against his lips; his eyes were still on hers, gentle, compelling. But she was afraid; she drew her hand away swiftly and sprang from her chair. "Isn't that . . . isn't that the car?" she said breathlessly.

It was. Madeline and Tubby had been to town, and when Madeline came up to the veranda Bryn inquired about mail.

"There was a letter for Tubby from Pilar," Madeline replied.

Sally stopped dead. She looked up at Madeline in horror. "From Pilar?" she repeated.

"Who is Pilar?" Deborah inquired.

Sally and Madeline looked at each other. Then they both coughed together. "Just a girl," Madeline said nonchalantly, but Sally at the same moment said, "She's a horrible nasty scheming vampire, that's what she is, and I hate her."

★★★By VIRGINIA VALE★★★

THE loyal motion picture fans of the country do not want any substitute for the late Jean Harlow. Letters, telegrams and phone calls of protest poured into the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studio when it was announced soon after her death that her unfinished picture "Saratoga" would be refilmed with a newcomer named Rita Johnson in her role.

In no uncertain terms the public demanded that Jean's last picture either be released in its unfinished state or kept from view. Decision on the matter is being postponed, but when the public takes such a whole-hearted stand on any question, you can be sure that the studio will not run the risk of offending them. "Saratoga" will probably never be seen.

All the time that Irene Hervey was under contract to M-G-M, the executives just couldn't see her when a good role in a big picture came up for casting. She married Allan Jones, her contract expired, and it looked as if she meant to retire from the screen. She was just waiting for the right part, though. Along came the enterprising Grand National company with a role for her in "The Girl Said No," audiences raved about her at the preview, and what company rushed to get her services then, do you suppose? None other than her old studio.

Lily Pons is very busy these days with her radio program and an extensive concert tour, to say nothing of her frenzied trips up to her home in Connecticut to see how the garden is doing, but she keeps in touch with the R-K-O studio every day to get reports on the plans for her next picture.

It is all of a year now since Jack Dempsey and his restaurant were shown in a motion picture, typifying the very center of New York sporting and night life, so M-G-M is going to remedy that omission right away. He and his headquarters will appear in "Big City" which stars Spencer Tracey and Luise Rainer. Jack won't go to Hollywood, though; his scenes will be made in a studio near New York.

The best picture of the week, and a frothy light extravaganza for a warm evening it is too, is "Woman Chases Man." Miriam Hopkins is the star and dear old Charles Winniger plays a giddy role delightfully. The picture is farce that verges on slapstick most of the time, and Joel McCrea plays the thankless role of the one fairly sensible human in the piece. It isn't, frankly, nearly so good a picture as Claudette Colbert's grand comedy "I Met Him in Paris"—but until that superb bit of entertainment comes your way, "Woman Chases Man" will keep you amused.

Miriam Hopkins

ODDS AND ENDS—Grace Moore postponed starting her next picture for two weeks so that her leading man, Melvyn Douglas, could go to the Salzburg Festival, where his wife is going to sing . . . Ann Sothern's sister, Bonnie Lake, has sold a song that she composed to Buddy Ebsen . . . That loud studio laugh you hear intermittently through Walter Winchell's Sunday night broadcast is W. C. Fields, his favorite visitor. Walter draws an audience that is an all-star cast . . . Hazel Glenn who sings nursery songs on the Dr. Dafoe broadcast has a fan letter that she wouldn't exchange for a diamond bracelet. The good doctor wrote her that the quints had listened to one of their broadcasts and expressed delight over the lady who sang . . . The make-up experts are bullying Stokowski now. After all his many years as an orchestra conductor, waving his tousled mane, he has been ordered to grease his hair because otherwise it doesn't look dignified . . . Deanna Durbin tried to console him by telling him it made him look like a juvenile . . . Since Carole Lombard is not available, Fred Astaire is now trying to get Loretta Young to play opposite him in his next picture.

Check 1937 Program Soon

It is anticipated that the work of checking performance for the 1937 Agriculture Conservation Program will be started in Marshall County in the near future. Word has been received from the State Committee that instructions will be given to farm reporters in the latter part of this month. With this in mind, letters have been sent to all operators and all owners of land in Marshall County according to the names listed on the listing sheets, enclosing a card which the operator or owner is to sign and return to the county office. This card requests the information as to whether or not an operator or owner intends to sign an application for payment under the 1937 Agricultural Conservation Program and requests an inspection of all farms in this county, to which he is entitled in 1937 to receive all or share of one or more crops produced there.

No farm will be inspected or measured unless the owner or the operator requests such inspection or measurement. It is requested that the owner or operator of land who intend to have their farms measured for the 1937 program fill out these cards as soon as we receive them and mail it to the county office. This card requires postage.

The attention of the farmers of Marshall County who intend to participate in the program this year is also directed to the provision that before plowing under a soil conserving crop, that the township committee men shoul sign a statement stating that there is a sufficient stand to be classified as soil conserving.

Mrs. J. Hagberg, Mrs. Jesse Sorum and children and Mrs. A. Hagen visited relatives at Fertile Wednesday.

Conservation Commissioner

Herman Wenzel of St. Paul assamed his new duties as state conservation commissioner on Thursday, July 1 with a promise "to make conservation in the state of Minnesota a living reality."

Wenzel resigned his position as commissioner of public utilities in St. Paul to assume the conservation commission post to which he was appointed by Governor Benson. Commissioner Wenzel made his resignation incumbent upon the appointment of a commissioner of Farmer-Labor sympathies to succeed him and recommended his chief deputy, William A. Parranto.

Parranto, who has long been active in Farmer-Labor circles, was immediately elected by the St. Paul City Council to the post of his former chief and has already taken over his new duties.

Commissioner Wenzel in a statement to The Minnesota Leader said: "I feel highly honored to have been appointed as state conservstion commissioner. I consider this will be very interesting work which is close to my heart. I believe that the law recently adopted by the legislature reorganizing the department and giving the commissioner widened power will make it possible to make conservation in the state of Minnesota a living reality. Because of my background and many years of experience in public office, I trust that I will measure up to the expectations of our honorable Governor Elmer A. Benson."

Commissioner Wenzel served on the St. Paul city council from 1920 to 1929 and from 1932 until he was now appointed conservation commissioner by Governor Benson.

A veteran in both the organized labor movement and in liberal politics, Commissioner Wenzel is well known to the Farmer-Labor movement. He served both as business agent of the barbers' union and as secretary of the Trades and Labor Assembly, St. Paul, before becoming national secretary-treasurer in 1929 of the International Journeymen Barbers' union with headquarters in Indianapolis.

Commissioner Wenzel's appointment was for six years at an annual salary of of $6,000.

It was understood that E. V. Willard, commissioner under the expiring board system, will be retained in the department as a technical advisor. Employment of department personnel will be under a merit system, announced Wenzel, with promotion depending upon examinations and proven ability.

Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Sorum attended the funeral of Mr. Sorum's brother Olaf at Hillsboro, N. Dak. Wednesday who was fatally injured in an automobile accident.

Mr. and Mrs. Ole C. Johnson and daughters Eleanor and Imogene of Moorhead arrived at the Otto Johnson home Sunday and stayed until Monday afternoon. They also visited around with other relatives while here.

What Irvin S. Cobb Thinks about

Comfort in Traveling.

LATELY, on a cross-country prowl, two of us invaded one of the remotest corners of the desert.

Irvin S. Cobb

Until our car broke down we crawled along some of the roughest backways in creation, then escaped on what by quaint irony was called an accommodation train over a sidespur of a prehistoric railway line.

When we hit concrete high roads and air-conditioned fliers, I caught myself saying our forefathers put up with plenty of misery in order to move about. And then I realized that what we had endured did not date back to former generations. So soon have we grown accustomed to luxury with speed we forget that most of America, fifteen years ago, lacked what we now accept as common traveling comfort.

Why, less than two decades ago, for my sins, I rode on a certain jerkwater railroad in the deep South. The last work done on its tracks was in 1864 by General Sherman—he tore 'em up.

I made the mistake of trying to shave while en route. When I got through, I looked like one of those German student duelists.

But, nowadays, even those who use homemade trailers seem almost happy at times.

Diplomatic Busybodies.

WHO'LL be the next member of our diplomatic corps to open his mouth and put his foot in it clear up to his hip-joint?

It has been nearly two months now since our ambassador to Germany had a bad dream and before nursie could quiet him was proclaiming that a certain billionaire was willing to put up one of his loose billions to buy a dictatorship for this country. He failed to furnish the name and address. Maybe they got left out of the nightmare.

Hardly had paregoric wooed this distinguished sufferer back to hush-a-bye-land when our new representative in the Philippines began demanding that, when it came to drinking official toasts, his name must come higher up on the wine list or he wouldn't be responsible for the consequences. However, the excitement subsided before he could summon the Pacific fleet to bombard Manila. There's a rumor that Washington sent him word he needn't worry about being appropriately saluted—there'd be a nationwide Bronx cheer awaiting him on his return home.

Since then there's been a lull and the American public is getting impatient. We do so love a free show and especially when it's amateur night.

Hard-Bitten Females.

TOURING about over certain Western states where open gambling either is by law permitted, or by custom winked at, I noticed this:

Generally speaking, the feminine patrons are the steadiest drinkers, the most persistent gamesters, the most reckless betters of all. And frequently their manners are the rudest and their faces the grimmest—determined seemingly to disavow the theory that their sex is the gentler sex.

On the other hand, the men patrons—descended, many of them, from old gun fighters, old prospectors, old path-finders—grow increasingly docile and subdued, absorbing less than their share of the hard liquor—maybe because they fear there won't be enough left for mama and the girls—and risking their dimes where the gallant ladies plunge with dollars.

Sometimes a fellow, watching the modern processional from the protection of the sidelines, gets to longing for the bygone days when, as Kipling might have put it and, in fact, almost did, a woman was only a woman, but a good cigar was ten cents.

These Candid Cameras.

ONCE a citizen had a right to object to the publication of a flashlight view showing him beating his wife or exhibiting his appendicitis scar or taking out his uppers or something.

That was before they began printing magazines for those who've abandoned the old-fashioned habit of reading and writing. And it's doing glamorous movie queens no real good when these betraying close-ups prove that maybe the glamor is only paint-deep.

Thus the last strongholds of our one-time personal liberty crumble. I used to think a passport picture was about the frankest thing we had in the line of intimate likenesses, excepting, of course, the x-ray.

But this candid camera business which catches you unawares—and often without your underwears either—is the most fiendish attack of all against our practically vanished privacy.

Arch-Foe of Deception

Not long ago a foreign army officer, who had a fancy pair of socks tattooed on his feet and ankles, was shot in the right foot during a skirmish with African natives. When he arrived home some months later, his tattooist wanted to cover the white scar with more "sock." But the colonel would not hear of it. He insisted upon having this apparent "tear in his hose" mended with a tattooed patch.—Collier's Weekly.

"I wouldn't like her," Deborah said positively, and put her chin up.

Simon raised himself on his arms and called down to them through the twilight. "Hi," he said, "what about the other mail?"

"There's more. Tubby's got it," Madeline explained. "In his pocket. He's coming across the bridge now. I can hear his delicate footsteps."

Tubby came around the end of the house. His face was very red. He was not smiling. He was almost frowning. Madeline glanced significantly at Sally, who compressed her lips and stared at her brother. Tubby stopped beside the steps, only a few feet in front of Deborah, so that as he took the letters from his inner coat pocket she could easily see them. Idly, as he called out a name, she glanced at each envelope. . . .

"Simon," he announced. "Nothing for you, Bryn. Sally, two for you. Nothing at all for you, Deborah, and Madeline had hers in town. Another for you, Simon. And here," he said gallantly, "is a letter for you, Mrs. Larned. It looks very interesting. Written in a bold, dashing, masculine hand, with a very thick enclosure, it carries with it a hint of mystery."

He had been holding out Simon's last letter, waiting for him to take it, as he spoke; so that Deborah had had a moment to take in the meaning of the handwriting on Grandmother's envelope. It was familiar . . . it was dreadfully familiar. A cold icy hand clutched at her heart, and she felt herself turning faint again, as she had on that dreadful afternoon on the wharf . . . she put out her hand involuntarily for the letter and made a queer little strangled sound. Grandmother was smiling at Tubby's nonsense, waiting for her letter. She did not notice Deborah's face. But Bryn did. He stood up sharply. He saw Deborah's whiteness. He put out his hand and took the letter from Tubby's. He glanced at it. He looked over at Grandmother.

"He could be arrested for this," he told Grandmother grimly. "Interfering with government mails. Bribery and corruption. The crooked game of politics."

Tubby stared at him, his mouth open.

"Shut up," Bryn told him, although he had not spoken. "Not a word out of you, you iniquitous scoundrel. Trying to defraud me of my rightful property, indeed. This is my letter. I've been looking for it for weeks, longing for it, not being able to sleep nights. It's a detailed and careful account of the construction of the arch of the bridge over the . . . over the Volga river in Russia. New departure in engineering. I'm sure Grandmother would enjoy reading it, wouldn't she? I suppose this is your idea of a joke. Grandmother, I apologize. I apologize for having such a stupid and crass insect for a friend."

"I was . . . I was just kidding him, Grandmother," Tubby muttered. "It isn't your letter after all. It's his."

"Oh, dear," Grandmother murmured, laughing. "You two keep me in a perfect state of bewilderment. I don't suppose I shall ever be able to tell whether you are talking sense or nonsense."

"Tubby's fault," Bryn answered, thrusting the letter into his pocket. "Tubby's an awful ass, Grandmother. You have no idea."

"He's all right," Simon explained. "He smells the dinner. We're going to have duck and watercress."

* * * * * * *

Deborah stood tensely before the window, hands locked together, waiting for Bryn to come downstairs after taking Grandmother up to bed. Tonight of all nights, Grandmother had stayed up half an hour later, and all the time Stuart Graham's letter, filled with all sorts of unimaginable possibilities, lay unopened in Bryn's pocket.

Bryn came in quickly and shut the door behind him. Deborah broke away from Madeline's arm. She took a step toward him. She put her hand out mutely.

His eyes were upon her face. He compressed his lips. His hand went to an inner pocket, and then he said, quietly, "Just a minute, Deborah. Are you perfectly sure that you're not mistaken?"

"Oh, yes, yes!" she cried, and the air in the room was suddenly electric, as if someone had turned a switch.

Bryn drew the letter out. He looked at it. "I don't like opening other people's letters," he said slowly. "It might be only an extraordinary resemblance, Deborah. You've had it on your mind, you know."

She took it from his hand and looked at it. The very touch of the envelope made her shiver. "I'm sure," she said.

Bryn ripped the end off the envelope, and drew out the folded pages. He glanced at Deborah's face. "Shall I read it, Deborah?"

She nodded mutely. Bryn straightened the pages and began.

My Dear Mrs. Larned:

Naturally I cannot imagine just what Deborah has told you regarding the failure of our plans in San Francisco, but I am afraid she may not have shown me in a kindly light. For the past month I have been most anxious to write and explain the situation to you but circumstances beyond my control have made it impossible for me to do so.

I suppose it is useless for me to expect that after hearing Deborah's story, whatever it was, and after this long silence on my part, you can have any sympathy for me and the position in which I now find myself. But I must ask you to accept the explanation which I have made in regard to my silence in view of the fact that I am an enlisted man in the navy, completely under the arbitrary control of any whim of my superior officers and subject to the restrictions of anyone on board a ship out of touch with land and such conveniences as mails.

And now for Deborah's story. What she has told you, I do not know, as I mentioned before, but looking at the matter from her point of view, and trying to be just and generous, I am forced to the conclusion that whatever she told you must have been both exaggerated and biased. I was very much disturbed over the whole business, and spent all my shore leave when in San Francisco trying to find her and explain, but of course it was an impossibility to do so.

I don't know whether it has occurred to you, Mrs. Larned, to think how completely ignorant of the world and its ways Deborah is. I was prepared, of course, for a certain amount of unsophistication, knowing to some extent how she had been brought up, but I did not realize that any girl could possibly, in this day and age, have remained so entirely unaware of all trends of modern times. I have, of course, every respect for the manners and customs of the time of my parents and grandparents, as I am sure you will know, but having lived a normal life, I have naturally progressed with others of my generation to an acceptance of the manners and customs of the present day. Deborah has not. This was obvious to me on our first meeting, from her appearance and from her absolute inability to meet an ordinary situation with calmness. I grant you that it must have been difficult for her to come down alone to meet me, and perhaps if I had known just how difficult, if I had realized Deborah's state of mind and lack of understanding of modern life as it is lived, I should have been able to overcome her objections and explain away her difficulties. As it was, I could do nothing. Deborah was in a state of frantic terror before I had a chance to see her at all, and by the time I reached her, she was beyond ordinary reasoning. I am bitterly sorry for it all, and reproach myself that I didn't guess what to expect, and so prepare the situation accordingly. It seems to me that I might have been warned, Mrs. Larned, of what I should have been expected to encounter.

Even as it was, I might have been able to overcome Deborah's childish terrors had it not been for the absolutely unwarranted interference of some unknown person in the lawyer's office. Deborah will probably have mentioned him to you, and made some satisfactory explanation as to her conduct. I was certainly pained and astonished to discover that she had so little good taste as to be willing to take up at once with a stranger. The fact of Mr. Holworthy's presence was all that reconciled me to leaving her, angry as I was. I may add that the time will come when I will make it my business to discover this stranger's identity and settle with him for the insult he offered me.

However, this is all beside the point. The really serious question between us is that of your husband's will and Deborah's estate. With my copy of the will I have consulted a lawyer, and it is his opinion that under certain circumstances we might make a fight for the estate that would ultimately prove successful. The circumstances are, of course, a marriage between Deborah and myself which would take place with your approval. This, unless there are aspects of the case with which I am not familiar, seems to me to be, from your point of view, an absolute necessity. I have examined the list of securities named in the will as the source of your present income, and, as you doubtless know only too well, most of them are completely worthless. How you have managed for the past few years is a mystery, and may possibly explain Deborah's appearance and obvious lack of advantages. In any case, no mitigation of your circumstances may arrive except through me, and although I was deeply hurt . . . ["I think I broke his jaw," Bryn said happily] . . . deeply hurt and mortified, not to mention my disappointment and the general disruption of my plans, I am willing, for the sake of the friendship which has existed between our families for so long, I am willing to do what I can to make things easier for you.

I have obtained from my commander an extended leave of absence, and I am leaving San Diego tomorrow morning to drive up the coast to your home. You may expect me at the latest by Wednesday noon, unless I meet with unexpected difficulties along the road.

Yours sincerely,
STUART OGDEN GRAHAM.

Bryn folded the letter. Tubby thrust his hands into his pockets and began to saunter up and down the room, whistling beneath his breath. Simon put his hands behind his head and stared at the ceiling. Sally was trembling with excitement and clutching Simon's knee, and Madeline walked slowly across and dropped down beside Deborah.

"Well," Tubby said, buttoning his coat and squaring his shoulders, "if he's got to be kept away, he's got to be kept away, and that's all there is to it. After all, there are four men of us here, and Burch. Five against one. That ought to be easy."

"You talk as if we were going to fight about it," Sally said tearfully. "With guns. It isn't half as blundering or easy as that."

"Not half," Madeline echoed. "This is going to be strategy. And strategy, Tubby, never was your strong point, if you will remember." She smiled up at him, a warm tender smile that made him blink and look as if he saw her for the first time. "But you're a darling, Tubby, and you're loyal and strong, and worth a lot more than one of those slippery strategists."

"Well, gee," Tubby said, bewildered, and sat down.

"We might bar the road," Tubby said hopefully. "Put a gate across it, you know."

"Somebody would have to guard it, of course," Bryn said thoughtfully. "And he'd want to know why he couldn't pass. If I stayed there myself and had a talk with him, explaining the situation, it might help; but I wouldn't trust him not to pretend to go away and then to sneak back when we weren't watching just to see what harm he could do."

Judge Often Handed Down Humor "From the Bench"

Late Lord Darling Livened Drab Scenes With Pleasantries.

Many are the stories told about Lord Darling—better known as Mr. Justice Darling, "England's wittiest judge"—who died recently. He was a poet, with several published volumes to his credit. But it was his humor "from the bench" that made his name almost a household word.

On one occasion, a talesman claimed exemption from jury duty on the ground that he was completely deaf in the left ear.

"You can go," said Judge Darling, gravely; "I cannot have anyone in the jury box who cannot hear both sides."

A lawyer who had the misfortune never to have acquired the ability to use the letter "h" (relates Silvain Mayer in his "legal" reminiscences), was engaged before Justice Darling in a case which had relation to a horse. For some time the lawyer kept referring to the animal as "an orse." After a while, Darling looked down and said:

"Was the animal a large horse or a little one?"

"Oh, a little one."

"Then," said the judge, "may we, for the remainder of the case, call it a pony?"

In another case before Justice Darling—in which a Cockney caterer was suing to recover the cost of a picnic luncheon he had provided for a large number of people—the plaintiff waxed highly indignant, under cross-examination, when it was suggested that his sandwiches were mostly "bread and bread," with the ham conspicuous only by its absence.

"I h'am amazed; I h'am surprised; I h'am—," he sputtered.

"That will do!" interrupted Darling. "I suggest that had you been more generous with your hams on another occasion and a little less liberal with them here, you might not have found yourself in this situation!"—Kansas City Star.

Identifying Houses

Before houses were numbered, London's business streets were lined on both sides by a succession of gay signboards exhibiting an almost infinite variety of blue boars, black swans, red lions, flying pigs and the like. Even with these signs it was often hard to find one's destination, for the signs were often so badly painted that it would have puzzled a naturalist to make out the animal meant.

Think It Over

BY THE street of Bye-and-Bye one arrives at the house of Never.—German proverb.

People who have half an hour to spare usually spend it with somebody who hasn't.

Dignity is one thing that can't be preserved in alcohol.

Epitaph: He walked on the suicide of the road.

Many have made up their minds what they are going to do if temptation comes their way. They are going to fall.

When one is unimportant, he can attract attention in many noisy ways.

Mongols! Madam, Barked Sir Howorth

Sir Henry Howorth was taken aback one day when introduced to a gushing lady who declared that she was so charmed to meet him because she wished to talk to him about her little dog.

"But I know nothing about dogs," he protested.

"Oh, how can you say so," she said, "when you have written books about them?"

"Never, madam, never!"

"But surely," she persisted, "you have written a history of the mongrels?"

"Mongols, madam, mongols!" he barked. "Not mongrels."—London Answers.

Take it easy, drink more water add salt to your diet, bulletin advises.

When the thermometer hovers close to 90, it's time to organize your activities on a hot weather basis, in the opinion of the Minnesota State Medical Association's Committee on Public Health Education.

There are hot weather tricks that will increase the comfort and health of workers as well as stay-at-homes.

Dressing for the weather in light colored, cool, loose clothing is essential for all and a special hot weather program of taking it as easy as possible.

For those who must exert themselves and who perspire freely, extra water and fruit juices should be taken and also a teaspoonful of salt daily should be added to the diet.

To Speak Here July 20

Miss Norma C. Brown

Miss Brown, though still a young woman, has more than fifteen years of national experience in this cause to her credit. Before she was twenty-three years of age she had been in every capital city and every important center of the United States.

In the continental campaign of the Allied Forces five years ago she was the one woman speaker on the regular staff. In that capacity she was heard in company with such men as Col. Raymond Robins, Dr. Daniel A. Poling, the Hon Oliver W. Stewart and others.

Miss Brown came out of a pastorate into this work. While her early training and experience were that of a minister and while her sympathies remain unchanged, it is often remarked that, measured by her grasp of governmental and legal problems and the logic and power of analysis which characterizes her addresses, she talks like a lawyer.

Everywhere her hearers contrast her with the type some have grown to expect in reform work. They call her "delightfully different". Any community favored with a visit by this unusual woman should make the most of the opportunity her coming affords.

Miss Brown appears in Holt, July 20 in the Nazareth Lutheran church at 8 p. m., in behalf of the work in Minnesota sponsored by the Minnesota Temperance Movement, Inc.

Institutes Merit System

Institution of a merit system and competitive examinations for all employees of the Department of Conservation other than division directors and their deputies was announced last week by Herman C. Wenzel, who assumed his new duties as commissioner of conservation July 1st.

Commissioner Wenzel also announced that E. V. Willard, former commisioner, would be retained as Chief engineer of the department "to coordinate the engineering functions of the various divisions." Charles MacFarlane, deputy commissioner under Mr. Willard, has tendered his resignation.

"Conservation is a big subject and an exceedingly important important one," Mr. Wenzel said. "We cannot hope to accomplish its ends without a long-time program."

"As head of the department, I intend to work for a six-year program that will result in better hunting and fishing for the average sportsman, conservation of our forests, protection of our valuable mineral resources, and improvement of state parks and other recreational facilities."

"I will naturally welcome the close cooperation of all interested citizens and conservation organizations."

Mr. Wenzel stated that to determin the fitness of present employees of the department and those seeking employment would begin as soon as necessary arrangements have been completed. "In accordance with the law creating this office, merit will be the sole basis for the employment in the department of conservation," the commisioner said.

Mr. and Mrs. Oscar L. Johnson and daughter returned home last week from California where they spent several months.

Don't Neglect Them!

Nature designed the kidneys to do a marvelous job. Their task is to keep the flowing blood stream free of an excess of toxic impurities. The act of living—life itself—is constantly producing waste matter the kidneys must remove from the blood if good health is to endure.

When the kidneys fail to function as Nature intended, there is retention of waste that may cause body-wide distress. One may suffer nagging backache, persistent headache, attacks of dizziness, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes—feel tired, nervous, all worn out.

Frequent, scanty or burning passages may be further evidence of kidney or bladder disturbance.

The recognized and proper treatment is a diuretic medicine to help the kidneys get rid of excess poisonous body waste. Use Doan's Pills. They have had more than forty years of public approval. Are endorsed the country over. Insist on Doan's. Sold at all drug stores.

"What you're hinting at," Tubby said boldly, "is that we've got to capture him, then, and dispose of him finally, once and for all. Murder, I suppose. Of course, it doesn't matter. Any of use would gladly oblige, but it would be nice to know your plans first. We might draw lots to see who would stab him. That's the fairest way, really."

"What we've got to do," Bryn said, disregarding Tubby, "is to let him come here, all unsuspecting; but we've got to know ahead of time. We've got to let him come here to make sure of getting our hands on him. Inside our own gates we can be sure of being undisturbed."

"I know," Deborah said suddenly. "Joe."

"Joe?"

She turned to Bryn. "Yes. Joe is our nearest neighbor's boy. Before you came," she explained, "when Joe's father brought us any mail from town, or anything we didn't expect, he used to sound a call on a horn he has there. A kind of hunting bugle he made himself out of a deer-horn. He's terribly proud of it, and he loves to do it. He's taught Joe, too, and you can hear it for miles. Why not . . . why not have Joe watch the road? Nothing could get past him, especially if you told him enough to make him see how serious it was. And the minute he sees the car he can sound the horn, and we'll have almost fifteen minutes to prepare."

"Well, there you are," Bryn said, smiling down at Deborah. "We're all right, aren't we?"

"We're . . . all right," Deborah said, and her lashes dropped to her cheek at the look in his eyes.

Bryn, very boldly, had proposed a starlit walk to Deborah, and to his surprise she had made no excuse. She had been pale and weary after the excitement of the letter, and now that some solution had been reached, she put it behind her with relief. She walked along beside him in silence, holding to her face, from time to time, the sheaf of clove-pinks he had gathered for her beside the walk. Their perfume, heady and sweet, drifted up to him.

"It's a beautiful night," he said steadily.

"Yes."

"What's it like up here in the winter time, Deborah?"

"Oh," she replied, "it's beautiful. I love it. We get ever so much snow, just here in the valley, but it doesn't last long. When it comes, it makes me think of Lorna Doone. Do you remember? When the snow was so heavy and thick, and they were all winter-bound?"

"What do you do with yourself when you are snow-bound?"

"There was always plenty to do. Mending, you know, and sewing, and keeping the house in order."

"But in the evenings?"

She glanced up at him. "Sometimes it is a little dull," she said. "But Joe's father brought us a load of logs each fall, and we would put one on the fire, Gary and I, and sit beside it reading. Or playing chess."

"It sound's very pleasant," Bryn said. "We'll get a radio this winter, shall we? And how about a kitten or two? A hearth isn't really complete without a kitten."

She murmured something under her breath. Bryn bent toward her. "I beg your pardon?"

"I said," she replied, lifting her voice, "I said, you would probably be bored. The road will be impassable as soon as the rains set in. You will find it very dull, shut away from the world for so long."

"No," he said. "I'd be looking at you."

She caught her breath. "You'd . . . you'd get tired of that."

"I'd never get tired of looking at you. Don't you know how beautiful you are, Deborah? You're the prettiest thing in the world."

"Oh, no. No, I'm not."

She bent her head and lifted the pinks to her lips. She held them there, silent.

"Deborah."

"Yes?"

"Do you . . . like me at all?"

She did not answer. Bryn could hear his own heart pounding. He waited.

She stirred. "You have been more than kind to me," she said, "and to Grandmother, too. I am very grateful." She put her hands beside her on the wall and jumped lightly down. "I think we ought to go in," she said quickly.

She did not speak on the way back to the house, except to murmur "Thank you" as he held the door. Once inside she went directly up the stairs, quickly, as if she wanted to get away from him.

For a long time Bryn stood at t foot of the stairs, thinking, wonder remembering. Then, slowly, he on up, and down to Tubby's roo

Bryn shut the door behind hi sat down uninvited. He looked at Tubby. "You do a lot of thinking these days," he said commiseratingly. "Must be hard on you."

"Huh," Tubby retorted, meeting his gaze, "you don't look any too peaceful yourself. And yet, here am I, doing at least half your thinking for you, and d——n' near all the worrying. Lord, you're slow, Bryn. I never saw anything like it. I suppose you haven't told her yet how you feel about her. have you? Using the correct technique?"

"What do you mean?"

"Well, one of the first rules is for a gentleman to confess his tender passion first. I suppose you had sense enough to do that?"

Bryn drew a deep breath. "I don't know. I can't remember. I don't think so. What I wanted was to find out how she felt. I know how I feel."

"There you go, old dunderhead. She doesn't know how you feel, does she? That is, you couldn't expect her to be any more sensible than you, under the circumstances, and you're as blind as an owl. So you just asked the girl where she stood and omitted to mention your own state of affections first? Bright boy. Women love that kind of thing. It gives them so much ground to stand on."

Bryn gazed at him dazedly. Tubby groaned. He reached over to the table beside him and lifted Pilar's letter, open, its words leaping out from the page. "Read that," he commanded. "If anything can sober you up, this will."

"I don't want to read it. It hasn't anything to do with me."

"That's just what you'd like to think. Let me tell you, my son, it's got everything to do with you. It may be addressed to me, but if I hadn't been here with you, I'd never have seen it. She knows darn well I'll pass the word on to you."

"What word?"

"Take it. Read it."

Bryn took it, and sighed, but settled down to it.

> My Dear Tubby:
> I do hope you are having a pleasant visit away up there in the mountains. I must say I was completely taken by surprise to hear that you had gone, and without telling anyone your address! But Bryn naturally would not care to have the world know the location of his idyllic retreat. Isn't it romantic? I think it is too thrilling, and together with every one else, I can scarcely wait to meet his bride. I hear she is very beautiful and completely charming, and I am so glad for Bryn. Do give him my kindest regards, and give Deborah my love.
> Affectionately,
> PILAR.

Bryn looked up. "How does she know Deborah's name? How does she know you're here with us?"

"I'll bet a nickel she searched the records of the license bureau for the answer to your first question. And for the other, Sally and Simon left a forwarding address. Pilar would get what she wanted or die in the attempt."

"Well, why shouldn't she?" Bryn demanded. "She should have been told, as far as that goes. I thought you would tell her something to satisfy her. She's one of the gang isn't she, and, after all, we did go around together pretty steadily, Tubby. If she's upset, I don't blame her much. It would have been only common courtesy on my part to write and tell her the whole story, but it was too damned awkward. I tried."

"And the reason it was awkward," Tubby said evenly, "was because she wasn't just one of the gang, and you knew perfectly well that she expected to marry you in the end. Didn't you?"

"I didn't ask her to."

"Don't quibble."

"I never told her I was in love with her. I wasn't in love with her. I've never kissed Pilar in my life." He looked down at the note. "It's a very kind note, under the circumstances," he said. "She might perfectly well have written it to me. I don't see why she didn't."

"That note," Tubby said deliberately, "is about as innocent and kind as a stick of dynamite with a fuse burning."

"Oh, don't be a fool, Tubby. What's got into you, anyway? You used to like her. You said she was a good sport, and a lot of other things. You and she were great pals."

"Mhm," Tubby agreed. "So we were. So we were. But why? That's what I found out when you pulled your little stunt. She didn't care two pins about me. The only reason she ever spread herself about me was because she thought it might make it easier for her to get you. See? And that night when I went to tell her that you were married, I caught her off her guard. Never again. I wouldn't go near her with a suit of boilerplate on."

Bryn folded the note and put it back on the table.

"And now," Tubby said, watching him, "she knows where you are."

"And what of it?"

"Nothing. Nothing at all. Go on mooning, old hophead."

Bryn took out his case and lit a cigarette.

"Say, Bryn," Tubby said at last, "did you hear what Madeline said to me tonight?"

"What did she say?"

"Well, nothing much," Tubby answered, embarrassed. "It was the way she said it. You know, Madeline's a darn nice girl. I never really thought much about it before, sort of took her for granted, you know. But she's a peach."

Bryn got up leisurely and went to the door. He opened it. Bryn moved across the hall and tapped at Madeline's door. Tubby sat up, stiff with horror.

"Madeline," Bryn called through the yhole.

Mhm?"

Madeline, Tubby says he likes you."

h," Madeline said, and obviously p in bed. "How much?" she in after a moment.

what Irvin S. Cobb thinks about:

Seeking Contentment.

SANTA MONICA, CALIF.—Out in the desert country I met kindly, hospitable folk bravely making the best of things on remote, small homesteads.

On little far-away ranches, on reservation trading posts, they are educating their children by resolute self-sacrifice; keeping in touch with the world through radio, through books and magazines and newspapers; and almost invariably content with their lives and proud of their struggles and living comfortably — yes, and happily—within their means, however meager.

Irvin S. Cobb

Then I come back to crowded cities where wealth seems only to make the inmates dissatisfied because somebody with greater wealth puts on a gaudier show of ostentation and extravagance. And I see the man who feverishly is striving after riches so that when he breaks down he may afford the most expensive nerve specialist. And the spoiled woman who was born with a silver spoon in her mouth, but judging by her expression the spoon must have been full of castor oil—and the flavor lasts. And the poor little rich children who have everything now and so will have nothing—except maybe dollars—when they grow up.

Curious, isn't it, that so little buys such a lot for some people and such a lot buys so little for the others?

The Return of Prosperity.

I CAN'T help gloating over what appeared in this space when I predicted that the temperamental and fickle bird of passage known as prosperity was winging its way back. Because the Better Business bureau reports that sellers of no-good stocks are showing increased activity.

Moreover, I hear that for the first time in years practically all the veteran bunco-steers are off relief. The lean times when the locusts of depression gnawed away our substance must indeed be over if the customers begin to nibble more freely at the same dependable old baits.

So, as he thumbs his copy of the sucker list against the morrow's campaign, I seem to hear Mr. Henry J. Slickguy (late of Leavenworth but now opening offices in the Wall street district) murmuring to himself:

"Happy days are here again! Drouth may kill the corn, Rust rots the wheat. Boll weevils destroy the cotton. But, thanks be, there's one crop in America which never fails!"

Have you a little gold brick in your home, dear reader? Well, don't worry, nobody's going to be slighted. Ere long you'll get your chance to invest in one.

Making Mental Slips.

THE most incredible thing has come to pass. Here I go along, year after year, building up a reputation for invariably being right, the same as George Bernard Shaw and Mme. Secretary Perkins. Then—bango!—I make one little slip and the trusting reader is shocked from pit to dome.

The other day I suggested taxing salaries of governmental employees. Now from all sides I'm told federal employees are subject to income taxes; only the vast majority of them, and probably the hardest-worked ones, draw such small wages that they owe Uncle Sam nothing when March 15 rolls around.

So far as I recall, this is the second time in my life I've been wrong. I can't cite what the other instance was—some very trifling matter, no doubt—but it must have occurred because I remember the nation-wide excitement which ensued, with people going around in a daze muttering: "Can it be possible?"

I now admit that early error and the recent one, too, and humbly beg pardon of my devoted public—all eight of them. It'll never happen again.

Conquered Champions.

IT HAS been brought to the attention of Mr. James J. Braddock that something happened to him a while back. Probably, by now, he has quit wondering whether many others were caught in the earthquake, but is reported to be still saying "Ouch!" at intervals.

And now, as is customary, his backers will insist he demand a return engagement—or disaster—with the Brown Bomber. But if I were Mr. Braddock—game though he be—I think I'd pattern my reply on the example of the gentleman who was knocked galley-west by a hit-and-run motorist.

As the dazed pedestrian was trying feebly to ascertain whether he was all in one piece, a kind-hearted citizen hurried up.

"Have an accident?" he inquired, brightly.

"No, thank you," said the victim; "just had one."

Fashions at Vacationland

HURRAY for dear old Johnnie Two-Weeks! He's recently given the nod to these three sweet young laborers and now they're off reaping the rewards. Yes, they're vacationing — and how! But, of course, Sew-Your-Own had them dressed right up to the hilt. There was a luscious array of sports togs, including a trig sun 'n' fun suit, all occasion dresses, and charmingly young informal dinner frocks, and — well, just about everything a girl could wear.

Chic in Chiffon.

Miss M, picturesque blonde, above, left, knows what glamour is and how to have it. That's why she chose this softly feminine frock with its swirling skirt and delicately slim waist. You should see her of an evening in the outdoor terrace. She's a picture in black gossamer chiffon trimmed with white satin. And to think, she made it all herself!

Cunning in Cotton.

Miss B, above, center, and center of attraction at the Surf club, has everything under perfect control as she strolls along the boardwalk. With not a care in her pretty head, and lots of streamlining in her natty little sports dress, she walks with confidence and pride. She has a clever way of achieving variety by switching scarfs and belts. In fact, she's so clever she made this little number, button holes and all, in one day without a hitch.

Cool for Sports.

Miss Y, the sports enthusiast at the right, says that her three piece ensemble is so very, very and practical she wears it almost to the exclusion of her other frocks. Her idea is to soak up as much sunshine as possible, and that's pretty easy to do when she wears the halter and shorts sans dress. Take a tip from Miss Y. Make your version of this ensemble in duplicate for all summer wear. Have one in seersucker, the other in acetate.

The Patterns.

Pattern 1241 is for sizes 14 to 20 (32 to 44 bust). Size 16 requires 4⅝ yards of 39 inch material plus 1½ yards of ribbon, and 3 yards of trimming.

Pattern 1316 is designed for sizes 12 to 20 (30 to 38 bust). Size 14 requires 4 yards of 39 inch material.

Pattern 1335 is designed for sizes 12 to 20 (30 to 38 bust). Size 14 requires 4¾ yards of 39 inch material for the dress and shorts, and 1 yard for the topper. The dress alone requires 3⅜ yards.

Idea for Tunnels

Ancient Egyptians, observing streams enter one side of a hill and come out the other, got the idea for tunnels. They built them into tombs. Builders after them bored tunnels to carry or drain water. One people, the Babylonians, more daring than the rest, tunneled beneath the Euphrates river. Thus began the story, according to a correspondent in the Washington Post, of the most fascinating and dangerous of all tunneling operations, subaqueous—underwater.

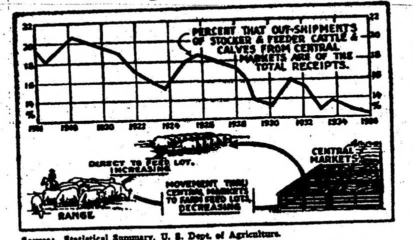
Are More Stockers and Feeders Going Direct to Feed Lots?



Source: Statistical Summary, U. S. Dept. of Agriculture.

The zig-zag downward course of the graph above reveals an interesting development in the marketing of stocker and feeder cattle and calves. It shows that during the last 12 years there has apparently been a gradual reduction in the percentage of these animals shipped back to the country from central markets. They are reaching the farms and feed lots from some source and the increase in the direct movement from range to feed lot in recent years is undoubtedly due to better transportation facilities, better organization and knowledge of values on the part of cattle feeders, the very large increase in auction sales and sales facilities, also contract feeding.

While total market receipts of cattle and calves have been on the decline, the decline in out-shipments of stockers and feeders has been proportionately greater. This is shown here in graphic form, through the percentages of outbound shipments from central markets, which obviously are smaller than in 1922. Exact figures on the direct movement of stockers and feeders from range to feed lots are not available for comparative purposes.

The Safety Man

Last week. I said something about the action of the pedestrian. Now I am in the position of a pedestrian watching the automobile driver.

Just stand on any street intersection, or at any crossroad, or along the country road and note the actions of some of these crazy automobile drivers. They think they have exclusive rights to the highway and that all other automobile drivers and pedestrians have absolutely no right at all.

Of course, the automobile drivers has certain rights prescribed by law, but to violate all acts of decency by excessive speed, by cutting in and out, and by endangering the lives of pedestrians and other automobile drivers, is not anybody's right.

The right to live is more sacred than the right to drive.

Mud Lake is beginning to look like a crossword puzzle from all the ditches and dikes that are being made out there with the huge Drag Line dredges that McGarry Bros., who have the job, have working there.

Friends of Mr. and Mrs. Ben Dokken of Minneapolis, formerly of this city, will be interested to hear that Adrian Dokken, son of Mr. and Mrs. Dokken, was valedictorian of the graduating class of Luther college, Decorah, Iowa, this year, and has accepted a position as assistant instuctor of chemistry at the University of Wisconsin. He was a member of Luther college tennis team.

Joint Gathering With Old Settlers' Association to be Held at Riverside Farm

BABCOCK—McCLEANAN ARE SPEAKERS FOR DAY

All Communities of Marshall County Will Be Represented On Unusual Program

The annual summer gathering of the Marshall County Historical Society will be held at Riverside Farm at the southern outskirts of the Village of Stephen, on Sunday, July 25. The event this year will be a joint gathering with the Old Setlers' Association of Marshall and Kittson counties, officers and directors of the two groups having arranged for the combined picnic at a meeting held in Stephen last fall.

A nationalistic program will be an outstanding feature of the day, with virtually every community of Marshall county contributing one or more numbers to be presented from the outdoor platform at the picnic locale.

Speakers for the day will be W. M. Babcock, Curator of the Museum and Archaeologist of the Minnesota Historical Society, and P. A. McClernan, former Stephen attorney now located at Grand Forks. Mr. Babcock's subject will be "Highways and History," while Mr. McClernan will bring to his listeners an outline of the early history of the region with special reference to "Tamarac Mack,' first white settler in Marshall county who homesteaded in the township of Tamarac in 1871.

The Riverside Farm picnic grounds are located only a short distance from the original Tamarac Mack homestead, and many picnic visitors are expected to make the short side trip to the old homestead to view a new stone marker which is now being placed on the site by the Marshall County Historical Society, A son of Tamarac Mack, now living in Grand Forks, is expected to be present at the program.

The program committee, composed of Supt. A. C. Huselid, Mrs. Nellie Skarnes and Mrs. H. C. Swanson, all of Stephen, met Tuesday afternoon and reported a fine response from the various communities of the county which have been called upon for brief program numbers. The committee has announced the following tentative selections for the day's program, which will get under way at 2 P. M. with a medley of American airs played by the Stephen high school band:

Cornish number by an instrumental ensemble, Alvarado.
French number, vocal solo, Argyle
Finnish number, by Middle River community.
Polish number, by Florian community, directed by Rev. Father Kosian.
Swedish number, by Strandquist community.
Norwegian number, Warren.
Irish number, Warren.
Danish number, Happy Corner community.
German number, Radium.
Indian number, Warren.

In addition to these tentative numbers, others may be added, Mr. Huselid reported. The high school band will play several selections during the afternoon, while the Stephen Male Chorus also will appear on the program. Many of the program selections, which range thru readings, folk songs and folk dances, vocal and instrumental numbers, will be presented in full nationalistic costumes.

Judge Bernard B. Brett, president of the Historical Society, will preside at the opening of the program, while during presentation of the nationalistic features, Oscar R. Knutson of Warren will act as master of ceremonies.

The July 25th gathering is expected to bring a huge crowd to Riverside Farm's picnic grounds, where elmclad banks of the Tamarac offer ideal shade for picnic parties who may desire to come earlier in the day. All people of the county are invited, and may be assured that an interesting program is in store for them.

An admission of 25 cents per car will be collected at the entrance to the grounds, this being the only charge levied against picnic visitors. Receipts from this source will be used by the Society in defraying expenses of speakers and other incidentals.

A loud speaker system will be installed so that all visitors may have an opportunity of hearing distinctly all features of the program.

Had Drivers License Revoked

While driving home to his farm last Friday evening, Ole Garfve had a smashup with his car when he hit a car driven by Harold Felman of Middle River. The cars met head on near the intersection a half mile north of Holt and Mr. Garfve was found to be on the wrong side of the road as he was to make the turn going west to his place.

He was given a hearing in justice court before E. M. Evans of Middle River on Saturday and his drivers license was revoked for a year. He also received a fine of fifty dollars recommended by the state highway patrol who were present at the hearing prefering the charges. Mr. Felmans car was demolished beyond repair.

Mud Lake Area Taken Over

Much Water In East Country

Last week we gave you a report on how much rain we have had here lately and that it was raining at the time we went to press last Thursday afternoon. Well the rain kept right on coming down all day Thursday and also Friday until about 4 p. m. There appears to be a little too much moisture now for the rye harvest and good haying as all the low places are pretty well filled with water.

But we are lucky at that. To the east of us they have really had some heavy rain, and water is standing many feet deep in places. The Grygla country is actually suffering a heavy loss due to too much water. The fields and meadows out there are all flooded out and it looks now as if the crops out there are going to be a total loss in many places.

Mud Lake has taken in considerable water from the recent rains and the farmers who have crops on the lake bottom are worried that they will not be getting much out of them. Haying out there is also going to be quite a problem as the meadows are filled with water.

According to reports the Thief Lake bottom is filled to the brim with water and the Moose River bottom north of Gatzke is all one lake. The country to the east of here in Beltrami county is all one soaked mush at the present time with water standing many feet deep over highway No. 89 east of Grygla on Monday. The village of Grygla has had a small flood with water covering the streets on Monday.

"Puppy Love" Uncovers Old Art

Forgotten pictures, gathering dust for years in an old attic, brought the hope of new life to Mrs. Alida Clark, seventy-nine years old, of Maywood, Ill., a suburb of Chicago. When the dealer cleaned it up he was told by an art authority that it was the work of an old French master, Jean Baptiste Greuze.

what Irvin S. Cobb thinks about:

Third Term Ballyhoo.

SANTA MONICA, CALIF.—After a president has been re-elected it's certain that some inspired patriot who is snuggled close to the throne will burst from his cell with a terrible yell to proclaim that unless the adored incumbent consents again to succeed himself this nation is doomed.

Irvin S. Cobb

Incidentally, the said patriot's present job and perquisites also would be doomed, so he couldn't be blamed for privately brooding on the distressful thought. You wouldn't call him selfish, but you could call him hopeful, especially since there's a chance his ballyhoo may direct attention upon him as a suitable candidate when his idol says no to the proposition. He might ride in on the backwash, which would be even nicer than steering a tidal wave for somebody else.

Political observers have a name for this. They call it "sending up a balloon." It's an apt simile, a balloon being a flimsy thing, full of hot air, and when it soars aloft nobody knows where it will come down—if at all. It lacks both steering gears and terminal facilities.

There have been cases when the same comparison might have been applied not alone to the balloon but to the gentleman who launched it.

So let's remain calm. It's traditional in our history that no president ever had to go ballooning in order to find out how the wind blew and that no volunteer third-term boomer ever succeeded in taking the trip himself.

Modern Prairie Schooners.

WE'RE certainly returning —with modern improvements—to prairie schooner days when restless Americans are living on wheels and housekeeping on wheels and having babies on wheels. Only the other day twins were born aboard a trailer. And—who knows?—perhaps right now the stork, with a future president in her beak, is flapping fast, trying to catch up with somebody's perambulating bungalow.

So it's a fitting moment to revive the story of early Montana when some settlers were discussing the relative merits of various makes of those canvas-covered arks which bore such hosts of emigrants westward. They named over the Conestoga, the South Bend, the Murphy, the Studebaker and various others.

From under her battered sunbonnet there spoke up a weather beaten old lady who, with her husband and her growing brood, had spent the long years bumping along behind an ox team from one frontier camp to another.

"Boys," she said, shifting her snuff-stick, "I always did claim the old hickory waggin wuz the best one there is fur raisin' a family in."

Pugs Versus Statesmen.

IT'S confusing to read that poor decrepit Jim Braddock, having reached the advanced age of thirty-four or thereabouts, is all washed up, and, then, in another column, to discover that the leading candidates to supply young blood on the Supreme court bench are but bounding juveniles of around sixty-six.

This creates doubt in the mind of a fellow who, let us say, is quite a few birthdays beyond that engendered wreck, Mr. Braddock, yet still has a considerable number of years to go before he'll be an agile adolescent like some senators. He can't decide whether he ought to join the former at the old men's home or enlist with the latter in the Boy Scouts.

Quiescent Major Generals.

SOMETHING has gone out of life. For months now no general of the regular army, whether retired or detailed to a civilian job, has talked himself into a jam—a raspberry jam, if you want to make a cheap pun of it.

Maybe it's being officially gagged for so long while on active service that makes such a conversational Tessie out of the average brigadier when he goes into private pursuits and lets his hair down. It's as though he took off his tact along with his epaulettes. And when he subsides there's always another to take his place.

You see, under modern warfare the commanding officer is spared. He may lead the retreat, but never the charge. When the boys go over the top is he out in front waving a sword? Not so you'd notice it. By the new rules he's signing papers in a bombproof nine miles behind the lines and about the only peril he runs is from lack of exercise in the fresh air.

May be, in view of what so often happens when peace ensues, we should save on privates instead of generals.

Bryn turned. "How much, Tubby?"

"Bryn, if you aren't the damnedest fool!"

"How much?" Bryn said inexorably.

Tubby's dimple wavered in and out wildly. "I said I thought she was a darn nice girl," he muttered. "You crazy idiot."

"Madeline, he says he thinks you are a darn nice girl."

"Well," Madeline said with a bounce of the springs, "that isn't anything to get up and get dressed over. G'night."

Feeling better, Bryn pulled Tubby's door shut with a last pleasant smile, and sauntered down the hall.

"Deborah," he said softly, without knocking.

She was awake. Her voice came, low and clear, on the instant. "Yes? Has anything . . . happened?"

"Nothing. I just wanted to say . . . pleasant dreams . . . and good-night."

For an instant she did not answer. Then, "Good-night, Bryn."

"Good-night, darling," he replied, and went quickly across the room to his own door.

CHAPTER IX

The breakfast table was spread on the small terrace at the side of the house, where Bryn and Deborah had eaten their first breakfast together. There were six places laid, but Sally was still upstairs, sleeping, as Simon explained, like a dormouse; and Bryn had not yet returned from his early errand to the farm down the road. Deborah, in freshly starched blue gingham, sat erect on her chair behind the silver coffee pot, and poured out a third cup for Tubby. Beside her, Madeline sat quiet, gazing dreamily out through the trunks of the tall pines, and tossing, from time to time, small crumbs of toast to a greedy chipmunk who sat up and begged for them with bright expectant eyes.

"Well," Simon sighed, "I wonder if today will be the big day."

"Oh, probably not," Tubby said comfortably. "I give him until about Thursday noon."

"It doesn't make any difference when he comes, does it?" Madeline inquired. "The sooner he comes, the sooner it will be settled. I wish he'd come now and get it over with."

As she spoke, Bryn pushed open the dining room door and came out to the terrace. He put a hand on Simon's shoulder, tweaked Tubby's hair, let his eyes rest on Deborah's lowered eyelashes, and spoke to Madeline. "Who, me?"

"No, Graham."

"He'll come," Bryn said cheerfully, and pulled up his chair. "And there's one sure thing, he won't get past Joe. I left Joe on a box high up on the seat of a wagon box, where he can see the road coming up the mountain for about two miles. He's got the wagon pulled under a shady tree, and he's got an old pair of spy-glasses, and the horn. When I left I heard him making arrangements with his mother to bring out his meals. I'd like to see as much as a caterpillar get past him. And, I've locked the gates, so we're all set."

Deborah handed him his cup, and as she did so, she lifted her eyes and met his upon her. She felt herself flushing, and the cup trembled in her hand so that some of the coffee spilled over. But Bryn did not seem to mind. He took it and put it down, and his eye were still upon hers. Deborah turned resolutely away.

Bryn finished his breakfast, and he and Tubby and Simon left the table. They were going, Tubby informed the two girls, to inspect the dungeons and see that the chains were in good order.

When they were gone, Madeline put out her hand and patted Deborah's lightly. "Deborah," she said after a moment, "would you do something for me?"

"Of course."

"It's about Tubby. I don't know what to think." She looked up. "With any other man in the world, I'd just exercise my feminine charm and . . . wait. But that isn't safe with Tubby. Tubby isn't exactly shy, but he doesn't have any idea that he's so attractive that anybody might want to marry him. It's one thing I like about him, his absolute lack of conceit."

Deborah considered. "Tubby wouldn't marry just anybody," she said comfortingly.

"I don't mean just anybody. But I can think of half a dozen girls in our own crowd who could make quite a dent in him, Deborah, if they set about doing it. And, of course, there's one in particular."

"Pilar?"

"Pilar."

"What's she like?" Deborah asked curiously. "I never knew any girls but you and Sally, and I understand you two pretty well. Isn't she like us, this Pilar?"

"Not in a hundred years, innocence. Not in a thousand years. She's one of these hot-headed stamping beauties, if you know what I mean. Pilar isn't much more Spanish than I am, although she has a Spanish name and a Spanish look, which she takes very good care to intensify. Pilar has huge flashing black eyes, and smooth black hair . . . she slicks it back and pins a red rose in it, you know . . . and she makes her mouth very red and doesn't use rouge on her cheeks. And she's tall and graceful and buys wonderful clothes, the kind other people can't get by with."

"Is she very beautiful, Madeline?"

"Very. Almost as beautiful as you, honey, only quite, quite different."

"Have she and Tubby known each other long?"

"Years and years."

"Then . . . surely you needn't worry, Madeline. He would have married her long ago if he'd been going to, wouldn't he?"

Madeline hesitated. "No," she said finally. "Something new has just occurred in Pilar's life. She wouldn't have married him until now."

A cold finger touched Deborah's heart; but the touch was so light that it was gone in an instant, and she had forgotten it.

"What can I do, Madeline?"

Madeline brought her gaze back from the distant eastern horizon. "Tubby likes me," she said. "I know he likes me. We get along beautifully together. If I were sure he didn't love Pilar I'd just simply set about making him love me."

"But could I find out about Pilar? Is that what you want me to do?"

"I thought you might ask Bryn. Bryn knows. Bryn knows everything about Tubby, just as Tubby knows everything about Bryn. And then you could tell me."

Deborah was silent, her eyes on the cloth. Madeline was supposing that she and Bryn had long hours together, long hours alone, as Simon and Sally did, hours when nobody else heard what they said to each other. . . .

She looked up. "Do you really love him, Madeline?" she asked softly.

Madeline smiled, a slow smile. Her eyes were tender. "Yes, honey. Really."

"Well, then," Deborah said with a sigh, "I'll see what I can do, Madeline."

It was only an hour or two later when she saw her chance. Tubby was sitting alone on a stump down by the brook, whittling industriously at a willow stick, trying to make himself a whistle. Deborah went down the path and perched herself on a mossy log in front of him.

"Do you like it up here, Tubby?"

"I think it's great. I'm crazy about it."

"Don't you miss all the excitement in the city, and all the rest of your friends?"

"Not a twinge of missing do I get."

"All the things you do sound very exciting. I mean, all of you, of course. Madeline and Sally have been telling me a little, about places, and people. Yesterday they told me about Pilar. I think she sounds fascinating."

Tubby looked up. "Pilar?" he said incredulously.

"She sounds marvelous. So tall and beautiful. Even her name is lovely, isn't it? Pilar."

"Do you mean to say those women told you about Pilar?"

"Yes. Why not? I was awfully interested."

"Well," he said with a heavy sigh, "women are the funniest things in captivity. I should think that would have been the last name they would have mentioned. And, if somehow you had heard about Pilar, I should've thought she'd be the last person you'd be happy about. I never would have dared open my mouth about her, but then, who am I? Just a mere man."

"I don't see why you feel that way," Deborah said, but her smile began now to feel a little stiff and queer. "There isn't any reason why I shouldn't want to hear about Pilar, is there, or wouldn't like her?"

Tubby was silent for a moment. Then, "I suppose not," he said slowly. "Not under the circumstances. After all, everything went spang right by the board for you, didn't it?" And you know it. So why should you worry about Pilar or anybody else?"

Deborah tore a little piece of green velvet moss off the log, and spread it on the back of her hand. So Tubby didn't know, either. Tubby thought that Bryn had fallen in love with her in Mr. Holworthy's office. Tubby didn't know everything about Bryn, after all. Suddenly Deborah thought she understood why Bryn had told all these people the same story, the story about falling in love with her. It was to save his own self-respect. He didn't want any of them to know that he had just found a new and interesting way to earn money. Oh, that wasn't fair. That wasn't like Bryn. And, last night . . .

"From the sound of Pilar," she said at last, "I couldn't blame anybody for thinking she was wonderful."

"I suppose she does sound all right," Tubby said dubiously. "But she's no good, Deborah. I'm warning you, in case she ever comes near you. But what's been handed to her is hard to take, and it isn't agreeing with her very well."

"Did you hear somebody calling?" Deborah said suddenly. "It sounded like Grandmother. Excuse me, Tubby," and she got up and ran swiftly up the path to the house. Grandmother was not calling. But Deborah knew she couldn't bear to stay with Tubby another second. Her heart felt as if it was breaking. She went up the stairs to her own room, and shut the door behind her.

The girl he loved . . . she would be Pilar. Beautiful Pilar, with her black eyes and her black hair and her red mouth. They all thought Bryn had given her up, forgotten her, for Deborah. That was what they had to think. They couldn't possibly understand, when they didn't know the truth; when they didn't know why Bryn had married.

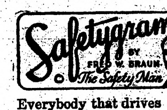
Lindholm of Strandquist and Marian Backlund and a piano solo by Gloria Risberg of Thief River Falls will be given and Rev. Hanson a short talk.

Light and dark layer cake, ice cream and coffee will be served. Everybody is cordially invited.



Everybody that drives an automobile feels that he or she is a very careful driver. But let me ask you, "Are you a careful driver?" There is a difference between careful and thoughtful.

Most of us operate an automobile mechanically. We drive along crowded thoroughfares, over country roads at considerable speed, thinking of the day's work or some specific problem and pay very little attention to the job at hand driving. The thoughtful driver dismisses all of his cares, worries, and thots and concentrates on the job of driving an automobile. To be a thoughtful driver is to constantly have in mind the possibilities of accidents, watching intersections, traffic lights, pedestrians, and the many other numerous problems that confront the driving public.

If you are a thoughtful driver, you are automatically a careful driver.

Swine Diseases Show Similar Symptoms

Owner Runs Great Danger From Wrong Diagnosis Or Delay

—Prepared by American Foundation for Animal Health

Delay in obtaining an accurate diagnosis is probably the farmer's greatest enemy today, in his fight to prevent losses in his herd from one or another of the common diseases affecting swine.

There are at least four swine diseases in which the symptoms are often so similar that it is difficult for anyone but a veterinarian to make an accurate diagnosis and outline proper treatment.

Hog cholera, erysipelas, swine plague, and infectious enteritis, all have a certain similarity in symptoms. Cholera, for instance, causes high fever ranging from 104 to 107 degrees. So does swine plague and also erysipelas. There is a tendency in all these diseases for the animals to withdraw from the herd, some showing complete prostration. Likewise, in all these diseases, loss of appetite, high fever, and other evidences of sickness are common symptoms.

An acute outbreak of erysipelas may so closely resemble an outbreak of hog cholera that it may require a laboratory examination to determine which disease is prevalent.

The layman may be the keenest observer and may have excellent judgment on the care and handling of swine, but with such similarity in symptoms, lesions and history between the contagious swine diseases, it does not seem wise to leave the destiny of one's herd in the hands of a person not scientifically trained to diagnose accurately. The only safe course, when hogs begin to show any of the above symptoms, is to call a qualified veterinarian. Prompt action may save most of the herd. Delay may result in heavy loss.

Of course, there is no successful treatment for hog cholera. To wait until after cholera breaks out is generally too late in any case. The only safety against this disease is vaccination when the pigs are young. Immunity from cholera after such vaccination is generally good for the life of the hog, and is cheap insurance when performed by a competent veterinarian.

13,000,000th Chevrolet Built

Another milestone in industry was reached Wednesday, when the 13th-million Chevrolet rolled off the the assembly line in the Flint plant of the Chevrolet Division, General Motors Corporation.

In spite of interrupted production, Chevrolet's millionth car was produced in a period of just two more days than 11 months, the second shortest million-unit period in the company's history.

Officials stated that the demand for the 1937 models has exceeded anything heretofor known, and that, but for frequent interruptions of output since Jan. 1, production and workers' wages would have shattered all previous records, and the present milestone would have been reached from 60 to 90 days earlier.

Production of No. 13 million was marked by no ceremonies at the factory, but M. E. Coyle, general manager of the division, issued a brief statement from his Detroit office officially announcing the event, which was also the occasion for an informal luncheon, attended by Mr. Coyle, Mr. Holler and other executives of the company.

When the present management, headed by Mr. Coyle, took over the reins in October, 1933, the company had built 9,000,000 cars and trucks. The 10-miilionth was produced Nov. 20, 1934, the 11-millionth Dec. 4, 1935, and the 12-millionth August 5, 1936. Records show that it took 12 years for the company to build its first million units, while the remaining 12 million have been produced in a period of only 14 years. Mr. Coyle has been a member of the Chevrolet organization throughout the production of all but 120,000 of the 13,000,000 units built to date.

Word was received that Miss Mildred Olson left Minneapolis July 8th for Washington D. C. having been called there by the Civil Service Commission to be employed, as stenographer.

As a child, Miss Olson lived in the Holt community and received her grade school education in Pioneer school.

Mrs. Fred Sauls and son of Oakland, Calif., and Mrs. S. Leiran of Thief River Falls visited at the L. Sagstuen and O. Johnson homes last Thursday.

Quail To Be Distributed

Early in August the state division of game and fish will begin distributing Bob-white quail for the first time in Minnesota history. Approximately 1,000 eight to ten week-old birds will be released in suitable areas in the southwestern part of the state, according to Frank Blair, superintendent of game propagation.

Quail are being raised at the new game farm on the Carlos Avery refuge. About 1,000 pairs are being held over for breeding purposes next year. Nearly 8,000 eggs were obtained from this year's brood stock.

Mr. and Mrs. Walter Swan are visiting here this week.

Frances and Jean Nyberg of Danube, Minn. are visiting at the O. H. Nohre home.

Mrs. A. Bennes and Mrs. J. Hagberg called at the Mrs. L. Wegge home Tuesday of last week.

Instruction For Soil Con. Jobs

The school of Instruction for those applying for jobs measuring fields for 1937 Soil Conservation Program will be held at the Court House at Warren on Tuesday, August 3, beginning at 9:30 a. m. at which time Mr. C. M. Kelihan, blockman for this distelct, will instruct the applicants as to how this work will be carried on.

A written examination will be given to determine the qualifications of the men for this position, and from those qualifications enough reporters will be selected to measure farms in this county.

Daily reports will have to be made each day and from these reports a man's work will be judged. Measuring will no doubt start shortly after the School of Instructions is held.

No time will be allowed for the day which is spent at Warren receiving instructions relative to checking.

Jubilant after their record-breaking non-stop flight of 6,262 miles from Moscow to a cow pasture near San Jacinto, Calif., three Soviet fliers were feted and congratulated on their remarkable feat. 6. Do the cold waters of the temperate and frigid zones contain more plant and animal life than do the warm waters of the tropics?
7. How does the Maxim silencer work?
8. Why do sharks fight back down?

Answers

1. A census of population was taken in this country in 1930 and the next will be taken in 1940. Any other figures that may be given are simply estimates. The United States had a population of 122,775,046 in 1930; the estimated population on July 1, 1935, was 127,521,000, showing an increase of nearly five millions in five years.
2. The world's longest air line is that between Amsterdam, Holland, and the Dutch East Indies, 9,000 miles away. There are two departures weekly at each end of it.
3. The eugenics department of the Carnegie institution estimates that 30,000,000,000 people have lived since the beginning of recorded history, some 6,000 or 7,000 years ago.
4. For Cuba, Honduras, Mexico, Nicaragua, Venezuela, Costa Rica, Colombia and San Salvador. This coinage totaled 72,180,449 pieces.
5. In 1907 Selig opened the first California studio in Los Angeles. The first picture was the "Count of Monte Cristo" in 1,000 feet. Soon after that time other motion picture studios in New York opened California studios.
6. More plant and animal life per square mile is found in the cold waters of the temperate and frigid zones than in the ocean waters of the tropics.
7. The Maxim silencer is a tubular device attached to the muzzle of a firearm that renders the discharge practically noiseless. The device has an interior spiral which, permitting the ejection of the bullet, retards the explosion of the gases by causing them to rotate before escaping.
8. Because of the peculiar conformation of the shark's mouth, it is necessary for it to turn on its back when attacking an object at the surface of the water. A shark's mouth opens below its snout on the under side of its body and it is, therefore, unable to bite anything directly above it without turning over.

Why MORE FARM TRACTORS ARE EQUIPPED WITH FIRESTONE TRACTOR TIRES THAN ALL OTHER MAKES OF TIRES COMBINED

Farmers KNOW Ground Grip Tires

PROVIDE GREATER TRACTION INCREASED DRAWBAR PULL
SAVE MORE TIME AND MONEY

NOW THE Amazing New Firestone GROUND GRIP TIRE THAT PROVIDES STILL GREATER TRACTION AND SAVINGS

FIRESTONE has done it again! All you have to do is to examine the amazing new Firestone Ground Grip Tractor Tire and you will quickly understand why it provides still greater traction, greater drawbar pull, and makes greater savings in time and fuel. The basic Firestone patented Ground Grip tread design has been retained, but the extra heavy bars of rubber are spaced wider and built higher. The tire cleans itself still better, providing much greater traction.

Farmers everywhere are welcoming this new tire, for tests show that tractors equipped with it consume up to 50% less fuel, as compared with tractors equipped with steel lugged wheels. With this amazing new tire you get up to 30% more available drawbar pull on dry sod — up to 40% more on stubble — and up to 50% more on wet plowed ground, than with any other tire made.

Only Firestone can build all this extra traction into a tractor tire because only Firestone has the patented extra construction features of Gum-Dipped cords which are stronger to resist the strain of heavy pulling, and two extra layers of Gum-Dipped cords under the tread which bind the tread and cord body into one inseparable unit. The tread is made of specially compounded rubber which resists the action of sun, rain, and snow.

See this amazing new tire at your Firestone Implement Dealer, Tire Dealer or Auto Supply & Service Store today. You will want a set on your tractor so you can make the savings that only Firestone Ground Grip Tractor Tires provide.

Sauce for Meats.—For a snappy and delicious sauce to serve with meats, mix one cup apple sauce, ½ cup horseradish and one cup whipped cream.

Turnip Patties. — Turnips can be made into little cakes if they are mashed, thoroughly drained, and then seasoned with salt, pepper and cayenne, and bound with beaten egg-yolk. When the mixture has got quite cold, divide it into small balls, coat these with egg - and - breadcrumb, and fry them to a golden brown in deep fat. Serve garnished with watercress.

Removing Water Spots.—Equal amounts of turpentine and linseed oil mixed together will remove the white spots from furniture, caused by water.

The Measuring Cup. — Grease the measuring cup before measuring sirup or molasses and the ingredients will not stick to the cup.

Burnt Saucepans. — If the bottom of a saucepan is burnt, sprinkle salt over it and leave for an hour or two. Then add a little water, rub well, and when washed out the marks will have gone.

* * *

Washing Cretonne Covers. — When washing cretonne covers or curtains, add two or three aspirin tablets to the water; the colours will not run and will retain their brightness.

And his tenderness toward her? His hand over hers, sitting there in the twilight? What was that, then?

Deborah got up and went into her bedroom. She stood before her mirror, and lifted her eyes to the girl in the glass. The faded gingham dress, the braided hair . . . she looked like some forlorn little orphan youngster who needed someone to love her. Bryn was kind. He was sorry for her. The feeling he had for her was . . . pity.

She pressed her lips together firmly to stop their trembling. She went into her bathroom and bathed her eyes in cold water.

And, just at that moment, she heard the sound of Joe's horn, far down the mountain. Three long blasts and two short ones . . . a pause . . . three long notes and two short ones. Deborah's heart sprang up into her throat. She tore open her door and raced down the stairs to Grandmother and Madeline, out on the veranda. At the foot of the stairs she caught the sound of Madeline's voice, going steadily on with "Shadows on the Rock." Deborah stopped at the sound of that calm voice, and steadied herself. Then, chin up, she walked out serenely and smiled at Grandmother. She dropped down on the step, and sat there, waiting.

A low humming sound made itself felt on the air. It rose to a whine . . . the shining top of a motor car appeared sliding along outside the wall. It slowed abruptly, and swung in toward the gates. Gary started down the drive.

"It looks as if we had guests," Grandmother said, interrupting Madeline. "I wonder who it can be?"

"It's probably another plumber," Madeline said languidly.

Gary had reached the gates. He opened them, and passed through. But then, after a moment's colloquy with the driver of the car, whom Deborah could not see, he came back to the gates again, and swung them wide; and the long blue car jolted a little and came on through. Deborah put a slow hand to her throat.

But it was not Stuart Graham driving; it was a woman . . . a girl . . . in a bright red silk beret, and a red jacket. Gary plodded along behind the car, after he had shut the gates and locked them. The car came slowly up the drive, and stopped opposite the end of the veranda. The girl got out, and Deborah knew her. She was tall and very slim, with a long oval face and a very red mouth. Her eyes were black, and sleepy, like a cat's, with slow black lashes drooping over them. Deborah rose, and found Madeline at her side. They went down the steps.

"It's Pilar," Madeline said under her breath, and Deborah nodded.

"Ah, Madeline!" Pilar said, in a voice that made a tune. She moved forward, and let her hand rest lightly on Madeline's elbow, holding her, as she looked down at Deborah. "And this," she went on caressingly, "this will be little Deborah. My child, you are adorable."

"Thank you," Deborah said sweetly, and put out her hand in welcome. "I am so glad you have come. I am sure you must be Pilar. I have heard so much about you."

Pilar looked a little startled, but she lost not a whit of her poise. She looked at Madeline. "And aren't you glad to see me, too, Madeline?"

"Oh, rather," Madeline said coolly, and turned back toward the veranda.

"We must take you to Grandmother," Deborah explained, as Pilar's eyes lifted to the delicate old face turned toward her.

"Lovely," Pilar said, in an audible whisper. "Oh, lovely."

"Grandmother," Deborah murmured, "this is Miss D'Avillo. She is another friend of Sally's and Madeline's."

"I'm so happy to welcome you, my dear," Grandmother said warmly. "We are having such a pleasant time and I am very glad you have come to join us."

"Oh, thank you," Pilar murmured, and held Grandmother's hand quite unnecessarily long. She straightened.

Simon and Tubby and Bryn, all silent, came around the end of the veranda. Bryn's face, as he glanced at Deborah, was very queer and stiff; Tubby was white. Simon looked detached, as usual, but his eyes went at once to Pilar. And she stood there, for a moment, beside Grandmother, beside Deborah. She put her hand lightly on Deborah's shoulder, before she moved, and Bryn looked at them together, so, Pilar beautiful and sophisticated and perfect down to the last gleaming finger-nail shining in the sun, Deborah small and insignificant in her faded gingham.

Pilar smiled. She went forward and held out both hands. "My dear Bryn," she said affectionately. "But how well you look, and how happy! Allow me to congratulate you; I think she is the loveliest thing I have ever seen."

Grandmother looked up swiftly at Deborah; and Deborah, calm now, with something cold and frozen where her heart had begun some short time ago to ache, smiled gently and contentedly back.

* * * * * * *

The rain, which had threatened for twenty-four hours, came at last on Tuesday night. Deborah lay awake and listened to the soft steady fall on the balcony floor outside her bedroom window. She found herself wishing ardently that it might rain hard and long, so that the road might be impassable to Stuart Graham, so that nothing further should break in upon the peace and loveliness of the summer days. But that was a useless wish, she knew. The peace and loveliness were already gone.

Pilar was very beautiful, but the most troubling thing about her was the so obvious fact that she belonged to Bryn's world, his real world, that she was part of his own life and always had been, and not just a chance passer-by whose path had happened to meet his and for a time followed along close beside it. Madeline and Sally and Simon and Tubby were out of Bryn's life, too, but somehow before Pilar came, Deborah hadn't realized what a different life it was from her own, how far away and impossible. Pilar was very kind, and she did her best to draw Deborah into the conversations, and always stopped carefully to explain anything that she thought would be unfamiliar or strange to Deborah, in a way that Sally and Madeline never had thought of doing. But Pilar's very kindness and thoughtfulness seemed to emphasize Deborah's unfamiliarity with the world, Bryn's world, and its customs.

All the time she had felt lost and forlorn and alone, because this was Bryn's world and Bryn's life, a modern sophisticated pageant in which she had no part; and because it made her see how drab and dull and uninteresting her own life of cucumber frames and brook trout and made-over clothes must be to him.

And all his talk about knitting, and winter evenings by the hearth, and the kittens he would get for her . . . all his interest in that simple sort of thing was pretended for her sake. Bryn was a gentleman, and he lived up to his bargains to the last pencil stroke. Not by word or suggestion would he let her discover how bored and dull he was going to find the rest of his year here on the mountain, nor with what difficulty he was going to earn the money she would pay him.

Her Eyes Were Black and Sleepy, Like a Cat's.

Deborah slept very little that night. Life, that only yesterday had seemed so beautiful and serene, was becoming complicated and unhappy. There didn't seem to be anything ahead but more difficulties and a lonely unhappy time. Because Bryn would go back to Pilar when the year was up, and when he did, there wouldn't be anybody at all. Nobody could ever be like Bryn, even if he were only pretending. But there would have to be a way to make him stop pretending; Deborah knew, because if he went on like this, even though the look in his eyes was only the tenderness one feels for a child, or a lost puppy, she wasn't going to be able to bear it when at the end of the year he drove out of the big gates to leave her forever.

The morning was cold and grey, although the rain had stopped at dawn. Deborah had them lay a fire in the small sitting room downstairs, so that Grandmother might not feel a chill. There, when breakfast was over, Pilar and Madeline and Sally and Grandmother and herself were sitting. The three men were outside.

Pilar, in a beautiful dress of some very fine woollen material in a dark crimson color, sat beside the doorway with her feet out on a low stool and a long cigarette holder between her fingers. She could see up into the orchard, too, and Deborah noticed that her eyes went to Bryn frequently, although she gave no sign. Grandmother was in a low chair beside the fire, listening to Pilar with the same fascinated interest she had shown last night, watching her, taking in every perfect detail of her grooming.

"I hope you don't mind my coming here uninvited like this, Mrs. Larned," she was saying in her low voice. "I found myself completely deserted and lonely and I couldn't stand it any longer."

What Irvin S. Cobb Thinks about

Semi-Nude Fashions.

SANTA MONICA, CALIF.—Clothes may not make the man, but leaving them off certainly makes him foolish. And that goes double for the women.

Irvin S. Cobb

Whence arises the present-day delusion that going about dressed at half-mast enchances the attractiveness of the average adult? Our forbears of the Victorian era wore too much for health or happiness or cleanliness. But isn't it worse to offend the eye all through the lingering summer by not wearing enough to cover up the blotches, the blemishes, the bulges and the bloats that come with maturity? Sun baths should be taken on a doctor's prescription, not at the corner of First and Main.

Women old enough to know better are the worst offenders, seems like. If only they'd stop to consider that the snail, which is naked, would lose in any beauty contest against the butterfly, which wears all the regalia the traffic will stand!

But even though it's for their own good, you can't tell 'em. If somebody started the fad of going at the game while practically nude, inside of two weeks mumblepeg would be the national pastime—until somebody else thought up a game to be played by folks without a stitch on. Or anyhow, just a stitch here and there.

Doctoring Movie Scripts.

USUALLY they lay these yarns on Mr. Sam Goldwyn, who thrives upon them and goes right on turning out successes, his motto being, "What's grammar as between friends so long as the box office shows results?" But, for a change, this one is ascribed to another producer, who proudly describes himself as a self-made man, which, according to his critics, is relieving the Creator of a considerable responsibility and putting the blame where the blame belongs. They also say no self-made man should stop with the job only partly finished. But then Hollywood is full of parties trying to push Humpty Dumpty off the wall.

As the tale runs, this gentleman entered the conference chamber at his studio and as, with a kingly gesture, he laid down a fat sheaf of typewritten pages, said to the assembled intellects of his staff:

"Jumpmen, in all my experience in the picture business this is what you might call unique. Here is absolutely, posstiffly the only poifect script I have ever read in my ontire life. I tell you that before we start altering it."

Strikes Versus Wars.

DID you ever notice how like a war is a strike?

The operator and his operatives are the shock troops that suffer the heaviest casualties. The owner risks his profits and perhaps his market and sometimes his plant. The worker gives up his wages, frequently his job, occasionally his life.

Stockholders see dividends vanishing and investments shrinking. Citizens see their communities disrupted. Women and children go on short rations, many a time go actually hungry. For, as in a war, the innocent non-combatants bear most grievous burdens.

Those who really garner in the spoils—professional agitators; financial buzzards eager to seize on bankrupted industries; lawyers with their writs and their injunctions; imported thugs masquerading, for one side or the other as honest mechanics—these might be likened to stay-at-home diplomats and profiteers and hired mercenaries who induce friendly nations to turn enemies so they may gain their own selfish ends.

After it's over, we realize that almost any strike might have been averted had common sense and common justice ruled, rather than greed and entrenched stubbornness and fomented hate. And the same is true of almost any war. For every real benefit to humanity came out of peace and arbitration, not out of battle and destruction.

And here's the final parallel: Ultimately, the supposed victor finds himself the actual loser. Tell me which army won any great strike—or any great war—and I'll tell you who won the San Francisco fire and the Galveston flood.

Crater Lake in Oregon

Crater Lake in Oregon has the most romantic geologic history of any lake in the United States. Its rim was once the base of a volcanic mountain which collapsed and sank into the earth. Later it cooled, springs came out of the sides, snow collected and it filled with water. It is 6 miles in diameter and contains the bluest water known to exist naturally today. There is no outlet and no streams running into it and yet the water is always fresh.

Sew-Your-Own Style News

HERE is something practical, something sweet, and something ornamental for your midsummer wardrobe.

Simple As Toast and Coffee.

At breakfast time you need the crisp shipshape style of the little model at the left. He'll proffer that eight o'clock kiss with alacrity and fervor when you greet your hubby in this pleasant surprise. Make it of a gay tub-well cotton for greatest usability.

Lines That Live.

For luncheon in town, for cutting up touches on the Club veranda you can't find a more fetching frock than the one in the center. It combines sweet swing with nonchalance. Never has a designer given more flattering shoulder and waist lines than these. "And what about the skirt?" you ask. Obviously it has the most finished flare in town. Chiffon, acetate, or sports silk will do justice to both the flare and you, Milady.

And If Autumn Comes.

It's a help to have a dress like the one at the right around for it gives that feeling of preparedness. Prepared in case a cool Fallish day or evening is slipped in without warning. Then, too, it won't be long before cool days will be the rule rather than the exception. So it would seem a logical as well as a fashionable step to set about making this elegant model right away. Be first in your crowd to show what's new under the fashion sun for Fall.

Pattern 1354 is designed for sizes 34 to 46. Size 36 requires 4⅝ yards of 35 inch material.

Pattern 1307 is designed for sizes 12 to 20 (30 to 40 bust). Size 14 requires 3¾ yards of 39 inch material plus 7½ yards of ribbon for trimming as pictured.

Household Helps

Do you know the proper thing to say when you sit on a wad of chewing gum?

If your suit is washable, here is the correct command—if you want to get rid of the chewing gum and not your garment:

"Bring me an egg white, some soap and some lukewarm water. Then stand back and watch me soften the gum with the egg white—so! And finally wash it completely away with the soapy water."

If your suit isn't washable, the fabric-saving element is carbon tetra-chloride, which will remove all traces of stain.

The authority for these points of chewing gum etiquette is a new booklet called "Handy Helps for Homemakers," which has been prepared by a group of home economics authorities. This booklet is a convenient, compact handbook of practical remedies for the most common household problems. It is divided into four sections: laundering (which includes not only stain-removal formulae, but also detailed advice on the proper way to wash various fabrics); home lighting; heating, and cooking.

The writers of the "Handy Helps for Homemakers" booklet have confined the chapter on "Cooking" to an informative discussion of meat-selection rules, suggestions for improving actual cooking technique and a summary of the merits and problems of home canning.

A copy of the "Handy Helps for Homemakers" book can be secured by sending 5 cents to cover postage and handling to Miss Boyd, 210 S. Desplaines St., Chicago, Ill.—Adv.

Sunday Trucking Stopped

Continuing the drive to lower the Sunday and holiday traffic accident and death rate on the trunk highways entering Minneapolis, St. Paul and Duluth, the state highway patrol is now assisting in enforcement of a new regulation by the Railroad and Warehouse Commission prohibiting certain commercial trucks from entering or leaving Minneapolis or St. Paul or Duluth by any highway on Sundays and holidays up to September 13.

Formerly, as announced by the Highway department, the type of trucks under ban were permitted to enter Minneapolis and St. Paul via designated highways. None was permitted to leave. The new order prohibits entering and leaving any highway.

The regulations exempts Class T vehicles, trucks of one ton capacity or less, vehicles transporting livestock, trucks carrying newspapers and perishable food stuffs, public utility emergency wagons, ambulances, garage tow cars and the like and these may enter and leave the three cities at any time via any route.

A large crowd attended the Ice Cream Social at the Nazareth Lutheran church Tuesday evening. A good program was given of which the Gusa brothers and their sister and other young folks furnished the greater part.

Mr. and Mrs. Sam Brown of Mayville, N. D. returned to their home Friday after a weeks visit here with relatives.

Attention 4-Hers

In our annual plan of work, we, as 4-H members, have resolved to have a one-hundred per cent completion of projects. All home economic record blanks are due so let us, who haven't already sent them in, bring them along to next 4-H meeting or send them to Mr. Deitz, the county leader, immediately.

Let us cooperate with our fellow-4-Hers and "make the best better."

Let,s make 1937 a successful 4-H club year.

Several farmers around here report that they have lost some of their horses the past week due to sleeping sickness. It seems that the mosquitoes carry the germs that effect the horses and they drop off to sleep and remain in that condition until they become too weak to get up again.

Florence Kolden is now employed at the Art Moe home.

Many Fruits Doing Good

Many fruits are proving profitable in the Red River Valley this year according to surveys made by experts from the Northwest School and Station. Superintendent T. M. McCall reports that one raspberry grower has reported more than $100 worth of sales from a single acre. Several strawberry growers with overhead irrigation systems have reported excellent returns this year. The favorable rainfall of midsummer has encouraged a heavy growth of stems and top of all fruit trees and plants. The heavy growth of top of fruit plants may be a hazard according to Northwest School authorities. Late fall growth of woody plants should be checked by planting cover crops such as buckwheat, rape, oats or barley. Cover crops help use up the soil water supply and thereby check the growth of woody plants. Woody fruit plants should have their stems and canes thoroughly matured and ripened to escape winter injury. Sheltered areas with rich soil and abundant soil water may be desirable for fruits such as strawberries but such areas should be avoided for tree fruits. Late fall growth on tree fruits on rich soil areas is responsible for more winter injury than low temperature according to Mr. McCall.

Annual group gathering of American Sunday School Union will be August 8 at Northwest School at Crookston. Speakers: Rev: J. O. Ferris, Rev. P. C. Sorensen, and Rev. H. Henwood. Services 10:30, 1:30, 2:30. Everyone welcome. Bring picnic dinner

Work On Project Stopped

Work on the big waterfowl project in the Mud Lake area has been stopped by the contractors, McGarry Bros., on account of too much flood water out there. A crew of about fifty men has been laid off of the job of clearing brush, rip-rapping dikes and spillways, and dam building. At present only two Drag Line dredges and their operators are working on the job out there.

Work on the project will, however, continue again this fall if the water goes down and it dries up out there.

George Karvonen of New York Mills spent a few days here this week. On Wednesday he left for the harvest fields of North Dakota. He was accompanied by Joe and Roy Moline.

Heads State Tourist Bureau

Ed L. Shave, sports editor of the St. Paul Daily News for the past 26 years, last week was appointed director of the state tourist bureau by Commissioner H. C. Wenzel of the department of conservation. The appointment becomes effective Aug. 1.

Shave succeeds George H. Bradley, who was appointed to the position in December, 1932.

"I have chosen Mr. Shave for this highly important position because I believe his experience and background eminently qualify him to administer the tourist bureau in a way that will benefit the entire state," Commissioner Wenzel said.

"During his many years in newspaper work, Shave has become acquainted with national figures in the sport world such as Grantland Rice, Walter St. Denis, Henry McLemore, Warren Brown, and many others. The writings of these men are well known to people throughout the United States. Mr. Shave thus has an unusual opportunity to introduc Minnesota to the out-of-state public."

Mrs. J. H. Knutson returned home last Friday from Physicians hospital at Thief River Falls where she has spent several weeks.

Mr. and Mrs. Willie Engen and chlldren of Viking visited at the Christ Engen home Sunday.

Glen Peterson, son of Mr. and Mrs. Hj. Peterson, underwent a tonsil operation at St. Luke's hospital at Thief River Falls on Tuesday.

Rain Does More Damage

The heavy rains here on Sunday afternoon and Monday night have filled all the low spots to overflowing. Crops in the Mud Lake area have suffered from too much water and the farmers out there report that they are going to harvest very little of the wonderful stand of grain which was there only a short time ago.

The hay crop in most places is shot for this year and the pasture lands are getting poorer every day for the livestock. In former years this community was the breadbasket that supplied the hay and feed for the drought areas in other sections of the country but now it seems that the Great Creator has seen fit to turn the tables on the people here.

Mr. and Mrs. Johnnie Nelson and Mr. and Mrs. George Moberg, farmers in the Mud Lake area moved to Holt recently on account of the high water flooding them out on their farms out there.

what Irvin S. Cobb thinks about:

Western Hostelries.

SAN FRANCISCO, CALIF.—They have mighty fine hotels in this town. I've stayed at several of them and friends of mine have been put out of some of the others.

Irvin S. Cobb

And once I enjoyed a fire scare here when the alarm, at 3:30 a. m., brought to the lobby a swarm of moving picture actors without any makeup on and not much else. This was in the era of the silent films, but you wouldn't have dreamed it to hear the remarks of an hysterical lady star when she discovered that her chow had been forgotten. The current husband also was temporarily missing but she was comparatively calm about that. She probably figured a husband could be picked up almost any time whereas darling little Ming Poo had a long pedigree and represented quite a financial investment and anyhow was a permanent fixture in her life.

Through the strike here, the traveling public seemed to make out. Maybe visitors followed the old southern custom—stop with kinfolks.

Think, though, how great would have been the suffering had the strike occurred during prohibition days when transient guests might have perished of thirst without bright uniformed lads to bring them first-aid packages in the handy hip-pocket sizes! Bellhops qualified as lifesavers those times.

Humans in the Raw.

AS I behold vast numbers of fellow beings strolling the beaches, yes, and the public thoroughfares too, while wearing as few clothes as possible—and it seems to be possible to wear very few indeed—I don't know whether to admire them for their courage or sympathize with them in their suffering or deplore their inability to realize that they'd be easier on the eye if they'd quit trying to emulate the raw oyster—which never has been pretty to look upon and, generally speaking, is an acquired taste anyhow.

For a gentleman who ordinarily bundles himself in heavy garments clear up to his Adam's apple, this warm weather strip-act entails a lot of preliminary torture. At first our gallant exhibitionist resembles a forked stalk of celery bleached out in the cellar. Soon he is one large red blot on the landscape, with fat water blisters spangling his brow until he looks as if he were wearing a chaplet of Malaga grapes. In the next stage he peels like the wallpaper on an Ohio valley parlor after flood time.

Destructive Hired Help.

SOMEBODY found a stained glass window in an English church dating back to 685 A. D., but still intact. And from the ruins of a Roman villa, they've dug out a marble figure of Apollo—the one the mineral water was named after—in a perfect state although 2,000 years old.

These discoveries are especially interesting to this family as tending to show that hired help isn't what it must have been in the ancient time.

We once had a maid of the real old Viking stock who, with the best intentions on earth, broke everything she laid finger on. Moreover, she could stand flatfooted in the middle of a large room and cause treasured articles of virtu, such as souvenirs of the St. Louis World's fair and the china urn I won for superior spelling back in 1904 at the Elks' carnival, to leap to the floor and be smashed to atoms. She didn't have to touch them or even go near them. I think she did it by animal magnetism or capillary attraction or something of that nature.

The first time we saw the Winged Victory, Mrs. Cobb and I decided it must have been an ancestor of Helsa who tried to dust it—with the disastrous results familiar to all lovers of classic statuary.

The Reaping Season.

CERTAIN crops may not have done so well, due to weather conditions, or, as some die-hard Republicans would probably contend, because of New Deal control. But, on the other hand, hasn't it been a splendid ripening season for sit-downs, walk-outs, shut-ups, lock-outs and picket lines?

It makes me think of the little story the late Myra Kelly used to tell of the time when she was a public school teacher on New York's East Side. She was questioning her class of primary-grade pupils, touching on the callings of their respective parents. She came to one tiny sad-eyed little girl, shabby and thin and shy.

"Rosie," she asked, "at what does your father work?"

"Mein poppa he don't never work, Teacher," said Rosie.

"Doesn't he do anything at all?"

"Oh, yessum."

"Well, what does he do?"

"He strikes."

"My dear, you are more than welcome," Grandmother said warmly. "Any friends of Bryn's are our friends, too, and our home is always open to them. And I am delighted to hear you discussing details of modern society. I am sure your talk will be a liberal education for Deborah, and help her to establish herself more easily when she goes out into Bryn's world with him."

Pilar's black eyes rested momentarily on Deborah. They were quite expressionless. "There will be no difficulties for Deborah," she said tenderly. "She is so adorable that she won't need to make the slightest effort. Every one will fall in love with her at first sight."

"Just as Bryn did," Sally added, and looked fleetingly at Pilar.

"Just as Bryn did," Pilar repeated, but her mouth tightened a little, Deborah saw, at the corners.

"How long are you planning to stay, Pilar?" Madeline said evenly. "Are you going home for the yacht races?"

"I really hadn't considered it. I wasn't sure I'd be invited to stay, you see."

Grandmother gave a little sigh. "I am so thankful that when Deborah does emerge into society she will have dear Bryn to take care of her. He understands so well what her life has been, and he is so thoughtful and loving. It takes a great load off my mind to have him so."

"Bryn has always been a dear," Pilar agreed at once. "I don't know what I should ever have done without Bryn," she went on. "For years, now, he has been my staunchest comrade. No matter in what difficulty I found myself, there was always Bryn, and he brought me all his troubles and joys as well. It delights my heart to know that he is happy."

Deborah did not move. Grandmother lifted her eyes and looked at Pilar frankly. "You modern girls are so honest and open," she said. "In my day a girl would never have dared to make such a statement about a man. She would have been afraid of being misunderstood."

"Misunderstood?" Pilar murmured, flicking open the lighter.

"In my day," Grandmother explained, "there were few young men such as our dear Bryn, so handsome, so eligible in every way, so fine. If a girl had been his friend always, as you have been, my child, then she would have been expected to marry him, and, indeed, she would herself have expected to marry him. I do not quite understand the new camaraderie which allows of such close friendships without any thought of marriage or romantic love. In my day, so queerly uncontrolled was human nature then, the sort of friendship you mention would have been potentially dangerous if either the girl or the man—particularly the man—married elsewhere."

Pilar's eyes narrowed the faintest trifle against the light as she looked at Grandmother. Grandmother was sitting up a little straighter than Deborah had seen her sit for some time, and there was a little pink in her cheeks. But her eyes as they met Pilar's were calm and kind, and Deborah pushed away the thought that Grandmother suspected something and was taking her own way to combat the hint of danger.

Pilar rose and stood for a moment, tall and lissome and full of grace, beside the door. She was smiling. "Customs are very different now," she murmured, and begged to be excused, and went out through the door.

There was a little silence when Pilar was gone. Deborah looked up from the puppy to find Grandmother stitching away placidly again, her eyes on her material, and Sally and Madeline looking at each other with steady meaning. Sally and Madeline didn't understand. They didn't know what it must have been like for Pilar to love Bryn, to have loved him for years, and then to have him suddenly marry another girl. They didn't know what it meant to love Bryn. Simon and Tubby were all right, of course, and perfect darlings, but they weren't Bryn. Deborah's eyes burned, and the bad lump came back in her throat.

There was a knock at the door. It was one of the maids, wanting Deborah. The cook would like her orders, the maid said respectfully. Deborah went out and shut the door behind her.

Deborah stumbled down the hall toward the kitchen. In her mind's eye she could see herself sitting on the wall the other night, with Bryn leaning close beside her. She remembered what she had wanted to do. Bryn's face was so close, and he was such a dear; she had wanted to take his face between her own two palms and bend down and put her cheek against his forehead. She had almost done it when he said . . . "Deborah, do you like me . . . at all?" But now she was glad she hadn't done it, because he wouldn't have wanted her to. It was Pilar he loved. He had said so. He had told her how dearly he loved this other girl . . . and if she hadn't been so blind she would have seen instantly that his telling her of the other girl was sure proof that he didn't love her, Deborah.

And if he did love Pilar so dearly, then Pilar was a very lovely person. Madeline and Sally didn't like her, but they didn't understand. And Bryn's heart must ache, now, to think that he was shut away from Pilar for so long; and Pilar must be suffering dreadfully.

When she was finished in the kitchen, Deborah went up the back stairs swiftly and along the hall to her room. Someone came lightly along the hall, and she caught her breath lest it should be Bryn. But it was, instead, Pilar; and she was in search of Deborah, for her own room was down in the other wing with Grandmother's. She glanced in through the open door.

"Ah, there you are, sweetie," she said. "I wondered if you'd run away. Where've you been?"

"I was down in the kitchen," Deborah explained, praying that her voice sounded as usual. "Then I came up to get some embroidery. I find myself with no work at all to do these days."

Pilar was watching her. "You are refreshing," she sighed. "But really, Deborah, you must begin to make some changes in your life, or you will be completely bewildered by Bryn's gay world. Bryn travels pretty fast, dear."

Deborah sat down slowly, with the Italian embroidery in her hand. She fingered it absently. "Hasn't Bryn explained it all to you, Pilar?" she asked at last, lifting her dark eyes.

"Explained what?" Pilar asked, after a moment.

"I know he . . . hasn't told the others. Sally, or Madeline. I don't think even Tubby knows. I'm not quite sure why he hasn't. For a while I thought it was on his own account, but now I think he has been doing it for me, so that I wouldn't feel so queer and left out."

"I don't know what you mean."

Deborah looked at her.

"You know that Bryn couldn't be in love with me," she said.

Pilar did not move. Not by a flicker did her expression change. Her eyes were black and fathomless.

"Not in love with you?" she repeated.

"Surely you knew, Pilar?"

"Even if I did," Pilar said softly, "you wouldn't expect me to . . . mention it, Deborah?"

"No," Deborah said after a moment. At Pilar's words her heart had fallen like lead. So Pilar did know. Bryn had told her.

"Bryn, of course, is a gentleman," Pilar said. "He does not tell any more than is necessary."

"No," Deborah said again. "But I can tell you, Pilar. I can explain to you."

"I was . . . hoping you would."

"I don't want to go into detail," Deborah said. "I think I can tell you in just a few words. It was like this. I had to be married by my twenty-first birthday or lose my grandfather's estate. I went down to San Francisco to meet the man I was to marry. He was . . . I couldn't possibly marry him. And Bryn came along by accident, and saw that I was frightened, and I told him about it, and he offered to marry me instead. That's all."

Pilar straightened. "I see," she said, and then, "The day I came, Tubby dragged me away and threatened me with murder if I called Bryn by anything but Graham. The man you were to marry is named Graham?"

"Yes."

"Your grandmother thinks Bryn is the man?"

"Yes."

"And what happens next?"

There was a queer note in her voice, and Deborah looked up quickly. But Pilar's face had not changed, and Deborah's eyes fell again. "Nothing," she said. "We have to go on until the end of the year, or I do not get the money. The marriage must last for a year. And it must go on for Grandmother's sake, anyway, for that long. After that . . . I don't know what we shall do to explain to Grandmother, but there will be something. Bryn will be free, then, of course."

"You cannot get the money within a year?"

"If the marriage is not successful to that extent," Deborah explained carefully, "I do not get it at all."

"Your grandmother seems very fond of Bryn."

"She loves him," Deborah said, with a little catch in her breath. "He is wonderful to her. Even if the estate were not so tied, I don't see how we could be . . . divorced . . . before that time without breaking Grandmother's heart."

Pilar turned the ivory holder between her long browned fingers. "It seems rather a long time out of Bryn's life," she said. "A year."

"I know."

"I should think there might have been somebody else, Deborah. Somebody you might have paid for his name and his lost year."

Deborah looked up again, but did not speak. Pilar was watching her. After a moment she said, "Of course, it's all very romantic, and you are really quite pretty. Any man would like to be the prince who awakens the sleeping beauty."

Deborah's eyes flew to the long oval of Pilar's face. Her own cheeks crimsoned furiously, and her eyes flashed.

Evil Eye

The objection which a high caste Brahman of India has to being seen eating by a low caste man is based on a belief allied to that of the evil eye.

Sew, Sew, Sew-Your-Own

TO MAKE you the girl of his dreams (and to keep him always dreaming), that's the happy ambition behind these newest creations by Sew-Your-Own. One of these frocks to enhance your beauty, and an evening to spend in that romantic lane of Moonlight and Roses—isn't it quite likely that you will become the girl of his dreams?

Luncheon for Two.

When he takes you out to luncheon you should be the very essence of chic. A two piecer like the one at the left will bring the sort of eye-compliments you like, and you'll find it a great boon to comfort if the date is to be soon. You will probably want it made of the season's hit material, sheer crepe. The vestee is smart in a contrasting color.

When It's Dancing.

He'll be very Scotch about giving away dances when he sees you in your copy of the frock in the center. It was really born to dance. The tucked skirt has all the thrilling sophistication of a gored one, and it's much easier to sew. Little touches of grosgrain, and pretty puff sleeves add the kind of quiet elegance that makes this your choice for those happy hours of dancing under the stars.

End of Summer.

The season, like romance, rolls swiftly. But you still have time to do a few summery things in a summery frock such as the one at the right. In dimity or swiss it will make you more youthful and charming than many a more ornate style (and after all the girl of his dreams must be young and charming). A good suggestion might be to cut a carbon copy, while you're about it, in sheer wool with long sleeves. Then there'll be nothing to worry about when a cool evening happens along.

HOLT WEEKLY NEWS

Issued Weekly From The Home Of The Biggest Co-operative Creamery In Marshall County

Verner Nelson, Publisher; Mrs. Mabel Hanson, Editor & Bus. Mgr. Holt, Marshall County, Minnesota, Friday, Aug. 13, 1937. Volume 26, Number 15

Speakes Appointed Director

Herman C. Wenzel, state commissioner of conservation last week announced the appointment of Harry E. Speakes, of St. Paul, as director of the state division of game and fish. At the same time Wenzel appointed Edward McKeever, of Duluth, deputy director.

Both appointments are effective August 16. Speakes succeeds A. C. Hanson, Wadena, game and fish director since 1935. McKeever replaces Emil Rahja of Chisholm. Rahja is to be transferred to an excutive post in another division of the conservation department.

"Mr. Speakes, a business executive of many years' experience will bring to the division of game and fish an efficient, business-like administration that should win the whole-hearted support of sportsmen througout the state," Wenzel stated.

"Both of these men are well known sportsmen and they should be able to carry on an enlightened and progressive policy of wildlife conservation."

Speakes has long been active in sportsmen's organizations, holding at various times the presidencies of the Superior Gun Club, the Northern States Amateur Field Trial association, and and the Douglas County Fish and Game Protective league.

He is 58 years old, married and has two children.

McKeever is former president of the Minnesota Izaak Walton League and the Duluth chapter of the League. He is a member of the executiv board of the Arrowhead Izaak Walton League.

He is 48 years old, married and has seven children.

Mr. and Mrs. Willie Larson, Mr. and Mrs. Sanford Brenna and son and Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Gasper and children spent Friday, Saturday and Sunday at Lake Bemidji.

4-H Club Meeting Aug. 13

The August meeting of the Holt 4-H will be held at the Holt school house on Friday evening, August 13th.

Lunch will be served by the Wm. Fluke and Holmstom families. Let's see a large attendance.

Everyone Welcome

Attention 4-Hers

In our annual plan of work, we, as 4-H members, have resolved to have a one-hundred per cent completion of projects. All home economic record blanks are due so let us, who haven't already sent them in, bring them along to next 4-H meeting or send them to Mr. Deitz, the county leader, immediately.

Let us cooperate with our fellow-4-Hers and "make the best better."

Let's make 1937 a successful 4-H club year.

Mrs. Ole Lunke and Hazel, Mrs. Bertil Ness and daughter, Mrs. A. C. Conklin and son, Mrs. Hans Knutson, Mrs. Nels Lysne and Mrs. Ole Larson and Delores and Donald gathered at the home of Mrs. Fred Larson Tuesday afternoon, the occasion being Mrs. Fred Larson and Mrs. Ole Lunkes birthdays. The honor guests received many beautiful gifts and a delicious lunch was served.

Mr. and Mrs. Willie Bakke and Mr. and Mrs. Melvin Bakke of Minneapolis motored up here Friday for a visit with old friends. The Bakke boys had not been here for 17 years and noticed quite a change in Holt.

Mrs. T. T. Sollom of Grand Forks and Mrs. Ole Johnson and daughters of Fargo are visiting at the A. L. Carlson home.

Chester Nelson has purchased the living house on the Rev. Ordahl farm east of Holt and will move it to town for a home.

Water Pours Over Dam

A dream of sportsmen in north western Minnesota came true recently when eleven inches of rain fell within a week, filled up Thief Lake, and caused water to flow over the dam at its western outlet for the first time since its construction six years ago.

Organized sportsmen in Marshall and adjacent counties had long been working to restore Thief Lake which before drainage was one of the greatest concentration points for waterfowl in the country.

Thief Lake has risen nine feet and about 8,500 acres are now under water. The great amount of additional moisture will be welcomed by CCC authorities, who have supervised the planting of trees, pond weed, wild rice, and other plant foods in the 15,000 acre Thief Lake game refuge.

About 50 nesting islet and many shelters for upland game birds and wood ducks have been established by the CCC camp.

Returned From The West

Mr. and Mrs. O. B. Johnson and family returned here last week from the west coast where they had spent several weeks visiting with relatives and friends. They reported liking the west a lot but are at present trying to buy a home near Holt.

Dim Your Lights For Safety

"In the future, arrest any night driver who does not depress his headlights," was the order that John P. Arnoldy, state highway patrol chief, gave his men Monday.

"Sufficient publicity has been given this section of the new uniform traffic act so that motorists throughout the state should know they are now required to dim their lights when passing traffic at night," the chief said. He also declared that the new law, in his belief, would result in a lowering of the highway accident rate as many of the crashes at night were caused by glaring headlights.

The chief pointed out, however, that the drivers of those vehicles that do not have multiple beam are not violating the law if they do not dim.

At the same time, he told his patrol to arrest any driver of a gasoline, naptha or benzol tank truck who does not come to a dead stop prior to crossing a railroad track.

Chief Arnoldy also ordered his men to pick up the driver of any commercial caravan where a vehicle is pulled and which does not have brakes that can be operated by the driver in the tow car. This order applies also to drivers of new automobiles in transit pulling another car.

Declaring that the highways of Minnesota must be made safer even if wholesale arrests are necessary, the highway patrol head instructed his men to go into action whenever an infringement of the law was detected.

Crops And Hay Drowned Out

As far as we can see now the crops and hay in Mud Lake area are going to be a total loss this year. Some farmers have told us they will not be able to cut any grain or hay. The hay that was put up before the heavy rains has all rotted in the stacks and fields by now.

According to a news story in Grand Forks Herald for Tuesday, Mr. Chas. Aamodt, Commissioner of Agriculture for Minnesota, had made an aeroplane trip over this territory on Monday with the view of determining the amount of damage done to crops by water. It is figured that those who lost all hay and crop will be given some relief in the near future.

According to the report it was stated that about twenty townships in Marshall County were either all or partly drowned out by the heavy rains we have had here and in the eastern end of the county.

Mr. and Mrs. Oscar Vigness, Mrs. John Efteland and Mrs. Gust Johnson of Thief River Falls visited at the Mrs. Fred Larson home Sunday afternoon.

Rev. and Mrs. Chell of Benson Minn., visited at the A. O. Aspelin home Friday evening.

Jeanette Lanman of McIntosh and Mrs. Ben Nyberg of Danube visited friends here Friday.

Oscar Hagglund of International Falls spent Saturday and Sunday here with relatives.

Reorganize Warden Force

A sweeping reorgonization of the state game warden force, including the establishment of eight or more law enforcement districts under the supervision of chief wardens selected by competitive examinations, was outlined last week by Conservation Commissioner H. C. Wenzel.

According to tentative plans now being made, each district warden would have from ten to fifteen wardens under his direct supervision. District wardens would be selected on a basis of general ability, character, and personality, as well as records made in examinations.

All district wardens would be responsible to a chief warden in the St. Paul offices and to the deputy director of the division of game and fish.

It is planned to furnish all wardens with uniforms. "I believe that uniformed game wardens will inspire respect for the law, and will demonstrate to the public that game wardens are on the job," Wenzel said. "Other states have found this system very successful, and we intend to profit from their experience in enforcing game and fish laws for the benefit of all citizens."

The farmers in this community are having a hard time of their harvest work this year. Some of them are using two tractors with a power take-off on the binder and the binder mounted on a stone boat so the bull-wheel rides free from the ground.

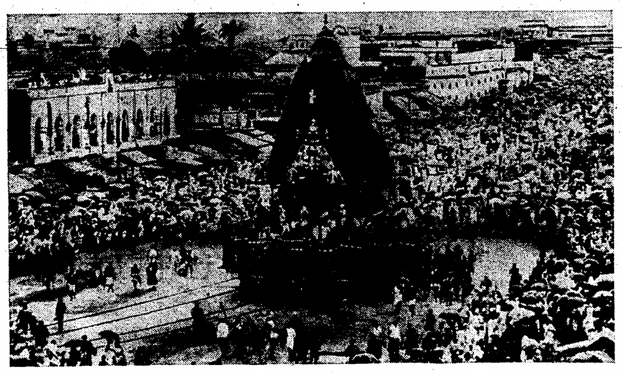
Indian Pilgrims Hail Juggernaut Festival



View of the scene in Puri, India, as the car of the Jagganath (Juggernaut) was hauled by thousands of pilgrims in the recent festival of "The Lord of the World." In olden days, these huge vehicles in which devout Hindus take their gods for a ride once a year often became uncontrollable and pilgrims were crushed beneath the wheels. In recent years police regulations have been so stringent that accidents rarely happen.

Watch Your Kidneys!
Help Them Cleanse the Blood of Harmful Body Waste
Your kidneys are constantly filtering waste matter from the blood stream. But kidneys sometimes lag in their work—do not act as Nature intended—fail to remove impurities that, if retained, may poison the system and upset the whole body machinery.
Symptoms may be nagging backache, persistent headache, attacks of dizziness, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes—a feeling of nervous anxiety and loss of pep and strength.
Other signs of kidney or bladder disorder may be burning, scanty or too frequent urination.
There should be no doubt that prompt treatment is wiser than neglect. Use Doan's Pills. Doan's have been winning new friends for more than forty years. They have a nation-wide reputation. Are recommended by grateful people the country over. Ask your neighbor!

This Business of Golf.

OAKLAND, CALIF.—As I sit writing this, I look out where elderly gentlemen, intent on relaxing, may be seen tensing themselves up tighter than a cocked wolf-trap, and then staggering toward the clubhouse with every nerve standing on end and screaming for help and highballs.

I smile at them, for I am one who has given up golf. You might even go so far as to say golf gave me up. I tried and tried, but I never broke a typhoid patient's temperature chart — never got below 102. I spent so much time climbing into sand-traps and out again that people began thinking I was a new kind of hermit, living by preference in bunkers—the old man of the link beds, they'd be calling me next.

Irvin S. Cobb

And I used to slice so far into the rough that, looking for my ball, I penetrated jungles where the foot of man hadn't trod since the early mound builders. That's how I added many rare specimens to my collection of Indian relics.

But the last straw was when a Scotch professional, after morbidly watching my form, told me that at any rate there was one thing about me which was correct—I did have on golf stockings!

Congressional Boldness.

WARNING to pet lovers: If you own guinea pigs or tame rabbits or trained seals or such-like gentle creatures, try to keep the word from them that some of the majority members of the lower branch of congress actually threatened to defy their master's voice.

The senate always has been known as the world's greatest deliberative body—and, week by week and month by month don't those elder statesmen know how to deliberate! But these last few years the house has earned the reputation of being the most docile legislative outfit since Aesop's King Stork ruled over the synod of the frogs.

So should the news ever spread among the lesser creatures, hitherto so placid and biddable, that an example had been set at Washington, there's no telling when the Belgian hares will start rampaging and the singing mice will begin acting up rough and the grubworms will gang against the big old woodpecker.

Professional Orators.

WE HAVE in Southern California a professional orator who long ago discovered that the most dulcet music on earth was the sound of his own voice. He'll speak anywhere at the drop of the hat and provide the hat.

What's worse, this coast-defender of ours labors under the delusion that, if he shouts at the top of his voice, his eloquence will be all the more forceful. The only way to avoid meeting him at dinner is to eat at an owl wagon. But the other night, at an important banquet, he strangely was missing from the array of speakers at the head table. One guest turned in amazement to his neighbor:

"Where's Blank?" he inquired, naming the absentee.

"Didn't you hear?" answered the other. "He busted a couple of ear drums."

"Whose?" said the first fellow.

Foes of Nazidom.

THE veteran Rabbi Stephen Wise of New York has been reasonably outspoken in his views on Nazi treatment of his own co-religionists and the practitioners of other faiths as well. And one of the most venerable prelates of the Catholic church in Europe, while discussing the same subject, hasn't exactly pulled his punches, either.

So what? A friend just back from abroad tells me that in Berlin he heard a high government officer fiercely denounce these two distinguished men. About the mildest thing the speaker said about them was that both were senile. Somehow or other, the speech wasn't printed in the German papers—maybe by orders from on high.

Well, far be it from this innocent bystander to get into religious arguments and besides I have no first-hand knowledge as to the Christian clergyman's state of health, although, judging by his utterances, there's nothing particularly wrong with his mind. But I do know Rabbi Wise, and, if he's in his dotage, so is Shirley Temple. And I risk the assertion that he would be perfectly willing to have one foot in the grave if he could have the other on Herr Hitler's neck.

"I don't know quite what you are suggesting," she said icily, "but I think you are being insulting."

"Not at all," Pilar replied. "I am merely trying to discover Bryn's reason for this quixotic gesture. It certainly cannot be that he is willing to spend a year with you for your platonic companionship, Deborah. Obviously, you are not suited to be a companion to him. You have not the sophistication, the knowledge of his world. You scarcely speak his language. You say he does not love you; I think that would be impossible, too. There must be companionship in real love, an equality. But I think I do begin to see his reason. There you were, beauty in distress . . . and Bryn was always fond of a new adventure. Something new, something nobody has ever done before. Yes, it becomes quite clear to me. And he would get considerable enjoyment out of this play-acting to your grandmother, this pretense of being simple and bucolic, this pretense of loving you. It is rather an interesting situation, as I must admit."

Deborah was staring at her. "I don't think I care to discuss it any further," she said quietly, "if you don't mind, Pilar."

"There isn't much more to say, is there? Except that I suppose I ought to thank you for explaining it to me, Deborah. I have been . . . troubled. You can understand."

Deborah folded her linen. "Yes," she said.

"Bryn is very difficult," Pilar sighed. "I think this has been the worst fright he has given me. But once, two years ago, I was nearly mad, too. He was in Thibet, and I didn't hear from him for nearly six months. It was reported that he was dead. Of course, he wasn't, nor lost either. He was just living in a native tribe, living like a native, to get the atmosphere, he said. He's wildly interested in people, different kinds of people, the farther from his own kind, the better. But he always comes back in the end, I have discovered that. And when he came back from Thibet," she said with a smile, "he brought me my ring. This ruby. Isn't it a beauty?"

The ruby flashed and glowed on her finger as she held it out for Deborah to see. "It is very lovely," Deborah said gently.

Gary tapped on the door-casing. "Miss Deborah, please," he said. "Mr. Bryn would like a dry pair of shoes. Might I go through and get them?"

"Certainly, Gary."

With a little half bow to Pilar he sidled past her and opened the door on the left. He pushed it back and left it open as he went in, and Pilar, glancing through, saw the narrow white bed against the other wall. She turned deliberately and looked at Deborah's closed bedroom door, and then, with a deep breath, she looked at Deborah and smiled.

"It's all very romantic, isn't it?" she said, and went swiftly across to the hall door. "Thank you for telling me, Deborah. It makes rather a difference."

Bryn had been over in the stable talking to Joe, who came to milk every evening as punctually as sunset.

As he approached the bridge his eyes caught the flutter of a skirt, and his heart turned a complete double somersault. If he had been in any need of proof as to his emotional condition, he had it then. But the skirt did not belong to Deborah; it was much too sophisticated a skirt for that, as he saw at second glance, and his heart settled down sadly into a recumbent position again, and he went forward without interest to meet Pilar.

She was standing in the middle of the bridge, leaning over the railing to look into the water. Bryn stopped beside her, put his elbows on the railing, and gazed down into the brook, too, without a word. Pilar turned, after a moment, and smiled at him; the flashing brilliant smile that was peculiarly her own, that no one else could duplicate. "You know," she said, "I don't blame you for burying yourself away up here, Bryn. It's so far back in Nature that I don't suppose you've ever had quite the same experience before, have you?"

Bryn glanced down at her. Her black eyes, liquid and melting, met his. Her lips were very red.

"No," he replied. "Never."

There was a little silence. They stood together, elbows touching. After a moment Pilar said softly, "Deborah told me her story today."

"Deborah?" he repeated.

"She seemed to think I ought to be told, Bryn."

"Oh."

The black eyes opened wide again. "Had yo . . . talked to her about me?"

"Never," Bryn said promptly.

"Oh," Pilar murmured. "I had an idea you had, perhaps. She certainly knew that we had been friends for a long time. Of course, that may be obvious. Whatever she knew, she wanted me to understand just what the situation was between you. Dear quaint little thing!"

"What did she say the . . . situation was between us, then?"

"Why, simply that this wasn't, as all of us thought, a love match after all. That it was simply a marriage de convenance. I don't quite know why you, of all people, Bryn, had to tangle yourself in it. You may have difficulty in getting free again."

"So she told you we weren't in love with each other?"

"Yes, quite without restraint. It seems rather queer that a girl could be so absolutely cool and businesslike about her marriage, even if it were this kind of marriage. But of course it is not in the least romantic to her, and does not affect her emotions at all, so why should she be anything but businesslike? Do you really mean to stay here for a whole year?" she asked with a sigh. "Is it really necessary?"

"Yes."

"Grandmother's no fool. She's a good deal sharper than you think, Bryn."

"What do you mean?"

"I don't think you're fooling her for a minute. She knows you and the girl aren't living together as man and wife. She must know it. Anybody can see it with half an eye."

"Can they? How?"

"By that child's face, of course."

"I see," Bryn said quietly.

Pilar put her hand on his arm. "Tell her," she begged. "Go and have a talk with the old lady Bryn, and tell her the truth."

"Why?"

"I do think it is too much for them to ask you to sacrifice your life for a whole year to an old lady's whim. She wouldn't die, Bryn. I tell you she is a lot stronger than you think she is, and a lot sharper."

"But I Think You Are Being Insulting."

Bryn laughed. To Pilar it was not exactly a pleasant laugh, and she winced a little as she heard it. "I'm not sacrificing my life," he said.

"What do you mean?" she asked, sharply.

"Leaving here would be sacrificing my life, Pilar. Don't you understand? I care more for Grandmother's left eyebrow than I do for everybody I ever know before, and as for Deborah . . ."

"As for Deborah?"

"Well," Bryn said at last, "upon racking my brains, I can't think of anything in the world that you could put in the scales to balance Deborah that would push them down a feather's weight."

"Are you trying to tell me that you're in love with her?"

"That is my general idea."

She came a step closer. "Listen Bryn," she said, under her breath. "Listen . . . you're bewitched. You're mad. You can't marry Deborah. You can't do it."

"I can," Bryn said happily. "I have."

She made a despairing gesture. "I mean . . . a real marriage. Why, she'd drive you crazy, Bryn! She'd drive you mad. What does she know about life, or the world, or any kind of culture? She has no sophistication, she has no polish. She's nothing but an ignorant child, pretty, I grant you, but as insipid as . . . as brook water. In two years—in five years, what are you going to have for a wife? There's nothing there, Bryn. Don't be carried away by a pretty face. You need intelligence, you need companionship, you need a wife who is your equal, who understands your position in the world and can help you carry it off."

Bryn was looking at her, unhappily, compassionately. "I'm sorry, Pilar," he said gently. "I'm afraid it's not I who am making the mistake about life. You are not quite fair to Deborah, but we will pass that over. You suggest that I would be happy with sophistication and polish, and a woman who understands my position and can help me to carry it off. Those things mean nothing, Pilar. I've seen a whole world full of girls such as you describe, and not one of them has meant anything to me. They're all alike, Pilar, all cut to a pattern, and a false pattern at that. I never knew what it was to be in love until I saw Deborah. I never stopped to think what it is that a man really wants out of life. I'll tell you what it is, now. He wants a girl of his own, and then he wants his own fireside; and then he wants his son. Do you understand that, Pilar? And when he finds the loveliest girl in the world, whose mind is as pure and sweet as Deborah's, whose heart is completely untouched, whose emotions and perceptions are as delicate as a flower in spring, and who is absolutey kind and unselfish, Pilar, what can he do but fall in love with her? That's how I feel about Deborah. I know she doesn't love me now, but if I get the time and the opportunity I'm going to do my best to make her love me, and I'm not sure I can't succeed, even if she is a thousand times too good for me."

Large Advance Enrollment

The Northwest School, with the largest advance enrollment in the school history, is facing a banner year according to Superintendent T. M. McCall. A total of 349 students have paid advance room reservations in order to make sure of rooms at the school. This advance enrollment is fifty per cent higher than one year ago at which time an all-time record of 401 was made for the school year. The dormitories will be taxed to capacity this year; special provision is being made to accomodate a large number of girls in the Home Economics building with Miss Elsie Kingston as receptress. It is apparent that the crowded condition in the dormitories will continue until such time as the State Legislature can approve of the University building needs.

Some of the factors contributing to the steady growth of the Northwest School, according to Superintendent McCall are: the six-months school year which permits the boys and girls to spend their entire summer season on the farm, the tuition aid for eighth grade graduates, the happy combination of academic and practical work, the school family social activities, and the academic ranking which permits the four year graduates to enter as freshmen in colleges and universities.

Another rain fell here over the week end. It seems that it is going to be next to impossible for the farmers to get their crops and hay cut this year. The mosquitoes are as bad as ever.

The new blacksmith shop built here by Hilmer Erickson, local blacksmith, is now ready for occupation. Mr. Erickson will have an up-to-date place when he gets his machinery and equipment moved in there.

Ommodt Makes Inspection

State Agricultural Commissioner Charles Ommodt will make a tour this week of the areas most effected by the grasshopper infestation. He will take with him leading insect experts of the University of Minnesota. The plague this year is called in many places "the worst in sixty years." Ommodt will take personal charge of the campaign to wipe out the menace. In the flood sections in northern Minnesota all available state forces have been assigned to aid the flood victims. Reports show that $2,000,000 damage has been done by the waters. As many as 1200 families are in need of some form of help—mainly cash for going expenses, feed for livestock and seed. Part time work on ditch projects and on the highways will be provided for those needing the work.

Caught 48 Lb. Muskie

Here's one that sportsmen are going to consider when planning their next years fishing trip.

Last Wednesday afternoon, Lawrence Saurdiff, captain of the Booth boat Scout, caught a 48 pound, 2 ounce muskie off Brush Island near American Point. It took over an hour to land the big fish.

This fish comes extremely close to the 52½ pound muskie, largest ever caught in North American waters, which was the prize hook and line catch made in this lake by Mr. Collins of Baudette several years ago.

Mr. Saurdiff's catch has been entered in the Fitgers contest which is open in Minnesota, Wisconsin and Michigan. The chances are mighty slim that a larger muskie will be caught this year, tho some monsters have been pulled out of these waters.

Lake of the Woods continues to be, as Robert Page Lincoln stated in a magazine article several years ago, "the last great muskie fishing ground in North America."—Warroad Pioneer

The Federal Department of Commerce has just announced that Minnesota industry increased by 436 firms in the two-year period from 1933 to 1935. Secretary of State figures show that in 1936, 600 new firms, exclusive of co-ops, were formed in Minnesota, while for the first two months of this year 115 new corporations, other than co-ops, were established here. —Minnesota Leader.

Hail - Wind - Heavy Rain

On Wednesday afternoon this community was visited by a hard wind storm accompanied by heavy rain and a bad streak of hail. Hail stones as big as base balls fell here and east of Holt it was reported as being worse. Many autos that were out in the storm were damaged by the hail.

It just seems to be laid out that what little crops are left in this community must be destroyed one way or another in 1937.

A guard of honor will stand at the late governor's grave in Lakewood cemetery in Minneapolis from 9 a. m. to 2 p. m. to receive and place floral tributes. Group pilgrimages from all sections of Minnesota to the grave are expected.

Services at Northrup auditorium will consist of organ music and hymns by a Norwegian group chorus. Represenatives of three religious denominations, Catholic, Protestant, and Jew, will speak, and a tribute to the late governor will be paid by the present Governor Benson.

No Dyke-No Ditch-No Water

Jim Johnson, who lives in Mud Lake, says that Mud Lake is brim full of water in spite of all the drainage that has been done. Kuriko lake, which is ¼ of a mile north of Mud Lake, is dry. The reason for this strange condition, he says, must be because Kuriko Lake has never been ditched or drained.

A. O. Aspelin and daughter Caroline Aspelin left Sunday for a two weeks vacation trip. Miss Aspelin is assistant cashier at the Marshall County State Bank of Holt.

Release Chukar Partridges

More than 400 three to four-week old chuker partridges are now on hand at the Carlos Avery Game Farm, according to Frank Blair, Superintendent of propagation.

Small numbers of chukars will be released in experimental areas this year to determine the feasibility of propagating them on a large scale.

The birds will be liberated in the worst as well as the best pheasant territory in Minnesota, and it is hoped that they will survive in regions where pheasant stocking has not been successful.

A native of Napal, China, the chukar partridge is reputed to be the hardiest of all artificially propagated birds, having been known to thrive in altitudes as high as 14,000 feet above sea evel.

Don't Neglect Them!

Nature designed the kidneys to do a marvelous job. Their task is to keep the flowing blood stream free of an excess of toxic impurities. The act of living—life itself—is constantly producing waste matter the kidneys must remove from the blood if good health is to endure.

When the kidneys fail to function as Nature intended, there is retention of waste that may cause body-wide distress. One may suffer nagging backache, persistent headache, attacks of dizziness, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes—feel tired, nervous, all worn out.

Frequent, scanty or burning passages may be further evidence of kidney or bladder disturbance.

CHAPTER X

Pilar stood motionless, her hands clasped tightly around the railing, staring at him. Bryn moved off again, toward the house. He suggested to Pilar that they go in, but she shook her head and did not answer, and Bryn did not wait. It had suddenly occurred to him what it was that he must do, and do quickly. He must find Deborah, and tell her that he loved her. He reached the door of her sitting room. He tapped. There was no answer. He entered, and closed the door gently behind him.

Bryn hesitated, his eyes going to her closed bedroom door. He straightened his shoulders. He rapped lightly on the door. She would be there. She would be dressing for dinner.

"Yes?" her voice answered, softly with that small lilt in it that sang in his heart night and day.

"It's I, Bryn," he said. "I . . . could you come out and . . . and speak to me? I want to tell you something."

"There was a little hesitation, and then she said quietly, "Just a minute." And, after the minute, she opened the door and came out.

She was wearing a dress he had never seen, another old-fashioned one, the quaintest and most old-fashioned one possible, but her beauty in it took his breath away.

"You wanted to tell me something?" she repeated.

Bryn looked at her. There she was, the girl he loved, with his wedding ring on her finger; and he had come racing to tell her that he loved her, and now that she was here before him, he was afraid.

"Aren't you going to tell me something?" Deborah repeated, knitting her brows faintly.

Bryn started. "Yes," he muttered. He swallowed. "Deborah, that is . . . did she . . . I mean, what did Pilar say to you this morning? I mean, what she said isn't important, but I want to know . . . that is, did she try to make you think that . . ."

Deborah was looking at him with those quiet eyes. She shook her head. "It doesn't matter," she said gently. "I understand."

Bryn took a deep breath. "You . . . you don't understand," he protested. "I'm trying to say that whatever she told you was wrong. It isn't true."

Her glance dropped quickly to her hands, clasped together before her. "It is true," she said with conviction.

"What is?" Bryn said in desperation.

"What she said. But it doesn't matter, you know. That is, not to me. I can imagine that you must be troubled, when you think about the position you find yourself in, but you needn't be troubled on my account. Really, Bryn. If only we . . . if only there were some way . . . but Grandmother . . ."

"The position I find myself in?" Bryn repeated incredulously. "What position do I find myself in?"

Deborah was silent for a long moment, her eyes still hidden. Then she raised them, and said, "Let's not discuss it, Bryn. It isn't necessary."

"Did she suggest," Bryn demanded tensely, "did she suggest that I was, or ever had been, in love with her? I suppose that's not a question a man ought to ask, but I think I'm justified. I'm just beginning to wake up to a number of things. Tell me . . . did she?"

Deborah's eyes darkened. "She showed me her ring."

"Her ring? What ring?"

"The ruby you gave her."

"Oh," Bryn said after a moment. He turned and walked away across the room. He couldn't stand being there so close to her without touching her, and there was still too much between them to think of touching her. "Did she suggest it was an engagement ring, Deborah? Did she dare say it was?"

"I . . . it wasn't what she said. I thought that was what she meant. But you needn't explain these things to me, Bryn. There isn't any explanation due me, you know. The explanation, it seems to me, is due to Pilar herself. She . . . she doesn't know exactly why you married me. It must puzzle her dreadfully. It must hurt her. Couldn't you tell her? She is all torn to pieces with being hurt about it, wondering about it. I can see why she talks as she does. I don't quite . . . it doesn't matter," she said hastily, and then, again, "I think you ought to tell her."

"I have told her," Bryn said, and came a step closer. "She knows exactly why I wanted to marry you, Deborah. Nobody in this world could have it any plainer."

"I'm glad."

Bryn came back to stand before her. "Deborah, if I explain about that ring, will you believe me?"

"It isn't necessary for you to explain. It isn't any of my business."

"But I want to explain. Will you believe me?"

Her eyes met his steadily. "Of course. But . . ."

"Don't object, please. Listen, Deborah . . . it was as businesslike a transaction as this. When I went to the Orient I was headed for India. We had talked all sorts of nonsense about jewels and precious stones and old treasures there, and after I got there I kept my eyes open for that sort of thing . . . and once or twice, in writing home to Pilar, I told her about one or two things I'd seen. So, in one letter I had from her, she enclosed a check and asked me to buy her the most beautiful ruby I could find. I bought the ruby, and had it set for her in India. That's the ring that she is wearing now."

Deborah did not speak. Bryn moved a step closer. He put out his hand and touched hers, gently. He took her cold fingers within his own, and held them as he spoke. She did not draw away.

"I have an engagement ring to give," he told her. "It was my mother's. It isn't a ruby, Deborah. It's a pearl. And the ring itself is much too small for Pilar's hand. I didn't realize it until lately, but I think I've been waiting all my life for a girl who could wear my mother's ring."

Deborah drew her hand away swiftly, and put them both behind her. She stared up at him, her face pale. Her eyes were very dark. Bryn stood silent, smiling down at her.

"Do you know what I'm trying to say, Deborah?"

They stood so, facing each other, eyes clinging together. Bryn took a step forward, lost, the world swinging around him.

A long slow sound floated in through the open windows. It persisted. It cut into his consciousness. Deborah heard it, too. She caught her breath.

It was Joe's horn, clear, demanding. It came again.

A wave of color began to sweep up over Deborah's face. She moved quickly. She had heard the horn, too, but now . . . she smiled at him.

Bryn put his arms out. He put them around her, lifted her off her feet, held her close against his breast. She buried her face against him. He bent and kissed the tip of her ear.

"I love you," he whispered, then set her gently on the floor and went swiftly away lest he should be tempted to look into her eyes again and so forgot what must be done at once for the sake of her happiness.

Bryn dashed madly down the stairs and out of the house. Half-way down the path to the little bridge he overtook Tubby, thrust his arm through the crook of Tubby's elbow and dragged him along.

"And Who Are You?" He Inquired Belligerently.

Bryn flung open the narrow door at the back of the stable, and they stepped inside. Simon was already there, leaning against Bryn's car at the end of the row, his cigarette glowing brightly.

"Well," Bryn announced, "here we are, little buttercup."

"Oh," Simon murmured. "That's nice."

The headlights of a car came slowly across the bridge down at the road. A man's voice called out something in a sharp tone, and Gary answered from the gate. The car turned; the gate opened; the car swung through and stopped, as Gary shut the gates behind it and fastened them, according to his instructions. He came back to the car, climbed to the running board and stood beside the driver as it moved slowly forward toward the wide door of the stable.

"It's Graham, all right," Bryn decided. He stepped through the narrow door beside Hazel's stall, and the others followed.

The car jerked across the end of the incline, and slid along with protesting brakes to a halt beside the shadowy bulk of Pilar's car. Gary got down off the running board and went immediately back to slide the stable doors shut. Meanwhile, the driver flung open his door and stepped out, and one look at him was sufficient to assure Bryn that this was, without any shadow of doubt, Stuart Graham at last. He was out of his navy blues and in dark civilian clothes, a big blocky figure with tremendously wide shoulders that swung as he moved.

He was speaking to Gary. "Mrs. Larned expects me?"

"Yes, sir."

"Miss Mayne arrived home again safely?"

"Yes, sir."

Bryn stepped in through the narrow door. He was not a yard from Graham.

"How do you do," Bryn said pleasantly.

Graham whirled. He surveyed Bryn steadily, with eyes that glinted in the light. "And who are you?" he inquired belligerently.

Bryn lifted his eyebrows. "Sure you don't remember me, Graham?"

Graham straightened. His hand, hanging at his side, clenched itself. "So," he said softly. "It's you."

"Yes."

what Irvin S. Cobb thinks about:

Advertising's Value.

VERNALIS, CALIF.—On the train a charming young woman said: "I always read the advertisements whether I want to buy anything or not. Do you think I'm crazy?"

I told her she was the smartest young woman I knew. If I were asked to describe the race in any bygone period since printer's ink came into common use, I'd turn to the advertising in the papers and periodicals of that particular age. For then I'd know what people wore and what they ate and what their sports were and their follies and their tastes and their habits; know what they did when they were healthy and what they took when they were sick and of what they died and how they were buried and where they expected to go after they left here—in short, I'd get a picture of humanity as it was and not as some prejudiced historian, writing then or later, would have me believe it conceivably might have been.

Irvin S. Cobb

I'd rather be able to decipher the want ad on the back side of a Chaldean brick than the king's edict on the front—that is, if I craved to get an authentic glimpse at ancient Chaldea.

Running a Hotel.

I'VE just been a guest at one of the best small-town hotels in America. I should know about good hotels because, in bygone days, I stopped at all the bad ones.

The worst was one back East—built over a jungle of side tracks. I wrote a piece about that hotel. It had hot and cold running cockroaches on every floor and all-night switch-engine service; the room towels only needed buttons on them to be peekaboo waists, but the roller towel in the public washroom had, through the years, so solidified that if the house burned down it surely would have been left standing. The cook labored under the delusion that a fly was something to cook with.

Everybody who'd ever registered there recognized the establishment. So the citizens raised funds and tore down their old hotel, thereby making homeless wanderers of half a million resident bedbugs; and they put up a fine new hotel which paid a profit, whereas the old one had been losing money ever since the fall of Richmond.

A good hotel is the best advertisement any town can have, but a bad one is just the same as an extra pesthouse where the patients have to pay.

Poor Lo's Knowledge.

SOMETIMES I wonder whether we, the perfected flower of civilization—and if you don't believe we are, just ask us—can really be as smart as we let on.

Lately, out on the high seas, I met an educated Hopi, who said to me:

"White people get wrong and stay wrong when right before their eyes is proof to show how wrong they are. For instance, take your delusion that there are only four direction points—an error which you've persisted in ever since you invented the compass, a thing our people never needed. Every Indian knows better than that."

"Well then," I said, "how many are there, since you know so much?"

"Seven," he said, "seven in all."

"Name 'em," I demanded.

"With pleasure," he said. "Here they are: north, east, south, west, up, down and here."

Of course, there's a catch in it somewhere, but, to date, I haven't figured it out.

The Russian Puzzle.

UNDER the present beneficent regime, no prominent figure in Russia's government, whether military or civil, is pestered by the cankering fear which besets an official in some less favored land, namely, that he'll wear out in harness and wither in obscurity.

All General So-and-Soski or Commissar Whatyoumaycallovitch has to do is let suspicion get about that he's not in entire accord with administration policies and promptly he commits suicide—by request; or is invited out to be shot at sunrise.

To be sure, the notion isn't new. The late Emperor Nero had numerous well-wishers, including family relatives, that he felt he could spare and he just up and spared them. And, in our own time, Al Capone built quite an organization for taking care of such associates as seemed lacking in the faith. 'Twas a great boon to the floral design business, too, while it lasted.

But in Russia where they really do things—there no job-holder need ever worry about old age. Brer Stalin's boys will attend to all necessary details, except the one, formerly so popular in Chicago, of sending flowers to the funeral.

Here's Planned Prettiness

IF AUTUMN comes will you be left behind with faded summer frocks, Madam? No, no, many times no—that is, not if you will but accept this cordial invitation from Sew-Your-Own. It's the easy way to become frock-sure of chic for yourself and your daughters, as well. So Madam, why not sew, sew, sew-your-own!

Chic for the G. F.

And a treat for all concerned is the frock Sew-Your-Own has created for The Girl Friend. She may be collegiate, high schoolish, a steno, mother's helper, or a young lady of leisure, but whatever she is she'll look the part and prettier in a take-off on Pattern 1327. It is new, novel, and easy to sew. It is undoubtedly the frock to wear when your escort, the time, and the place are important.

Pattern 1372 is designed for sizes 34 to 46. Size 36 requires 4⅝ yards of 35-inch material.

Pattern 1987 is designed for sizes 4, 6, 8, 10, and 12 years. Size 6 requires 2 yards of 35-inch material, plus ⅜ yard contrasting.

Pattern 1327 is designed for sizes 12 to 20 (30 to 38 bust). Size 16 requires 4¼ yards of 39-inch material, plus 3½ yards of cord for lacing. With long sleeves, 4⅝ yards required.

Time Repays Labor

Time is an Estate that will produce nothing without culture, but will always abundantly repay the labors of industry.—Johnson.

Gift of Humility

O, the beauty of humility! How rare it is to find people possessing some gift, who do not boast of it and hold it up before others as a wonderful thing, which should be much talked of and noticed.

Every talent we have is a gift of God; we have nothing to do with it except to cultivate and take care of it, and to thank God for it. It is right that we should be aware of this especial favor to us, but not to be boastful and conceited over it.

Ask Me Another?

A Quiz With Answers Offering Information on Various Subjects

1. What countries have dictators at present?
2. Is there any guide to the length of sentences when one is preparing a lecture?
3. How is GPU (Russia's secret police) pronounced?
4. By what title was Commodore Perry known to the Japanese?
5. How fast do bullets travel?

Answers

1. The principal dictatorships are Russia, Austria, Italy, Germany, Turkey, Hungary, Bulgaria, Albania and Mexico.
2. There is the generalization that sentences should not be long. Twenty-four words is a safe maximum.
3. GPU is pronounced Gay'pay-ooh—but only by foreigners. Russians do not mention the name, sometimes referring to them as the "three-letter men."
4. For diplomatic purposes Perry created for himself the title of "Lord of the Forbidden Interior," but, of course, he did not actually hold such a title.
5. Military rifles drive their bullets at speeds of from 2,000 to 3,000 feet per second. The Gerlich bullet, one of the speediest, is capable of traveling almost a mile a second.

Why Firestone STANDARD TIRES are

EXTRA SAFE

TAPPING RUBBER TREES ON FIRESTONE PLANTATIONS IN LIBERIA

From these plantations comes an ever increasing supply of the world's finest rubber. Economies in producing raw materials, manufacturing and distribution make it possible for Firestone to give you so much for your money.

YOU GET EXTRA PROTECTION AGAINST BLOWOUTS—eight extra pounds of rubber are added to every 100 pounds of cord by the Firestone patented Gum-Dipping process. By this process every fiber in every cord in every ply is saturated with liquid rubber. This counteracts dangerous internal friction and heat that ordinarily cause blowouts.

YOU GET EXTRA PROTECTION AGAINST PUNCTURES—because under the tread are two extra layers of Gum-Dipped cords.

YOU GET EXTRA PROTECTION AGAINST SKIDDING—because the tread is scientifically designed.

YOU GET LONGER NON-SKID MILEAGE because of the extra tough, long-wearing tread.

Firestone Standard Tires give you all these extra value features because they are first-quality tires built with high-grade materials and patented construction features. You SAVE MONEY because you buy this high quality and extra value at such low prices.

Before leaving on your vacation trip, join the Firestone SAVE A LIFE Campaign by equipping your car with a set of new Firestone Standard Tires —today's top tire value. See your nearest Firestone Dealer or Firestone Auto Supply and Service Store.

Safetygrams

BY FRED W. BRAUN
The Safety Man

Have you ever examined extension cords and sockets in your home?

There are few who have not at some time or other had a shock from fixtures, wires, switches, or appliances. Some even brag that "I dont mind 110 volts."

The only reason that some of us survived the experience is that we were standiag on and touching nothing but some dry non-metallic substance not connected to a ground, such as a floors, a rug, or a chair, which was a sufficiently good insulator to protect us from the fatal shock.

We will not always be so fortunate if we remain so careless. Be careful with these extension cords, sockets, and lighting fixtures. It will be well worth your time to make a thorough check of them.

Mr. and Mrs. R. L. Adams of Grand Forks visited with relatives here on Monday.

Jacob Brown and family of Warren were callers here on Monday.

Thatcher Wheat Yields Good

The performance of Thatcher wheat this year has been outstanding, according to R. S. Dunham, agronomist at the Northwest School and Experiment Station, Crookston. Wheat at the station has not been threshed yet, says Mr. Dunham, but yields reported by farmers have run from 25 to 35 bushels per acre. It is not true, however, that Thatcher yields well only in years of heavy stem rust epidemics. Thatcher withstood the rust in 1935 and again this year so much better than Marquis Reward, or Ceres that it yielded heavily by comparison but it has been a consistently good yielder in other years as well. Thatcher has been grown in the varietal plots at the Northwest Station since 1929. In only two of the 8 years has Ceres outyielded it and in those two years only by 4.2 and 2.5 bu. respectively. Marquis has never outyielded it and Reward only once by 2.3 bu.

Thatcher has its faults and improved varieties will take its place as time goes on. At present there is no variety of bread wheat in commercial distribution that is so dependable for yield, rust resistance, and milling quality. It is unwise to plant Thatcher late since any rust-resistant wheat is influenced by the condition under which it is grown and late planting in bad rust years is conductive to injury by rust. However, in trials at the Northwest Station this year, Thatcher planted as late as June first was not seriously injured by rust, and that planted May 15 was only slightly affected. About 70 per cent of the plants in both the May 15 and June 1 sowing carried stem rust infection but the pustules were small and of the resistant type. Thatcher planted May 6th or earlier carried only a trace of stem rust, that planted May 15 carried up to 15 per cent, and that planted June 1 carried as much as 50 per cent on a few plants. Yields are not available at this time but will be reported later.

A very small percentage of the wheat acreage in the Red River Valley was in Thatcher this year. If all wheat had been of this variety it would have increased the farm income by thousands of dollars. It would seem only fair for those who have Thatcher seed to withhold it from sale in Canada and other states at least until Minnesota farmers have a chance to buy it, and those who want such seed should make their needs known early. Those with Thatcher wheat cannot be blamed for selling outside the state if the need in this state is not made known early.

Those who plan to sow Thatcher next year should plan on testing the seed with New Improved Ceresan. Some reduction in yield of Thatcher this year was due to root rot. Testing the seed may not eliminate this trouble but will control it. It would be safest also not to plant Thatcher on wheat, barley, or corn ground. For further information on Thatcher and root rot, write to the Northwest School for a Crops and Soils Handbook.

L. Monson Bought Farm

According to word received at this office, Ludvig Monson, Mud Lake farmer has purchased the 320 acre improved farm from Carl Lindholm northeast from this village.

Damages Reported Heavy

Signs grew last week that the twin emergency situations, floods and grasshoppers, which had sent the state department of agriculture, the insect control committee of the University of Minnesota, the highway and the health departments of the state double-quick into trouble areas, would soon be mastered.

After extensive tours of the distress counties in the flood region of the northwest, and the grasshopper counties in the south half of the state, Commissioner Charles Ommodt was able to report extensive progress. In the north, flood waters had receded sufficiently to record the damage. Rotting hay stacks, ruined grain fields, and hoof rot among livestock marked where the floods had been. Earlier estimates of about two million dollars damage in the district comprising Marshall, Pennington, Beltrami, Red Lake and Roseau counties held good. The state was turning over lands rented from the rural credits division to farmers wishing to harvest the hay crops on them. Work projects, Ommodt said, also were being planned to provide part-time work for the flood victims.

In the southern belt, the grasshoppers had done serious damage to second crop alfalfa, sweet clover, corn and even fruit trees. Damage will ceate lossses to farmers of many thousands of dollars. Poison bait by train and by highway department trucks continued to pour into the effected sections in an effort to prevent any increase in the infestation either this fall or next spring.

It was emphasized by state insect experts that the damage at present was little compared to what it might become by next spring if the invasion is not stamped out completely now.

Orben Sime Concert Here

Mr. Orben Sime of Readstown, Wisconsin, has been scheduled to present his entire program at the Nazareth Lutheran Church on Tuesday evening, August 31 at 8:15.

Traveling entirely by car, Mr. Sime carries with him $4,000 worth of musical instruments, a collection of twenty in all, from which he chooses those he uses at each concert. Included among these is his so-called "Pitchfork Cello" said to be a $1000 instrument and the only one of its kind. It is made by Knute Reindahl of Madison, Wisconsin, who is said by some to be one of the greatest violinmakers and wood carvers of his time. Another instrument is the "Theremin" whice is played by waving the hands before it; the right hand controlling the pitch or yoice and the left hand the volume. The music, according to Mr. Sime is produced by harnessing the squeaks and howls that were heard in the first stages of radio music. The instrument is played without touch and produces a very mellow tone and is used by several symphony orchestras in this country.

All are invited to hear this rare concert.

Zionist Opposes Palestine Split-Up

An outstanding opponent of the British plan to partition Palestine, Menachem M. Ussishkin (above), world president of the Jewish National fund, was elected chairman of the World Zionist congress at Geneva, Switzerland recently. Election of Ussishkin foreshadows an adverse vote on the partition plan, observers believe.

Even This Didn't Make the Chinese War Official

When this photograph, showing a transport loaded with steel-helmeted Japanese soldiers arriving at Tsingtau was made, Japan and China were technically at peace. Many of these men and many Chinese soldiers died, slain by each other, but still there was no "war." The undeclared war endangered the safety of Americans in Shanghai and other leading cities in the war-ridden area and caused the creation of an American emergency committee on evacuation.

7. Contrary to general opinion, says a specialist, there is no small eye or large eye. All eyes are approximately of the same size. The reason for the apparent difference depends upon the orifice or aperture through which the eyes are seen. It is the variable diameter of this opening that creates the erroneous impression of different sizes of eyes.

8. There are three ways in which salt may be secured: First, by mining; second, by evaporation of sea water; and third, by digging wells until a salt vein is struck and then pouring water and pumping it up again as brine.

TESTED AND PROVED ON THE FARM

THE AMAZING New Firestone GROUND GRIP TIRE

PROVIDES GREATER DRAWBAR PULL, GREATER TRACTION AND SAVES MORE TIME AND FUEL

NEWS of the amazing performance of the NEW Firestone Ground Grip Tire is sweeping rural America. Farmers everywhere who have seen this new tire are so enthusiastic about it that sales have been climbing steadily upward and production has been greatly increased to meet the demand.

Why all this enthusiasm? Those of you who have seen the new Firestone Ground Grip Tire in action know the answer. Tests show that it will pull a three-bottom plow under soil conditions where other makes of tires can pull only a two-bottom plow. The re-designed tread gives greater traction and better self-cleaning action. It will not pack the soil — in fact, it leaves a mulch on the surface of the tread track that prevents rapid evaporation of moisture in the soil. These tests also show up to 30% more available drawbar pull on dry sod, up to 40% more on dry plowed ground, up to 50% more on wet plowed ground than with any other tire tested.

Only in Firestone Tires do you get so many patented extra-quality features. The Ground Grip Tread is patented and is made of specially compounded rubber which resists the action of sun, rain and snow. Gum-Dipping is a patented Firestone Process, by which every fiber of every cord in every ply is saturated with liquid rubber which gives added strength to resist the strain of heavy pulling. The Two Extra Layers of Gum-Dipped Cords under the tread are patented. This Firestone construction feature binds the tread and cord body into one inseparable unit.

You want and need ALL these features. Only Firestone has them! See this new tire at your nearest Firestone Implement Dealer, Tire Dealer or Auto Supply & Service Store today.

If you have not received a copy of the new Firestone Farm Tire Catalog, please send your name and address to The Firestone Tire & Rubber Company, Akron, Ohio, or Los Angeles, California, and a copy will be mailed to you promptly.

GREATER DRAWBAR PULL
Increased height of the new Ground Grip tread and the improved design and spacing of the heavy traction lugs result in much greater drawbar pull.

GREATER TRACTION
The increased penetration of the improved Ground Grip tread gives a deeper "bite" resulting in greater traction.

GREATER FUEL SAVINGS
Tests show savings of as much as 50% in fuel as compared with steel-lugged wheels.

GREATER TIME SAVINGS
The increased traction enables you to cover much greater acreage in a day.

WEATHER-PROOFED
The Ground Grip Tread is made of special weather-resisting rubber which is unaffected by hot sun, rain or snow.

What You Seek

Have you ever thought how many objects you pass without even noticing them; how many voices and sounds fail to register with you?

It seems that one usually sees what he is looking for and hears that to which his ears are attuned.

Perhaps this is what Emerson had in mind when he said that no one brings back from Europe anything which he did not take over with him. (Excluding merchandise of course.)—Ohio Farmer.

"I suppose you did the noble rescuer act and brought Deborah home again? The poor little country girl lost in the big city?"

"Something like that," Bryn agreed equably.

"And you've been hanging around here ever since?"

"Hanging around ever since," Bryn repeated quietly. "And, now that you know all about me, I should like to discuss with you your own position here. Unfortunately, there was no time, after your letter arrived, to get an answer to you; or we might have spared you the trouble of this trip."

"What do you mean, spared me the trouble of this trip?"

"Surely you understand that it was quite useless for you to come here, Graham. You must know that you put yourself quite out of the picture by your actions in San Francisco."

Graham's voice thickened. "That's your fault."

"I don't think so. It was fortunate for Deborah that somebody happened along to help her, but she would not have married you, Graham, even if she had to work the answer out for herself. She was quite unprepared for the way in which you greeted her. It was entirely your own fault. If you had taken the trouble to act as a gentleman for the short time it was necessary to spend with her, she would have married you. She expected to marry you. I was only a chance passer-by."

"Is that so?" Graham said through clenched teeth. "It's a damned lie. What you think you'll get out of it, I don't know. Who the devil are you? This is my business."

"No," Bryn said slowly. "Not any longer."

Graham's eyes narrowed. "Why?" he inquired. "Go on. Try your story out on me. See how far you get."

Bryn regarded him. "Very well," he said. Then, "You came up here expecting eventually to marry her. Am I right?"

"Apparently you have already read my letter."

"Yes. Well, Deborah won't marry you. That's final."

"Oh," Graham murmured scathingly. "So that's final, is it? And I suppose she's scared to see me and tell me herself, is she?"

"It isn't necessary for her to see you," Bryn explained. "Her marriage with you no longer depends on her own choice. She can't marry you. Even in case, like our friend of the jungle, you had changed your spots. She can't marry you because she is already married. To me."

For half a minute Graham stood perfectly motionless, staring at him. Then he moved back a step and folded his arms. "Do you expect me to believe that?"

"I hoped you would."

"Well, I won't. It's a damn' lie. She wouldn't marry you. She couldn't marry you. I know the family. I know the circumstances they're in. I've had plenty of letters from the grandmother, and the girl, too. There isn't a chance in the world that she'd have married you."

"Why?"

"You know d—n' well why. In the first place, she loses her property. In the second place, the old woman wouldn't hear of it for a minute, property or no property. She'd starve first. I'm the only man in the world they'd marry the girl to, and you know it. Oh, I get the situation. I'm not entirely dumb. I can see that you're in love with her, and she's in love with you, but that doesn't change the situation any. She isn't married to you. She wouldn't do it. She hasn't got the courage. And she wouldn't take a chance of breaking the old woman's heart."

"What proof will you take?"

"None," Graham said flatly, "except a statement from Mrs. Larned herself."

Gary lifted his head. "They are married," he said to Graham. "It's the truth. It's nothing but the truth he's telling you."

Graham's eyes shifted to Gary's honest old face. His expression changed slowly. It lowered, darkened. His lower lip thrust itself out.

"If they are," he began, "there's something fishy somewhere. There's something . . . after all this talk about marrying her to me. To a Graham. Where's the catch?" He fingered his chin. "I get it," he said at last succinctly. "I get it now."

Bryn waited.

"So that's your game in meeting me here and trying to scare me off, is it? That's your game. Yours and the girl's. After all her mollycoddle looks. Pretty cute."

"Just exactly what do you mean?"

The icy note in Bryn's voice did not curb Graham's rising pride in his own cleverness. "You don't want me to see the old lady," he announced. "And why? Because it will spoil your game. There's some reason why it will spoil your game."

"Look here," Bryn said coldly, standing up. "I'm telling you the truth, Graham, and there's no game about it. Deborah is married to me. We were married three days after she met you there in San Francisco, as soon as we could get a license. It was her twenty-first birthday, the day she would have married you if you'd been decent to her. Why you come up here now, I don't know. By the terms of the will, it's too late for you to marry her and collect the estate, even if she weren't already married to me. I suggest that you forget it and go back to your ship. I will get you proofs of our marriage; possibly you are entitled to that much; and then you must see that there is nothing at all to be gained here, and that you may as well go."

Graham was smiling, an evil, knowing smile. "Nothing to be gained . . . by me," he said softly.

"What do you mean?"

"You've filled in the picture pretty well, haven't you? But you know too much about that will, and the estate. It seems to me the trouble I could make, my cocky young friend, would be to tell the old lady who I am, and who you aren't."

Bryn waited.

"That's the lay," Graham said. "You've married my girl, and now you're passing yourself off as me. You must think I'm a damn' fool. And at the end of the year, if nobody spikes your plans, you'll get the million dollars that ought to be mine. And you have the everlasting guts to tell me to get out of here in peace and let you get away with it!"

Bryn began to whistle tunelessly between his teeth.

Tubby stepped suddenly through the open door. "Look here, Bryn," he said, "what's the use of trying to talk sense to him?"

Tubby was followed closely by Simon. At their sudden appearance, Graham moved back a step, stealthily. Something in his pose caught Bryn's eye, and without stopping to think, he hurled himself forward on the burly figure and flung it backward. Graham, taken by surprise, fell heavily. In a second, Tubby and Simon were into the melee. Bryn, sitting on the recumbent man's chest, handed something to Simon. "He had a gun," he explained.

Bryn rose. "Get up," he said to Graham. "We'll put you in the milk house and let you think it over. Maybe you'll begin to come to your senses."

"You can be arrested for this," Graham threatened, struggling to his feet.

"I don't think so," Bryn said mildly. "This is my lawful residence. You came here uninvited, threatened me, and drew a gun."

* * * * * * *

When dinner was over, grandmother rose and patted Tubby's hand gently. "And now," Grandmother said happily, "let us go out and sit on the veranda. It will be a beautiful evening."

"I'm afraid it will be chilly, Grandmother," Bryn said quickly. "We can open the drawing-room windows wide, and see the moon from there, can't we?"

"You are much too careful of me, my boy," Grandmother said with affection. "It is not in the least chilly."

The moon had risen already, and lay, a great round silver lantern, on the tops of the rolling black hills to the west.

"Let's play games," Tubby said cheerfully. "It isn't late. It's only about half-past seven. Something loud and cheerful."

"It doesn't seem just the night for loud cheerful games," Grandmother protested. "It's a dreamy sort of night, my boy. Couldn't we just sit and talk, quietly, and look at the moon?"

Deborah's eyes met Bryn's as he sat at her knee. She turned away from him quickly, conscious of Pilar watching them, being miserable and unhappy and lonely and . . . beaten. Bryn didn't love Pilar, Bryn didn't love Pilar . . . the words sang in Deborah's heart so loudly that she was almost afraid Pilar would hear them. He had said . . . "I love you."

There was a sudden loud noise, to Deborah's ears a man's unmistakable cry. Grandmother started forward in her chair. "Bryn," she said quickly. Surely that is a man's voice?"

Bryn stood up. "It's steam escaping, Grandmother, that's all," he said reassuringly, and then, "Let's not stay here and have it worry you. It may go on for some time. How would you like to go for a little drive with me? You haven't been in the car for a long time."

"I think I should like it very much," she replied hesitantly. "But that noise . . . are you sure . . ."

"Positive," Bryn said definitely. He offered her his arm and led her down the steps.

They were gone.

Deborah, after a little, remembered Pilar, and turned to her. "I'm sorry, Pilar," she said politely. "I forgot that you don't know what this is all about."

"I do know," Pilar murmured. "Bryn has told me the whole story, of course."

"I see," Deborah said slowly.

Tubby straightened. "Why do you say 'of course,' Pilar?"

She glanced at him. "It is a natural thing to say, surely?"

"No, it is not. Not under the circumstances. You would suggest to Deborah that Bryn goes to you as a matter of course with all his concerns and interests?"

Pilar rose. "I do not mean to suggest anything in particular to Deborah," she said coolly. "But if she chooses to be reminded that Bryn always has come to me with his interests and concerns, that is no fault of mine. It is true."

What Irvin S. Cobb Thinks about

Japs Killing Chinamen

SANTA MONICA, CALIF.—The formula still holds good. A Jap kills a Chinaman. That's another dead Chinaman. A Chinaman kills a Jap. That's a war.

But before we get too busy deploring Japan's little way of disregarding pledges so as to gobble more Chinese territory let us look at some records closer home. Since the republic was formed we have deliberately broken 264 separate treaties with the original Red owners of this land.

Irvin S. Cobb

From these violations of our solemn promises border wars frequently ensued. When the Indians started fighting we called it an uprising. When we sent troops forth to slaughter the Indians it was a punitive expedition to restore law and order. If the white soldiers wiped out the Indians that was a battle. If the Indians wiped out the soldiers that was a massacre.

Those who make history rarely get a square deal from those who write history.

Keeping Undercover.

THIS is the land where, in self-protection, you hide your place of residence and have your telephone privately listed. The result is, if your aged grandmother happens along and doesn't know your address, she can never reach you, but any smart stranger may approach the right party—let us call him a 'phone-legger—and, by payment of a small fee, get the number instantly.

So, in about two calls out of three, you answer the ring to find at the other end of the line somebody with a neat little scheme, because here in movieland neat little schemes grow on every bush and gentlemen promoting them are equally numerous.

Through long suffering, I've become hardened to this, but today over the wire came a winning voice saying the speaker desired to give me, as he put it, "a checking over for white termites."

I admit to a touch of dandruff and there have been times when I suspected fleas—we excel in fleas on this coast—but I resent the idea of also being infested with white termites.

I've about decided that, to modern civilization, telephones are what cooties are to a war—nobody likes 'em, but everybody has 'em.

Camera Sniping.

SNAPSHOOTING of famous folks from ambush may be upsetting to the victims of the sniping, but the subscribing public certainly gets an illuminating eyeful every time one of the photographic magazines appears.

I've just laid aside the current copy of a periodical which could be called either "The Weekly Expose" or "Stop, Look and Laugh." Among other fascinating, not to say illusioning, illustrations, I note the following:

A reigning movie queen with her mouth so wide open that her face looked like a "gates ajar" design. If I had tonsils like hers, I'd have 'em right out.

A political idol taken in a brief one-piece bathing suit. Next time they snap him, he would be well advised to wear more than a mere g-string. A Mother Hubbard would be better. Or, anyhow, a toga. A statesman is greatly handicapped when he suggests a barrel of leaf-lard with the staves knocked out.

A close-up of Mr. John L. Lewis with the lips pouting out and a congested expression. Would not this tend to confirm the impression that lately Mr. Lewis bit off more than he could chew?

This candid camera stuff is translating into the pictorial fact the nightmare all of us have had—that horrid dream of being caught outdoors with practically nothing on.

Field Days for Reds.

UNDER the warming suns of tolerance and indifference and even tacit encouragement in certain quarters, many of our hothouse communists are changing from the pallid, timorous flowerlets of discontent into full-blown advocates of the glad new age when Lenin will take over Lincoln's niche in the gallery of the immortals and government everywhere will be of the Trotskys, but the Trotskys, for the Trotskys.

True, there still remain some wavering souls who are so pink they'd be red if they weren't so yellow!

But these quivering aspens shrink in number as their bolder comrades openly profess the blessed doctrine which is doing so much for the undertaking business in Russia.

Fine Feathers for Three

SEW-YOUR-OWN wouldn't be your weather prophet for the world, but you know, Milady, and so does S-Y-O, that it's always fair weather when good fashions get together. Which brings us to today's three sparkling new frocks—a whole crowd of style for the pretty part of any man's family.

A Fun Frock.

Rain, nor gloom, nor a flat tire (either kind), can dampen the spirits of the girl who wears this buoyant, young sports frock (above left) on her daily rounds—be they on the fairway, the campus, behind the counter, or merely from pillar to post. You can easily see why it's a winner: a button-all-the-way front, the matched collar and general shipshape styling make it just that. It's surefire in acetate, or silk crepe.

Here's to Mothers.

Sew-Your-Own loves nothing more than catering to mother's wardrobe needs. The frock above (center) is for all mothers: old sweet ones, young darling ones, yes, even for mothers-to-be. It is easy to run up, easy to do up, and best of all, easy to look at.

Little Brown Girl.

An all-over suntan is her forte, and many sunny days are ahead for young Miss Fortunate whose mommy chooses to interpret the fetching model at the right. A scallop-edged waist front accentuated by frou-frou trim is right down her avenue, and a gored skirt, that's second to none for class, fits into her scheme of things to a T. Mother, why not make one dressy version, as pictured, another finished differently for school? (Perhaps with a simple braid trim) Rayon prints, gingham, or sheer wool, will do nicely as the material.

The Patterns.

Pattern 1249 is designed for sizes 14 to 20 (32 to 42 bust). Size 16 requires 4½ yards of 39 inch material.

Pattern 1207 is designed for sizes 34 to 50. Size 36 requires 4½ yards of 35 inch material. With long sleeves 4¾ yards of 39 inch material.

Pattern 1366 is designed for sizes 6 to 14 years. Size 8 requires 2⅜ yards of 39-inch material plus 1¾ yards of machine pleating.

Hallanger of Madagascar who will preach in the morning and speak again at the program in the afternoon. The entire community is invited to attend these festivities and a very large crowd is expected for this occasion.

Local Boys Have Big Turnover

Clarence Sandberg had the misfortune to have his chevrolet car smashed up near Thief River Falls while driving home late last Thursday evening when the driver of another car forced him to take the ditch. Harlan Gunheim and Clarence Bottom were riding with him and Mr. Bottom and Mr. Sandberg were thrown out thru the top of the car as it turned over three times in the ditch. Mr. Sandberg was knocked unconscious and had to be revived in a hospital and Mr. Bottom is nursing some wounds in the head in which he had to have several stitches taken.

Mr. Gunhiem remained in the car thru the spill and came out of the wreck with only a bad shaking up. The car is being repaired at a local garage so that Mr. Sandberg can use it on his return to Pontiac, Mich. next week.

Orben Sime Well Received

The concert given by Mr. Orben Sime at the Nazareth Lutheran church on Tuesday evening was very well attended and enjoyed by all. The crowd filled the seating capacity and some had to stand.

I have often wondered how rural communites select their drivers of school buses. Is this done in a sort of indifferent way and is the job given to anybody.

Every school bus driver should be selected for dependability, good habits, his knowledge of the rules of the road, and a tested ability to drive a bus properly. No driver under the age of 21 should be hired to drive a school bus.

Every driver should be provided with a set of rules which he must observe to the letter. His is a heavy responsibility, and the continuance of his employment should depend on his hearty and faithful acceptance of this responsibility.

Go slow—be safe.

C. A. Davis to Have Sale

C. A. Davis who has farmed two miles north of Holt for the past sixteen years, will on Friday, Sept. 10 have an auction sale on his place and dispose of his horses, a swell herd of high grade Holstein milch cows and farm machinery.

Mr. Davis is in poor health and unable to carry on the farm work any longer. Read his sale bill on the back page this week.

County 4-H Fall Achievement Day Plans Are Discussed

A special committee meeting of the west council was held at the County Agent's office last Saturday to discuss plans for the Fall Achievement Day. The date set is September 25 to be held at Warren. Baby beef, fat lamb, fat barrow, potatoes and corn are the projects to be exhibited at this achievement day. The trips to the Junior Livestock show will be selected.

The superintendents of the various classes are as follows: Harold Rosendahl—Fat barrow; Sanford Tverstol, Lewellyn Larson, Alvin Grandstrand—Baby beef; Raymond Knudsen—Sheep; Gordon Przybylski and Adler Strandquist—Potatoes and Corn; J. H. Rosendahl—General Supt.

The $25.00 offered by Dan Magoris of Warren for the baby beef project and the $15.00 offered by Erhard Anderson of Stephen for the turkey prize money will be awarded.

The minimum prize money for the projects are as follows:

Poultry $.25; Baby beef $1.00; Sheep $.50; Potatoes $.25; Corn $.25; Fat barrow $.50.

The transportation is to be paid on the following basis: $1.00 for baby beef and $.25 for hogs and sheep to those outside of a 20 mile radius in the west part of the county, and $2.00 for baby beef and $.50 for hogs and sheep to those in the eastern part of the county.

Mrs. Rosendahl, Mrs. Beckwith, and Pearl Knudsen were appointed on a committee to plan a banquet supper for the evening of the Achievement Day. Plans are under way to secure an outside speaker for the evening program.

This being the last major activity of the 1937 club year, it is expected that a large turn-out for that evening will be had.

Through an error in the record at the office, Clyde Munger, who is receiving a trip with a fat lamb to the State Fair, was omitted from last week's list of winners.

The 4-H members are busy planning their trips to the fair, which starts September 4.

New Record Made In Advance Enrollment at N. W. School

A new record of advance enrollment has been made at the Northwest School of Agriculture, according to figures released by Registrar J. W. Mlinar. An increase of 27 per cent of paid room reservation deposits over one year ago, says Mr. Mlinar, indicates that the all-time high record enrollment of 401 will be exceded one month before the opening of school this year.

Through a rearrangement of rooms, added dormitory accommodations have been made to accommodate the inceased enrollment. Many new improvements have been made in furniture and equipment of the dormitories and classrooms.

The six-months school year starting this fall on October 4, enables the Northwest School students to assist with the peak load of work on the farm during the spring and fall months.

The tuition aid to rural school students who have completed the eighth grade work has enabled many students to attend school. Mr. Mlinar reports that many high school graduates are enrolling for special work in agriculture, home economics, business, and farm engineering courses.

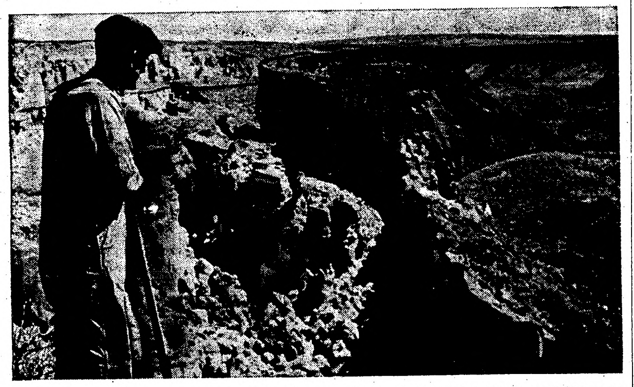
Western Farm Sinks 200 Feet Into the Earth



H. A. Robertson is shown viewing the destruction wrought on the land he is farming near Buhl, Idaho, by the sinking of thousands of square feet of rich soil into the bowels of the earth. More than five acres has already sunk 125 to 200 feet below its normal level, forming a canyon. This phenomenon of nature, experts say, is due to a great fissure beneath much of southern Idaho and may doom a considerable area.

Devout Immersed in Mass Baptism

By ones, twos, threes—even by entire families—87 believers were baptized in a mass immersion at the non-denominational Immanuel temple at Los Angeles. An elderly convert, wringing wet but happy in her religious fervor, is pictured above. The believers were baptized by Rev. A. Earl Lee (right), pastor of the church.

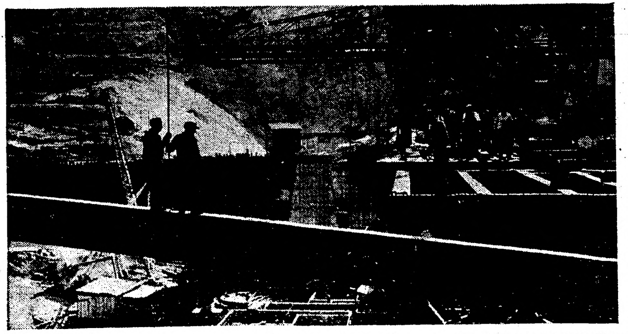
This Unique Bridge Has World's Shortest Life



Swinging a steel beam into place to close the last gap in one of the most unique bridges ever built. Three thousand feet long, one hundred seventy-five feet high, this half-million dollar structure will be swallowed up in six months by the rising concrete of Grand Coulee dam, being built by the bureau of reclamation on the Columbia river in Washington. The bridge was constructed as the most economical means of moving concrete from two great mixing plants, one at either side of the river, over the foundation area of the dam, 500 feet wide by 3,000 feet long. A part of the west section of the dam can be seen in the background.

Cuba Independent

On May 31 of 1936 a new treaty between the United States and Cuba was ratified. This treaty superseded that of May 22, 1903, and abandoned the right of the United States to intervene in the internal affairs of Cuba under the so-called Platt amendment.

Under the authority of this treaty the United States had intervened on five occasions. The republic of Cuba is therefore completely independent of the United States.

When your back aches and your nerves scream, don't take it out on your husband. He can't possibly know how you feel.

For three generations one woman has told another how to go "smiling through" with Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. It helps Nature tone up the system, thus lessening the discomforts from the functional disorders which women must endure in the three ordeals of life: 1. Turning from girlhood to womanhood. 2. Preparing for motherhood. 3. Approaching "middle age."

Don't be a three-quarter wife, take LYDIA E. PINKHAM'S VEGETABLE COMPOUND and Go "Smiling Through."

"It is not true," Tubby said. "I know exactly what you have been to Bryn, just how little you have really meant to him. These others know, too; Sally and Simon and Madeline. Here and now, before them, I ask you to repeat to Deborah the statement you have just made, and if you will repeat it, we will take the matter up with Bryn when he returns, all of us together, Pilar."

Pilar started at him. She stamped her foot furiously. "You are impossible!" she stormed, and then turned and ran through the door and up the stairs like one followed by demons.

"I'm terribly proud of you, Tubby," Sally said with a catch in her breath. "But I don't know whether it was wise or not. You may discover some bright morning that Pilar has put ground glass in Madeline's coffee."

"In my coffee?" Madeline inquired. "Is it permissible to ask why mine, particularly?"

Sally looked at Tubby helplessly. Tubby fidgeted. He stood first on one foot and then on the other. "Well," he said.

"Well?" Madeline repeated.

"Look here, Sally," Tubby expostulated. "That wasn't fair. That wasn't a bit fair. I didn't . . . I don't . . . that is, I can't . . ."

Sally took Madeline's hand. "Listen," she said. "I suppose I'll have to step in. He'll go on like that for hours, just maundering. Tubby is very good at taking care of other people's love affairs, but he's terrible at his own. Madeline, I may as well tell you . . . he came into our room last night—didn't he, Simon—and he sat on the edge of the bed . . . didn't he, Simon? . . . and talked about you for hours. And he ended up by practically asking Simon for your hand, although anybody but Tubby would know it isn't done any more. There. That's what's the matter with him. And that's why Pilar will want to put ground glass in your coffee. Pilar always wanted Tubby if she couldn't have Bryn."

Tubby stepped forward and lifted Madeline's hand. He tucked it under his arm. "Come on, Madeline," he said. "After all, this thing's got to a stage where an audience is practically unnecessary."

Sally dropped down in the step beside Deborah, exhausted. "There," she said faintly. "That's done. Aren't men idiots?"

It was a long time before Grandmother and Bryn came back, nearly two hours. Graham pounded and tried to make himself heard a few times, but after a while he apparently decided it was useless, and all was quiet.

They came in at last, chatting comfortably. Grandmother kissed Deborah good-night and went directly upstairs on Bryn's arm. He came flying down in a minute or two. "Where's Tub? And Madeline, and Pilar?" he inquired.

"Pilar's in bed," Sally answered, "and Madeline and Tubby went off in the general direction of Heaven. Toward the orchard. I imagine that's where they still are."

"Oho," Bryn said. "So at last it's come to this! Well, if you will excuse me, I must about my own business."

Deborah rose swiftly and laid her hand on his arm. "You won't go alone?"

"Why not? It isn't going to be a war. We're just going to have a quiet little talk, Graham and I. I think he will see reason before we're through." He left.

A little later the door opened. It was Tubby and Madeline. He grinned sheepishly. His dimple flickered in and out. The yellow lock on his crown stood straight up. Madeline put her fingers up and tweaked it.

"The first improvement we make," she decided, "will be to have the roots of that piece of hair dug completely out. Think of all the hours and hours it will save me and the children."

Bryn came in, quietly. He shut the door behind him. He stood for a moment, lost in thought.

"What'd he say?" Simon asked.

"Nothing," Bryn replied. "He didn't say anything. He's gone, and his car's gone too."

"Gone!" Tubby echoed.

"What I want to know," Sally said ominously, "is, how did he get out? Three bolts, and a six inch thick door, and a bar of iron on the bottom. You said he couldn't. How did he?"

Nobody answered her.

* * * * * * *

Deborah rose early, brushed her hair with swift nervous fingers, bathed in cool water, and went out into the thin fresh morning sunshine. She had not slept well. She walked quickly up the path between the garden and the orchard. She went on, but a few yards inside the stone wall that separated the orchard from the forest, she turned and raced back down the path as if she were pursued; for it had occurred to her suddenly that he . . . Graham . . . might be hiding on the other side of the wall. Looking back over her shoulder, she was brought up short by colliding with a tall solid person who seized her hands and swung them in his own.

"What are you running away from, this bright and shining morning?" Bryn inquired.

"Nothing," she said, with a little nervous laugh. "That is . . . nothing real. I just got to thinking . . . I just got to thinking that perhaps . . . Oh, was just worrying about him. That's [illegible]"

"Do you know how lovely you are?" he asked gently.

Deborah pressed her lips together. Her eyes searched his.

He drew her hands up, and took them both in one of his. "It doesn't matter about Graham," he said. "Don't worry about it, sweetheart."

She bent and plucked one of the clove pinks, put her hand up to the breast of his blue sweater and wove the flower stem through the stitches. Her eyes lifted to his. Bryn started to speak, but she turned and walked quickly down the path toward the house, with Bryn walking close beside her.

Grandmother, to Deborah's intense surprise, was already up.

Almost before Deborah had told a maid that they were ready for their breakfast, Pilar came downstairs, with her red beret on her smooth dark head and her bag in her gloved hand. "I find that I must go back at once to San Francisco, Mrs. Larned. I'm terribly sorry to go. Good-by," she said firmly.

"I can't think of it," Grandmother protested. "You must have breakfast." She turned to the maid. "Joan, tell the cook that we want a tray of coffee and toast as quickly as it can be prepared."

"Oh, I Was Just Worrying About Him. That's All."

Pilar glanced at her watch. "Oh, very well," she said, a little ungraciously. "I'm anxious to get home by night," she explained.

Tubby was the last one down. "Well," he said jovially, "here we all are, eh? What've you got your hat on for, Pilar? You're not leaving us, surely?"

Pilar gave him a disdainful glance. "I suppose you'll be heart-broken."

"Well, you know how it is," Tubby said cheerfully.

The group had just moved out to the veranda when there came the roar of a laboring small engine from the road at the left.

A small battered roadster turned in at the gate. With a splash and clatter of gravel it came to a stop.

Deborah's heart dropped like lead at the sight of the driver.

As the car stopped, Bryn rose, walked down the steps and stopped. His eyes met the triumphant eyes of the man driving the other car. For a moment, Bryn and Graham stood facing each other, Graham half out of his car. Then, without a word, perfectly calm, Bryn turned toward the veranda.

Deborah lifted her eyes and met Bryn's in helpless anguish. Bryn was smiling at her, a steady, warm, comforting smile that seemed to tell her that everything was all right, that she had nothing to fear. She could not understand. He came up the steps and stood beside Grandmother's chair. Tubby and Simon were standing helpless on the grass. Sally and Madeline had retreated to the doorway, and stood there, hand in hand, watching Grandmother, too. And Pilar, still and unmoving, sat in her chair behind the vines.

Stuart Graham, with that black smile of his, came across the grass from the driveway. He swung his wide shoulders confidently, and Deborah wished wildly that Bryn would go out and do something to him . . . anything . . . to stop that confident, steady advance, to wipe off that triumphant smile, to save Grandmother. But it was too late.

He stopped on the lowest step. He faced Grandmother. He bowed to her.

"Good-morning," he said brightly.

Grandmother inclined her head. "Good-morning," she replied.

"You are Mrs. Larned," he stated. "I think you will have heard of me, and from me. My name is Graham."

"Indeed?" Grandmother murmured, entirely calm. Her pulse beat was swift, but steady.

He stiffened at Grandmother's "Indeed?" "Stuart Graham," he repeated distinctly. "From Boston."

"Safety First" Creatures

Many creatures pretend to be what they are not, in order to avoid being seen and captured by their foes. An example is the stick insect, says Tit-Bits Magazine. Less known is the caterpillar of the peppered moth. When these caterpillars have stripped a twig of its foliage, they would be very conspicuous on the bare plant, so they stiffen themselves and pretend to be parts of the twig.

what Irvin S. Cobb thinks about:

The State of the World.

SANTA MONICA, CALIF.—Up in Montreal a veteran showman says he talks with chimpanzees in their own language. I wish he'd ask one of his chimpanzee pals what he thinks about the present setup of civilization.

Because I can't find any humans who agree as to where we all are going and what the chances are of getting there. In fact, the only two who appear to be certain about it are young Mr. Corcoran and young Mr. Cohen, and they seem to hesitate at times—not much, but just a teeny-weeny bit—which is disconcerting to the lay mind. We are likely to lose confidence even in a comet, once it starts wobbling on us.

Irvin S. Cobb

I'm also upset by a statement from England's greatest star-gazer—they call him the astronomer royal, which, by coupling it with the royal family, naturally gives astronomy a great social boost in England and admits it to the best circles. He says the moon is clear off its mathematically prescribed course.

Cash Versus I. O. U.'s.

ONLY a few weeks ago the front pages were carrying dispatches saying the adjustment of Great Britain's defaulted debt was just around the corner. Economists and financiers had discussed terms of settlement. Figures were quoted—mainly figures calling for big reductions on our part, but never mind that. They were figures anyhow.

Lately the papers have been strangely silent on the subject. Perhaps you remember the old story told on the late John Sharp Williams, who frequented a game at Washington where sportive statesmen played poker for heavy stakes—mostly with those quaint little fictional products called I. O. U.'s as mediums of exchange.

Early one morning a fellow senator met the famous Mississippian coming from an all-night session.

"I certainly mopped up," he proclaimed. "I won $3,000—and what's more, $8.75 of it was in cash."

Autumn Millinery.

JUST as the poor, bewildered males are becoming reconciled to the prevalent styles in women's hats, up bobs a style creator in New York warning us that what we've thus far endured is merely a foretaste of what's coming. In other words, we ain't seen nothin'!

For autumn, he predicts a quaint number with a slanted peak fifteen inches high, which, I take it, will make the wearer look like a refugee trying to escape from under a collapsing pagoda.

Another is a turban entirely composed of rooster feathers.

A matching coat of rooster feathers goes with this design. But in the old days they used hot tar.

A third model features for its top-hamper a series of kalsomine brushes sticking straight up. Naturally, the hat itself will imitate a barrel of whitewash.

But the gem of all is a dainty globular structure of Scotch plaid. Can you imagine anything more becoming to your lady wife than an effect suggesting that she's balancing a hot-water bag on her brow?

"McGuffeyisms."

THE lieutenant-governor of Ohio urges a return to "McGuffeyism" for settling modern problems.

'Twas in a McGuffey reader that I met those prize half-wits of literature—the Spartan boy who let the fox gnaw his vitals; the chuckle-headed youth who stood on the burning deck; the congenial idiot who climbed an alp in midwinter while wearing nothing but a night shirt and carrying a banner labeled "Excelsior" in order to freeze to death; the skipper who, when the ship was sinking, undertook to calm the passengers by—but wait, read the immortal lines:

"We are lost!" the captain shouted,
As he staggered down the stair.

And then the champion of all—the Dutch lad who discovered a leak in the dyke so he stuck his wrist in the crevice and all night stayed there. In the morning, when an early riser came along and asked what was the general idea, the heroic urchin said—but let me quote the exact language of the book:

"'I am hindering the sea from running in,' was the simple reply of the child."

Simple? I'll tell the world! Nothing could be simpler except an authority on hydraulics who figures that, when the Atlantic ocean starts boring through a crack in a mud wall, you can hold it back by using one small Dutch boy's arm for a stopper.

They're Cinches to Sew

YES, the sewing bug will get you, if you don't watch out, young lady! And when it does there will be a hum in your life (and we don't mean head noises). Right now is the time to begin; right here is the place to get your inspiration. So all together, girls: it's sew, sew, sew-your-own!

Inspiration Number 1.

The vivacious model at the left is the number 1 piece for your new autumn advance. It calls for taffeta, embellished, as you might expect, with grosgrain. You may use vivid colors too, Milady, for Fashion has gone color mad this fall. Reds of every hue, bright blues, lavender, warm browns, all are being featured in smart avenue shops along the Rue de la Paix.

Morning Frock.

For most of us, each day demands that a little work be done. Sew-Your-Own appreciates this and the need for frocks that are practical, pretty, and easy to keep that way, hence the new utility frock in the center. Five pieces are its sum and total; seven mornings a week its cycle. Any tub-well fabric will do nicely as the material — try one version in printed rayon.

Tailored Charm.

The waistcoat used to be a gentleman's identification, but, alas, like many another smart idea, womankind has copped it. Here you see an attractive example of this modern contraband. Not only does it have suavity, but it is entirely feminine, as well. The exquisite waist line, sweet little collar, and puff sleeves, make this a number you can't afford to pass up.

The Patterns.

Pattern 1363 is designed for sizes 12 to 20 (30 to 40 bust). Size 14 requires 3⅞ yards of 39-inch material, plus 18 yards of ribbon for trimming, as pictured.

Pattern 1354 is designed for sizes 34 to 46. Size 36 requires 4⅝ yards of 35-inch material.

Pattern 1252 is designed for sizes 12 to 20 (30 to 38 bust). Size 14 requires 3⅞ yards of 39-inch material.

Send your order to The Sewing Circle Pattern Dept., Room 1020, 211 W. Wacker Dr., Chicago, Ill. Price of patterns, 15 cents (in coins) each.

Death of Palmer Dahl

According to reports received here on Sunday morning, Palmer Dahl, farmer near Steiner who lost his arm one day last week when he got it all mangled in a chain on his threshing machine, died Sunday morning in a hospital at Thief River Falls, where he had been taken after the accident.

Carlson's Move to Argyle

Mr. and Mrs. A.L. Carlson and family moved to Argyle over the week end. They have purchased a fine home in that village and will make it their permanent residence.

The people in the Holt community regret very much to see the Carlson's leave here, but wish them happiness and success in their new place.

Mr. Carlson stated that since they have a bank in Argyle, and a new funeral home, and that they are now moving their Warren store there, he deemed it advisable to move there assist with the executive work of the corporations. Another reason was that their son Glenn is finishing fourth year of high school and by moving they would not have to send him away from home to attend school this year.

Farm Prosperity----?

(Editorial)

The farmers of the Northwest are aroused over the extravagant reports of their sudden prosperity. From reading some of the larger daily newspapers of Minnesota, one would believe that the people were "rolling in wealth." It is hard for the rural subscribers to believe such reports when the farmer is selling his wheat for less than a dollar a bushel, and his barley for less than forty cents and his oats for about twenty cents.

In some individual cases there have been reported good yields, and the daily press has apparently taken the unusual as a production average. Their reports of bumper crops and new farm wealth and agricultural prosperity have had only one result and that is to beat down the price of agricultural products.

When the grain harvest is over it will be found that the press reports and crop estimates were exaggerated and that prices will go up. Then, as usual, it is too late for the average farmer, who has been forced to sell his grain to pay on his indebtedness that has accumulated during the agricultural depression.

While it cannot be proved that this "prosperity" propaganda is backed by the Grain Exchange, it certainly works to the benefit of the grain gamblers and to the detriment of the farmer.

When a little shower of rain in a part of Kansas, during the growing season, will depress the wheat market price, this exaggerated bumper crop propaganda certainly has and will cost the farmers millions of dollars.

Governor Benson's recent public protest against this type of manipulation should be endorsed by every farmer and business man in the Northwest.

Nazareth Harvest Festival

The Nazareth Harvest Festival which was held last Sunday was a grand success from all points of view. Rev. F. S. Hallanger of Madagascar was the speaker and he spoke at all three sessions. He preached the sermon at the morning worship, spoke very informally in the afternoon and gave an illustrated lecture by means of stereoptican slides in the evening. The Ladies Aid served dinner and afternoon lunch in a very efficient manner. The sale and the collections were very fine. The church was filled to capacity three times, all which made it a successful spiritual journey into the land of the Foreign Mission field.—Contributed.

A Bare Hope

"Mother," said little Mary, "they are going to teach us domestic silence at school now."

"Don't you mean domestic science?" inquired her mother.

Then the father interrupted: "Possibly our little girl means what she is saying."

Said a police court defendant: "I was not committing an assault. I was merely emphasizing the facts of the case." But perhaps he put too much punch into it?

Something Else

Chorus Girl—I stand in front of my mirror for hours admiring my beauty. I suppose you'd call that vanity?

Friend—No—imagination.

RUN DOWN

Stayleight—I feel as wound up tonight as a clock.

Miss Bored—But a clock tells the time and goes.

Bad Enough

"Didn't you say your dog's bark was worse than his bite?"

"Yes."

"Then for goodness' sake don't let him bark. He's just bitten me."

"Women nowadays leave men standing still," declares a writer. Especially outside shops.

High Time

A frequenter of one of our better-known seashores noticed a man who went bathing every day with a straw hat on his head. Upon inquiring the use of this seemingly superfluous piece of headgear, he received the reply:

"You see, I'm not a very good swimmer, and when my hat begins to float I know I'm out of my depth."

Watch Your Kidneys!

Help Them Cleanse the Blood of Harmful Body Waste

Your kidneys are constantly filtering waste matter from the blood stream. But kidneys sometimes lag in their work—do not act as Nature intended—fail to remove impurities that, if retained, may poison the system and upset the whole body machinery.

Symptoms may be nagging backache, persistent headache, attacks of dizziness, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes—a feeling of nervous anxiety and loss of pep and strength.

Other signs of kidney or bladder disorder may be burning, scanty or too frequent urination.

What Irvin S. Cobb Thinks about

Cures for Communism.

SANTA MONICA, CALIF.—A certain rich man out here—rich but indulgent—got a letter from his heir, a sophomore at one of the big eastern colleges.

The lad announced he had been converted to communism and was contributing to the cause. So what about it?

Irvin S. Cobb

The old man wrote back:

"Son, you have a perfect right to follow the dictates of your conscience. But as a consistent communist you naturally would not continue to live on the ill-gotten gains of a wicked money-grabber. Today I am cutting off your somewhat generous allowance. You will also vacate the luxurious apartment you now occupy because I'm not paying the rent of same any longer. So go ahead, my boy, and commune freely—with my blessings! But from date that'll be about all from this end of the line."

Exactly four hours after the arrival by air mail of this ultimatum, the hard-hearted parent got back a rush telegram stating that the young man had been thinking things over and had decided not to take up the new doctrine.

The Art of Listening.

WE HAD a party at which there appeared what I may call the dumb poets—Sam Hoffenstein and Ogden Nash. At the studios where they're both turning out epics, there's a rule that neither shall burst forth into poetry while he's under contract—no thumbing of the harp, no sounding of the lute. Cinema's gain is creation's loss.

Maybe that explains why they made such good listeners the other night. And isn't a good listener a boon! I don't mind being interrupted, provided the interrupter chooses the right subject. Mute and rapt, I can harken for hours on hours if someone is talking about me, say, or even reading from my published works. But these two minnesingers only broke in to ask that the pickled shrimp be passed or gently to suggest that another little drink or two wouldn't do any harm.

Ogden Nash has attained the highest peak of distinction attainable for a writer. His chief imitator has an imitator who is bringing up his oldest boy to be an imitator.

Resurrecting Old Words.

WHEN a word gets fashionable —especially a new word which some wordsmith thought up right out of his head—it gets too doggone fashionable. The same applies to old words which have been disinterred from their forgotten tombs in the dictionary.

I seem to see grave robbers prowling through the unabridged, starting in at "aard-vark," which is an animal formerly common only to Africa but not frequently found in cross-word puzles; and working on through to "zythum," a very strong beer drunk by ancient tribes. I guess those old-timers imbibed copiously of the brew and then named it. It doesn't sound like the sort of word a dead sober party deliberately would make up.

Do you remember the run "intrigued" had? I never got so sick of a word in my ife. And then along came "provocative," and it turned out to be a pest. People went around just looking for a chance to work "provocative" into the conversation. The only way to lick 'em was to pretend to be deaf and dumb.

And now the reigning favorite is "allergic." Folks spout it everywhere, whether they know what it means or not. I don't mind saying I'm getting awfully allergic to "allergic." There must be many others like me.

Campaign Books.

LET us not cavil too much because high pressure salesmen, working on commission, have been unloading upon the faithful, at fancy prices, the gift book put out by Washington headquarters to pay off campaign debts. In fact, 15 cents' worth would cover practically all the cavil I personally have used up in this connection.

The result tends to prove the gratifying fact that, while more Democrats may not necessarily have learned how to read and write, obviously more of us have got money than formerly was the case when the Republicans were in power.

Besides, think of what the strain would have been upon the poor postman if the national committee had been stuck with all this bulk literature and congressmen had started franking copies out to their constituents with Uncle Sam paying the freight. To give you a further idea about this franking privilege, I may state that it was named for Frank, Jesse's brother—and you'll remember how careless those James boys were with the United States mails!

Three Maids A-Sewing Go

LITTLE lady, it's time to say adieu, so long, good-by to that flimsy but faithful friend—your summer wardrobe. But don't fret, Milady, Sew-Your-Own is right on the job with sparkling new fashions for you; fashions that will make you forget the past and be remembered in the future. So let's not tarry: let's choose the style that's got the most sock for our particular figure and join this group that's going a-sewing!

Stadium Model.

Picture yourself in the trim-waisted little model at the left, if you would have an optimistic viewpoint and a head start on style this season. There's nothing younger than this topper with its dainty collar and cuffs, its snappy row of buttons and fetching peplum. The way it takes to the weightier fall fabrics is news, and equally intriguing is this fact: it's easy to sew!

Young 'n' Pretty.

Long slender lines of the princess variety make this the lucky number for your first autumn days. Of course you see it's a style to cut in at least two fabrics because it boasts utility plus beauty. If you're going to school you'll want it in acetate jersey or light-weight wool. Neat contrast is here, too, if you wish, in the collar, pocket flaps and buttons. (This is a simple eight-piece pattern.)

A Lift for You.

There's much ado about bodices this fall and unless you have a frock that carries a stylish one you won't feel right. Sew-Your-Own caters to this vogue in its new creation at the right. It is pencil slim and carefully styled to give you that chic young silhouette that distinguishes the lady of fashion. Make this handsome model of silk crepe, sheer wool or jersey and be fit for business or pleasure in town or country.

The Patterns.

Pattern 1376 is designed for sizes 12 to 20 (30 to 40 bust). Size 14 requires 4⅛ yards of 35-inch material.

Pattern 1347 is designed for sizes 14 to 20 (32 to 42 bust). Size 16 requires 4¾ yards of 35 or 39-inch material. With long sleeves 5⅛ yards plus ⅜ yard contrasting.

Grandmother inclined her head. "How do you do," she said coolly, with perfect self-possession, perfectly unmoved. "I knew your grandparents, I believe. And your father, too. I hope they are quite well?"

"Say," Graham demanded roughly of Bryn. This isn't Mrs. Larned herself. It's somebody dressed up to look like her. What're you trying to do, put something else over on me."

"I am Mrs. Larned," Grandmother said quietly. "You are Stuart Graham. I quite understand. Is there something I can do for you? Your father, as I remember him, was a gentleman, and he was our friend. Can I help you in any way for his sake?"

"You are Mrs. Larned?" he asked, incredulously. "You are Mrs. Larned, and you sit there as calm as ice when I tell you that I am Stuart Graham, and that this . . ." he indicated Bryn contemptuously, "that this fellow is nothing more than an imposter, a man who's been taking advantage of you, who's married your granddaughter without your consent?"

"This is all you have to say to me?" Grandmother asked. "Nothing that you have said seems to me particularly interesting, or of any importance. I understand. And what, then?"

Graham stood foolishly for a moment, regarding her with disbelieving eyes. Then "This is a fine kettle of fish," he said. "Your husband took every precaution to see that Deborah and I should marry each other, and without any compunction whatever you let her marry another man. What about me? I've been banking on marrying her, all my life!"

"I am sure that 'banking' is a very well chosen word," Grandmother commented.

He flushed darkly. "That's all very well. I suppose you realize that she doesn't get the money, now that she's married this smart guy who's got you wound around his finger? I suppose you can afford to snap your fingers at that, at deliberately throwing away everything your family ever had?"

"Mr. Graham, I cannot think that this is any of your affair," said Grandmother, quietly. "I am sorry, but I cannot possibly see why you concern yourself with this matter. It no longer is any concern of yours. Your interest, it seems to me, is a trifle belated." Grandmother put Deborah's hand firmly away from her, and stood up. "And I will add, now that I have seen you, that I shall thank God every moment of the remainder of my life that it is none of your concern, that when you had the opportunity to make it so, you thought us beneath your respect. I would rather have starved, and Deborah with me, than to have her marry you. I would rather see Deborah where her mother is, in her grave, than in the hands of such a man as you are."

Graham drew back. "You believe anything you're told, don't you?" he sneered. "I suppose you think this is a very romantic marriage, this match between the girl and a young rolling-in-gold millionaire, this James Weldon Shipley Brynildson, Third, who pretends to fall in love with your precious granddaughter and marries her at sight. Well, let me tell you, it isn't half as romantic as it looks. Do you know what he is? He's nothing but a cheap adventurer, that's all, going around the world buying thrills with his money. This is a new one, this is. He hasn't done this before. But wait . . . when he's tired of his new toy, then you'll see what'll happen. He'll drop her like a wrung mop-rag."

"That's enough," Bryn said sharply, and stepped forword. He turned to Grandmother. "Is there anything further you wish to say to him?" he asked her quietly.

"Nothing, my boy," Grandmother answered steadily, still standing proudly.

"Then," Bryn said directly to Graham, "on your way. Go on," he said between his teeth, "if you know what's good for you."

Graham backed off precipitately.

"Just a minute," Tubby said softly. "Where did you get all your information about our hero?"

"It's none of your damn' business," Graham said.

"Let him go," Bryn said sharply to Tubby. "It's obvious, isn't it?"

Pilar, back in the shadows, stirred. With a set frozen face she rose, walked past Grandmother and Deborah and Bryn, standing together at the top of the steps, and past Graham staring at her. She went across the grass and got into her car. She started the motor. The car turned on two wheels, scraped Graham's fender, and darted off, without a backward glance from Pilar.

* * * * * * * *

The morning, Bryn discovered, had somehow whirled itself away. Pilar was gone; Graham was gone. Tubby and Madeline had gone wandering off into the woods, with an apple apiece, and an injunction from Sally not to return until Tubby could look at Madeline without that dazed expression. Sally herself had taken a cushion out to the lawn after lunch, with that avowed intention of getting another layer of sun-tan, but she had promptly gone to sleep there in the heat, and Simon had carried out an umbrella and erected it over her to keep her from burning. Grandmother was asleep, too, on the couch before the open window in the sitting room. Bryn left the room softly, and shut the door behind him; and then he went on with his search for Deborah.

He went down the path toward the brook with long, quick steps, and came at last to the solid ring of trees that formed the back of Deborah's most hidden sanctuary.

Bryn rapped lightly on the tree trunk under his hand. She turned, quickly, and looked up, her eyes dark and still full of dreams, her mouth red and soft. Bryn stood between the two trees, and just outside them. "May I come in, Deborah?" he asked.

She dropped her lashes. "If you . . . wish," she said in a low voice.

He squeezed through the opening and came down the slope toward her. She was seated in the hollow like a throne, with a level bank to sit on and a sloping back covered with thick green grass. She did not speak. Bryn went down the slope and came to a halt below her.

Deborah would not look up. Bryn moved nearer and dropped down a yard away, his eyes upon her. "Haven't you forgiven me," Bryn asked at last, gently, "for not telling you that Grandmother knew? I told her on that ride."

"You did try to tell me."

"Tell me what's troubling you, Deborah. All the fears and worries are gone, dear."

She caught her lower lip between two white teeth. She shook her head. Bryn moved closer to her. He tried to take her hands, but she pulled them away.

She swallowed. Then, "I wish you'd go away," she said under her breath.

"Go away?"

"The others are going today. After dinner. You could go with them."

"Go away, Deborah? Go away from you, you mean? Leave you here? Go back to San Francisco?"

She nodded, her eyes on the leaf.

Bryn put his face down into his hands. After a long time he said, slowly, "I don't understand, Deborah. This morning you . . . why, you gave me this flower!" he said, touching it. "I thought you were beginning to care a little about me."

She did not reply.

He looked down at Deborah's bent head. "That's final, then?" he asked quietly. She did not answer.

"Sorry," he said after a moment. "I suppose I was a fool to think that you could possibly care about me. You're so exquisite, and so fine, and you're not made out of ordinary stuff like the rest of us. I might have known from the beginning that it wasn't any use. I think I did know, Deborah, so you needn't reproach yourself."

She was gazing up at him, still with that anguished look in her eyes. Bryn managed a smile. He held his hand out. "Shake hands?" he inquired. "If you don't mind, Deborah, I think I'll go now instead of waiting until tonight."

She got to her feet slowly. Her face was as white as chalk. She put her hand in his. "Good-by," she whispered, and he stood for a moment looking into her eyes, then turned away.

"No," Deborah said clearly. "No. It isn't any use. I can't let you go." She was beside him, her hands on his arms, her face upheld to his. "I can't let you go," she said. "I don't care what you think about me. I don't care if I am a new kind of toy to you. I don't care if this is only a part of an adventure to you, an adventure that will be over . . . tomorrow, or in just a little while. I don't care about anything, or what happens to me, only I can't let you go away from me. I haven't got any pride or any strength left." Bryn stood, motionless, staring down at her in bewilderment. "Don't you understand?" she cried again. "I . . . I love you."

"Love me?" he repeated incredulously.

"You mean," Bryn repeated, with dawning understanding, "you mean, you love me?"

"Never! I Am Still Lafayette"

In the course of the French Revolution the Jacobins dismissed Lafayette from the army, declared him an exile, and offered a reward for his capture. While attempting to escape to America, he was taken at Liege and was then imprisoned in Germany. When he fell ill in prison, he was offered freedom on condition that he would join in a plot against France. His heroic reply, which brought him long confinement in an Austrian prison was, "Never! I am still Lafayette.'

NO ONE could blame Robert Taylor if he decided to avoid New York City on his return from Europe. The reception his fans gave him was so frenzied a demonstration that several stalwart policemen are still nursing bruises.

It was bad enough at the railroad station, where screeching women broke through police lines and shoved each other around in an effort to shake his hand. But that was nothing to what occurred on the Berengaria just as the ship was about to sail with him on board. Girls in their teens simply swarmed all over the boat, climbing over railings, breaking through guard ropes, hiding themselves under life boats.

Sailing was delayed half an hour because a steward found two youngsters hiding under the bed in Taylor's stateroom, and it was thought wise to search the rest of the ship.

Taylor was wearing a three-year old battered brown felt hat, a brown sports coat, gray slacks and shirt and sturdy brown sports shoes and looked as wholesome and modest as a powerful farmhand.

Before "Vogues of 1938" opened in New York, the professional dress models association gave a party for Joan Bennett, and gave her a plaque to commemorate the occasion. They say she has given new dignity to the modeling profession by appearing in this picture. Joan is the most modest and inconspicuous guest of honor you ever saw at a party. She drifted in so quietly that few even saw her. She has many charming traits.

Columbia Pictures have entered the competition to see who can crowd the most radio, stage, and night club celebrities in one picture and at the moment it looks as if they are well in the lead. Their "Freshman Follies" will include Gertrude Neisen, Jimmy Durante, Hal Le Roy, the sensational tap dancer, and Johnny Breen, who has grown so popular as bandmaster on that Tuesday night automobile hour.

Several of the radio stars around N. B. C. headquarters are dashing through second-hand stores and Chinatown curio shops these days and studying books on Chinese ceramics at odd moments. It is all the fault of John Gambling, commentator on the Monday night "Melody Revue." He recently sold eight rare vases for five thousand dollars after buying them for eight hundred.

Ramon Novarro went to Reading and Harrisburg, Pennsylvania, a few days ago to attend the first showings of his Republic picture, "The Sheik Steps Out," and came back quite dazed and deeply touched by the warmth of his receptions. Crowds came from far and near to meet him at the station, escort him to his hotel and then on to the theater. He appeared four times a day and sang encore after encore and still the audience shouted for more.

Smilin' Ed McConnell, radio's well loved singer, humorist and philosopher has returned to the air for his sixth consecutive year as dispenser of good cheer on Sunday afternoons. With the new series of thirty-nine weeks comes a change of outlet to N. B. C.'s Blue Network, giving the Acme singer-sage a coast-to-coast hookup. Genial and corpulent Ed returned from "the little place in the North woods" after a summer of fishing, swimming and "jes' loafin' around." He is being supported in his half-hour broadcast by a distinguished group of musicians.

Conceited Beau Brummell

Beau Brummell (1778-1840), the master dandy of all time, was so idolized by the aristocracy of London as an arbiter of dress and manners that, eventually, he became unbearably conceited. One night he even ordered a duchess out of his house, during a reception, because her "dress was cut too low in the back." The gentleman's taste was so offended that he had to cover his eyes while she humbly backed out of the ballroom.—Collier's Weekly.

1937 STATE FAIR DEDICATES BEST PLANT IN U. S.

New Horse and Poultry Pavilions Ready—Educational Exhibits Best Ever

Minnesota's march of progress in agriculture, industry and the home will be presented by the greatest educational program in history at the Minnesota State Fair, September 4 to 11.

All indications point to a record Exposition with agriculture on the uptrend and business definitely improving. Every phase of life will be represented in the huge Exposition, giving an accurate cross-section of marvelous Minnesota's pre-eminence in the parade of states. The 1936 all-time attendance record of 636,484 will be surpassed, Fair officials predict.

Recognized as the "World's Greatest State Fair," the Exposition this year will dedicate several new units of the extensive building program which has given it the finest physical fair plant on the continent. Two of the world's largest and most modern fireproof structures, a new horse pavilion and a new poultry building will be dedicated. Visitors also will find an extensive new concrete grandstand approach, new speed barns for race horses and greatly enlarged auto parking facilities.

$100,000 in Prizes

Cash premium awards of $100,000 will be the most generous in a decade. Every department has been allotted increased prize money with more than $40,000 being offered in the livestock classes as an incentive to improved quality in breeding and feeding.

Added premiums and improved housing conditions have attracted a record entry of nearly 7,000 head of cattle, horses, sheep and swine—the world's finest—all in competitions for honors amounting to world's championships.

This year 50,000 4-H boys and girls will celebrate the Silver Jubilee of Minnesota club work. Special displays, demonstrations and projects presented by 3,000 boys and girls, winners in preliminary contests, will give an accurate picture of this great farm youth movement.

The fine crops assure a record for beauty and quality in the 34 county booth displays in the Agricultural building—Minnesota's annual report of actual farm conditions.

Labor Saving Displays

Labor-saving devices and new models of agricultural machinery, all designed to make the farm and home dollar go further, will be introduced in the 80-acres of moving-type machinery displays.

Every one of the 151 buildings on the spacious fair grounds will be crammed with exhibits reaching the interests of everyone and will range in subject from bee-keeping to silo building and from profitable livestock husbandry to infant welfare.

Carlson Gave Talk On Trip

The meeting of the Mens' Club held at the Nazareth Lutheran Church Monday evening was well attended. The ladies were invited guests at this meeting and were treated to coffee and lunch prepared and served by the men.

Mr. George Karvonen was elected president of the club to fill the vacancy left there by Mr. Nybakken's resignation.

Mr. Arvid Carlson gave a very interesting talk on his recent trip to Norway and Sweden.

He told of the trip across the ocean and of the thrill of seeing again the land of his birth. Mr. Carlson said, "Although I am Swedish, I must say that Norway has the most beautiful scenery of the two countries, with its rivers, lakes, waterfalls and valleys among the snow capped mountains". He also told of the gorgeous roses there.

Mr. Carlson made a special study of the economic condition over there in connection with his Merchants Association work here, and gave a very good review of conditions in his talk.

He also showed several old relics that he had brought back with him. Among these were a hand woven linen table cloth, his mothers first pair of shoes, a pair of candle sticks which was a gift of his father to his mother when they became engaged, an old pipe, old money, an old tooth puller and numerous other articles.

Willis Fluke returned home Saturday from Fordville, N. D. where he worked thru threshing.

Raymond Seigmoen of Hartford Wisconsin, Mr. and Mrs. Hugo Herman and family of Niagara, N. D., Mr. and Mrs. C. L. Heinze of Thief River Falls visited at the Wm. Fluke home Sunday.

Sunday School Rally

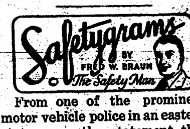
The Nazareth Lutheran Sunday School children will have their Rally Day on Sunday at 2:30. All the children who wish to take part in the Rally Day should attend Sunday School on Sunday morning. Rally Day buttons will be given to all children who have enrolled. Each child will receive a free ice cream cone. We ask the mothers to bring cake or cookies. Ice cream and coffee will be served. We invite all.

Sunday School had a fine start last Sunday. We urge those who are confirmed to attend Bible Class.



From one of the prominent motor vehicle police in an eastern state came the statement that the majority of accidents can be traced to the driver who is violating the law.

To some drivers law observance doesn't seem to mean anything at all. This type must be forced to obey the laws. Education has no effect upon them. Their code is not: What is law? but What can I get away with? It is the latter that the officer refers to, no doubt, and he is right.

We need better law enforcement on our highways. What would happen if our railroads, steamship lines, and other companies were as weak in enforcing safety regulations as some of our states are in enforcing safety regulations on our highways? Give the reckless driver his due punishment and enforce the law rigidly.

Mrs. S. Lorentson and Mrs. G. Sanoden and Gladys visited Mrs. Freda Anderson at the Victor Johnson home on Wednesday afternoon.

Given Enthusiastic Response

An immediate, enthusiastic response to the farm conference called by Governor Benson has been reported throughout the state. Farmers who have received a very small part of the "million dollars a day" which Twin Cities papers asserted was lining their pockets have welcomed the plan to seriously consider farm problems and prepare the ground for needed legislation at the next session of Congress.

Commissioner of Agriculture Ommodt, after talking with farmers and leaders of farm organizations, stated that the real, dirt farmers who know what they are up against are going to write their own demrnds. No program will be laid out beforehand, although discussion will follow the points outlined by Governor Benson calling for protection against falling prices, improvement of tenancy conditins, and maintaining economic gains made through good harvests.

The Governor, in his Labor Day address at the State Fair, pointed out that there can be no real prosperity for the farmer unless the city worker, who is the farmer's principal customer receives sufficient in wages to buy the products of the farm.

Stressing the need for a real solution for farmers' problems, Governor Benson asserted, "When they tell you that in 1937 Minnesota's farmers will probably receive a gross income of a million dollars a day, they do not also tell you that over $600,0000,000 in debts are piled up against those farmers and that 69 per cent of our farms are mortgaged."

These farmers are still in need of a lift, the Governor continued, and a steady market is a vital factor in affording them some measure of seucrity.

Governor Benson's position that the farmers problems are far from solved by increased income during 1937 are fully borne out by a study prepared by Labor Research Assn.

It states that the increase in in farm income of sbout 70 per cent since the low point of the crisis still leaves farmers gross income more than 20 per cent below the average yearly totals for the period from 1923 to 1929.

Victor Johnson spent a few days this week at St. Lukes' hospital at Thief River Falls where he received treatment.

Save Straw For Farmers

The area effected by the flood will be badly in need of good bright straw to use as roughage for their horses and Walter E. Johnson, Field Supervisor of the State Department of Agriculture in charge of its Flood Relief Office at Thief River Falls, is making the request that no bright straw in the communities adjacent to the Flood Area be burned, indicating that his office would be willing to buy such straw at a reasonable price.

Mr. Johnson said that much bright straw will be needed in the effected communities to be used as roughage for horses, the hay being very musty and unfit for horses especially and if fed to horses would cause heaves and in a short time a high priced horse, fed this musty hay, would be a low priced horse.

In accordance the appeal is made to all communities within a radius of twenty miles of the flood area to refrain from burning straw that would be fit for roughage. Anyone having bright straw for sale should get in touch with Mr. Johnson at the Rural Credit Office in Thief River Falls.

They're Not All Professors—Those Absent-Minded Ones

Absent-mindedness isn't confined to the professors, says the Commentator.

The late Dwight W. Morrow once telephoned his secretary from Philadelphia, to inquire, "What am I in Philadelphia for?"

Secretary Henry A. Wallace, when he was in Czechoslovakia, packed his passport in a trunk that was shipped to London, while he set off in the opposite direction.

And J. David Stern, publisher of the New York Post and Philadelphia Record, was hurrying along the street when he met a friend.

"Come on and have lunch with me," the friend said.

"If we go nearby," Stern said. "I'm late as it is."

They entered the nearest restaurant and sat down. Stern complained that he didn't know what was the matter with him, he didn't seem to be hungry.

"Beg pardon, sir," the waiter said, "but it's no wonder, sir. You just finished your lunch about ten minutes ago."

768 Miles a Day by Ship

The record for the longest distance ever traveled by a ship in 24 hours is not held by either the Queen Mary or the Normandie but by the United States Airplane Carrier Lexington. During a run between San Francisco and Honolulu in 1928, this 33,000-ton vessel, whose maximum speed is 33-34 knots, traveled 768 miles in one day.—Collier's Weekly.

A Great Motto

ONE of America's great business organizations has adopted a motto for the guidance of its people—a little five-letter word with a big meaning. It has been cut in huge granite letters over the entrance of a recently constructed building used as a training school. It is made the theme of many employee discussions. It hangs over the desk of company executives. The word is THINK.

Educators, philosophers, preachers throughout the ages have written and talked about it. Rodin gave the world a famous statue called "The Thinker." "Think" is a significant word. It represents the only means by which human progress can be accomplished. It annoys people who have lazy minds, because thinking means mental effort. Practically all the accidents in the world are caused because people don't think. Thousands fail in life simply because they don't think. Others give great inventions to the world because they do think.—The Pick-Up.

TAPPING RUBBER TREES ON FIRESTONE PLANTATIONS IN LIBERIA

From the Firestone plantations in Liberia comes an ever-increasing supply of the world's finest rubber. Money saved here and in manufacturing and distribution enable Firestone to sell a safer, first-quality tire at lower prices.

Here's Why FIRESTONE STANDARD TIRES GIVE YOU MORE FOR YOUR MONEY

DON'T take chances on your Week End trip. Protect yourself and family by equipping your car with a set of new first-quality Firestone Standard Tires. Firestone builds extra quality and extra safety into these tires and sells them at lower prices because Firestone controls rubber and cotton supplies at their sources, manufactures with greater efficiency and distributes at lower cost.

YOU GET EXTRA PROTECTION AGAINST BLOWOUTS—eight extra pounds of rubber are added to every 100 pounds of cord because every fiber of every cord in every ply is saturated with liquid rubber by the Firestone patented Gum-Dipping Process. This counteracts the internal friction and heat that ordinarily cause blowouts.

YOU GET EXTRA PROTECTION AGAINST PUNCTURES—because there are two extra layers of Gum-Dipped cords under the tread.

YOU GET EXTRA PROTECTION AGAINST SKIDDING—because the tread is scientifically designed.

YOU GET LONGER NON-SKID MILEAGE—because of the extra-tough, long-wearing tread.

You need all of these features to make your car tire-safe on your Week End trip. Firestone gives them to you at lower cost. Join the Firestone SAVE A LIFE Campaign today by equipping your car with a set of new Firestone Standard Tires—today's top tire value.

"Mermaids" Vanishing

The "mermaids" will soon be extinct. These curious sea creatures, resembling human beings and which were mistaken for them by old-time sailors, are dugongs, a species of sea-cow, which were exceedingly common in the Indian and South Atlantic oceans years ago. Now, due to the constant commercial hunting for their meat and oil and the sharks ravaging their young, they are among the rarest of all living creatures.

WOMEN WHO HOLD THEIR MEN NEVER LET THEM KNOW

NO matter how much your back aches and your nerves scream, your husband, because he is only a man, can never understand why you are so hard to live with one week in every month.

Too often the honeymoon express is wrecked by the nagging tongue of a three-quarter wife. The wise woman never lets her husband know by outward sign that she is a victim of periodic pain.

For three generations one woman has told another how to go "smiling through" with Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. It helps Nature tone up the system, thus lessening the discomforts from the functional disorders which women must endure in the three ordeals of life: 1. Turning from girlhood to womanhood. 2. Preparing for motherhood. 3. Approaching "middle age."

Don't be a three-quarter wife, take LYDIA E. PINKHAM'S VEGETABLE COMPOUND and Go "Smiling Through."

Sentinels of Health

Don't Neglect Them!

Nature designed the kidneys to do a marvelous job. Their task is to keep the flowing blood stream free of an excess of toxic impurities. The act of living—life itself—is constantly producing waste matter the kidneys must remove from the blood if good health is to endure.

When the kidneys fail to function as Nature intended, there is retention of waste that may cause body-wide distress. One may suffer nagging backache, persistent headache, attacks of dizziness, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes—feel tired, nervous, all worn out.

Frequent, scanty or burning passages may be further evidence of kidney or bladder disturbance.

The recognized and proper treatment is a diuretic medicine to help the kidneys get rid of excess poisonous body waste. Use Doan's Pills. They have had more than forty years of public approval. Are endorsed the country over. Insist on Doan's. Sold at all drug stores.

She lifted her wet lashes and looked at him. With a little groan he moved his arms at last, and closed them tight around her. He bent his head, and put his lips to her eyelids.

"Deborah."

She turned her head, slowly, and looked up at him. A flood of color swept up over her face. He smiled tenderly down at her. "You funny little chicken," he said. "Do you think it would be much of an adventure just to marry anybody, Deborah? Do you think I would have offered to marry just any girl at all who happened to be in your predicament? Not in this world, you foolish baby. The minute I saw you standing there in the office, Deborah, something said to me . . . there's your girl, Bryn, out of all the world. I was completely lost from that very first look, sweetheart, and I wasn't going to let you go no matter what happened.

"I was afraid to do anything at all for fear I'd lose you, and it's been just about as bad ever since we were married. You don't know how often I've gone out and cut firewood and hammered nails just to keep myself away from you."

Deborah turned and buried her face again in his shoulder.

He put a hand beneath her cheek, and turned her head again. His eyes looked down into hers, and gray clung to violet again, but there was a new expression in both. Then, slowly, he bent his head, and put his lips down to hers, so soft and young and innocent.

"Deborah," he said gently, "I love you. You're the only girl in the world, as far as I'm concerned. Deborah . . . will you be my wife? What I'm asking you now is whether or not you think that some time you might love me enough really to be my wife. I couldn't hope for so much yet, but later, when you get to know me better, and trust me more, do you think you could?"

She began to understand. "When you're a wife you think about . . . that is, about having children, don't you?"

"If you want children."

"Well," Deborah said positively, "I do. There isn't any difficult about that. I've wanted them for years and years. I built this playhouse for them, long ago, for a little boy and a little girl." She looked at him and smiled. "So that's all right," she said.

"Yes," he said after a moment, "that seems to be all right. I think we could practically count on something like that eventually." He reached into his watch pocket and drew out a ring box. Then drew out the ring. He lifted Deborah's hand, and slowly took off her wedding ring. He slipped the new ring on the finger where the wedding ring had been, lifted the hand and put it to his lips. "That's your engagement ring, dear," he said.

Deborah looked down at it. It was a great gleaming pearl, flushed the palest rose, and set exquisitely in thin gold filigree. "It's . . . lovely," she breathed.

"It was my mother's."

Deborah looked up at him.

"When you want your wedding ring," Bryn went on carefully, lifting a curl on her temple, "when you're sure of me, and positive that you're making no mistake, and when you get to know that you feel about me the way I feel about you—as nearly as you can, of course . . . and can't live without me, I'll be very glad to put it back on your finger. As far as I'm concerned, Deborah, I never did approve of long engagements."

• • • • • • •

It was time at last to say good-by to the guests. Sally and Madeline got into knitted dresses and Simon and Tubby into knickerbockers, and their bags were put into the car, and Grandmother had insisted on having Gary pack a basket of fruit for them and at last they were gone.

Grandmother went to bed early, tired from a hard day. Deborah and Bryn sat near the door, and looked across at the moon. "I can't believe that you're real, and that you love me, and that we're here together, alone," he said. "Tell me again, Deborah."

She told him again, and when Deborah looked at him she knew that she loved him for always, and when he spoke his voice rang in her heart.

After a long time he rose. "You'd better get to bed, sweetheart," he said, and his voice held the deep low note in it she was beginning to understand. "It's been a long day for you, too."

"Are you coming up too?"

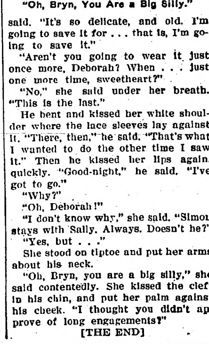
"I'll take you up. I'll carry you up," he decided, and slipped his arms beneath her. They reached the top at last, and were in her sitting room.

"Why did you wear your wedding dress tonight?" he asked.

"Oh," Deborah murmured, "just because. Do you . . . like it?"

"I'll never forget the first time I saw you in it, Deborah."

She looked up at him. "This is the last time I'm going to wear it," she said. "It's so delicate, and old. I'm going to save it for . . . that is, I'm going to save it."



"Oh, Bryn, You Are a Big Silly."

"Aren't you going to wear it just once more, Deborah? When . . . just one more time, sweetheart?"

"No," she said under her breath. "This is the last."

He bent and kissed her white shoulder where the lace sleeves lay against it. "There, then," he said. "That's what I wanted to do the other time I saw it." Then he kissed her lips again, quickly. "Good-night," he said. "I've got to go."

"Why?"

"Oh, Deborah!"

"I don't know why," she said. "Simon stays with Sally. Always. Doesn't he?"

"Yes, but . . ."

She stood on tiptoe and put her arms about his neck.

"Oh, Bryn, you are a big silly," she said contentedly. She kissed the cleft in his chin, and put her palm against his cheek. "I thought you didn't approve of long engagements?"

[THE END]

Vermont Was Haunt of Silversmiths in Bleak Days of the Nineteenth Century

The craft of the silversmith did not flourish in Vermont until well into the Nineteenth century. The reason is not far to seek, writes Richmond Huntley in American Collector. Although Samuel Champlain, in his voyage up the lake that bears his name, explored part of its western boundary as early as 1609, few settlers had the temerity to locate there until a century and a half later. First, it was an Indian battleground. Then, raiding parties found it a convenient thoroughfare between Canada and southern New England.

Nevertheless, attempts at settlement were made as early as 1752 and with the English conquest of Canada the number of adventurers attracted by the fertile soil of the valleys lying between Lake Champlain and the Connecticut river steadily increased. Conditions were to remain more or less in a pioneer state for another half century.

No sooner had the settlers bought their lands than this region on either side of the Green mountains, popularly known as the New Hampshire Grants became a bone of contention, first between the governments of New Hampshire and New York and then between the latter and the settlers themselves. The controversy, though partly obscured by the Revolutionary war and the unsettled conditions thereafter, continued for more than twenty-six years and was settled only when Vermont, a separate entity, was admitted, in 1791, as a state to the Union.

Consequently, the Eighteenth Century Vermonter had little time and less money for luxuries. His house was either of logs or squared timbers. His furnishings were of the plainest.

To the indespensable trade of blacksmith and shoemaker were added others common to the time. By the turn of the century, or shortly afterward, there were blast furnaces, nail factories, paper mills, glass houses, distilleries, tanneries, fulling mills and the like.

There were cabinetmakers and a few struggling silversmiths. Of the latter one is known to have been working in Rutland about 1795. There is record of another in Bennington even earlier.

Twenty years after Vermont became a state the population had increased from 90,000 to nearly 160,000 and by 1840 had doubled. Meanwhile silversmiths came and went. Some stayed a short time in a town and then moved on; others remained and either combined their trade with clockmaking or some other calling. It was left for two men, working in the latter years of American silversmithing, to become the outstanding silver craftsmen of Vermont both as regards quantity and standard of workmanship. These two men, Roswell H. and Bradbury M. Bailey, one working on "the east side" of the state at Woodstock and the other in the Otter Creek valley at Rutland, dominated silversmithing in their state and successfully resisted factory competition until the third quarter of the Nineteenth century.

What Irvin S. Cobb Thinks about

Tombstone Inscriptions.

PHOENIX, ARIZ.—A gentleman took me sightseeing through a cemetery that abounded in proud mausoleums and stately shafts.

I figured he wanted to show me that rich folks continue to enjoy the utmost luxury even after becoming deceased.

Irvin S. Cobb

How futile and how vain are most tombstone inscriptions. They give the dates of birth and death — events in neither of which the departed had any say-so — unless he committed suicide. And just as the average graveside eulogy is a belated plea for the defense, offered after the evidence is all in, so an epitaph is an advertisement for a line of goods which permanently has been discontinued.

Somehow this burying ground stuff reminds me of hired critics of other men's efforts. The difference between professional book reviewers and the other obituarians is that the latter do their work after you pass on, but the reviewers can't wait until you're dead to write your literary death notice for you.

Maybe critics are to authors what fleas were to David Harum's dog; they keep authors from brooding on being authors.

Catching Barracuda.

LEO CARILLO is quite a yachtsman when not acting for the screen or leading parades. He's our champion parade leader. It's got so they don't dare let a colored funeral go past his house for fear he'll rush right out and head the procession.

On one of those days when there wasn't a parade, he took Victor Moore and me out on his boat. We caught a mess of slim, yet fragrant fish. Leo called them barracuda, but, with their low retreating foreheads and greedy jaws, they looked more like shyster lawyers to me—the kind who chase ambulances and eventually get disbarred.

Glad, Mad Artists.

HERETOFORE, the glad, mad geniuses, who produce masterpieces of sculpture and painting which resemble nothing on heaven or earth or in the waters below except possibly some bad dream which these parties had once while feeling pretty bilious, have depended upon the ultra-ults among the intelligentsia for support.

But now one hears divers millionaires may endow for them an academy or a gallery—or possibly it's an asylum for the more violent cases. Anyhow, there's money behind the cult, and when money gets behind a thing in this country, it usually flourishes, provided the money doesn't get too far behind, as happened in 1929, when the rest of the country was trying to figure out what had become of the deposits and investments, which we, of the sucker class, had entrusted to our leading financial wizards.

Still, we of that same ignorant mass-group do not have to buy examples of this new schoool. We don't even have to look at them unless we're in Germany and are escorted to the official state-run display by a regiment of Nazi storm-troopers.

And, aside from their ideas of what constitutes art, it's said that some of the artists themselves are not really dangerous, merely annoying in an itchy sort of way. In other words, they're all right if you don't get one of 'em on you.

Pugilistic Authors.

I'M ALWAYS missing something. On the occasion of one really historic battle between a brace of distinguished writers, I yawningly left the scene before Messrs. Sinclair Lewis and Theodore Dreiser quit swapping hard words and started swapping soft blows.

And it was just my luck to be out here recently when Ernest Hemingway threw a book—or maybe it was a publisher; anyhow some such hard, knobby object—at Mr. Max Eastman and Mr. Eastman retorted with a tremendous push which damaged Mr. Hemingway not at all.

The typical writer, no matter how red-blooded his style may be, packs all his wallops in his pen and never in his fist. There have been exceptions. Once Rex Beach cleaned out a night club all by himself, but his opponents were hoodlums, not fellow-writers. He had something substantial to work on.

Some of my belligerent brethren in the writing game never lose an argument, but, on the other hand, none of them ever won a fight. Neither did their literary opponents. In fact, next to the average professional pugilist, I can think of no one who, in the heat of combat, equals a writer for showing such magnificent self-control when it comes either to inflicting personal injury or sustaining same.

Early State Names

If President Thomas Jefferson had had his say-so, there would have been more than the present states comprising the Northwest Territory and most of their names would have been tongue twisters.

As you know, the Northwest Territory consists of Ohio, Illinois, Indiana, Michigan, Wisconsin and part of Minnesota, but Jefferson's suggested names were Sylvania, Cheronesus, Michigania, Assenisipia, Metropotamia, Illinoia, Saratoga, Washington, Polypotamia and Pelisipia. These names can be found on the early maps.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Meeting was called to order by the Chairman at nine o'clock A. M. All members were present.

Minutes of August 3rd and 4th and August 10th, 1937 were read and approved.

Meeting was adjourned to nine o'clock A. M. Wednesday September 8th, 1937.

Commissioner O. J. Johnson offered the following resolution and moved its adoption:

WHEREAS, The heavy rains of this summer have created floods which have caused serious damage to large areas of agricultural lands in this county through losses of valuable crops, hay, feed and livestock, and,

WHEREAS, A System of judicial, county and other ditches created heretofore for the purpose of affording proper drainage for these valuable and highly productive agricultural areas is now entirely inadequate to provide proper drainage on account of its impaired condition occasioned by caveins, heavy shrubbery growths and silt deposits, and,

WHEREAS, In several instances original plans with respect to land reclamation for farm purposes have recently been reversed to the detriment of thousands of acres of developed and proven farm lands, and,

WHEREAS, In these changes of plans, provisions by means of additional ditches for the protection of said developed farm lands have not been made, and,

WHEREAS, This matter of adequate drainage and proper water control is of the utmost importance to many operating farmers in the adversely affected areas of Marshall County;

NOW, THEREFORE, BE IT RESOLVED, That the State of Minnesota through its appropriate state departments make thorough investigations and surveys with a view to drawing up a comprehensive report on the situation to the end that adequate drainage and flood water protection may be afforded now and for the future.

NEW DISEASE IS THREAT TO SWINE

—Prepared by American Foundation for Animal Health

Another new and serious livestock disease has recently been recognized in this country, and American farmers will do well to be on their guard against it.

This disease is the virulent form of Swine Erysipelas. For many years it has been well-known in European and South American countries. In fact, Swine Erycipelas has outranked Hog Cholera in Europe in the destruction of swine. Knowing the deadliness of cholera, American farmers can judge from this fact the seriousness of this newer disease, and the ravages it might cause, if it were allowed to make headway.

There has been a mild or chronic form of swine erysipelas in this country for a long time. But the killing form of the disease has now appeared in recent years in widely separated parts of the country. A most confusing fact is that, in some forms of the disease, the symptoms and tissue changes are very similar to those of hog cholera. The animals run a temperature, lose appetite, sometimes have difficulty in moving about, and separate themselves from the herd.

Satisfactory control of the disease is possible when proper measures are promptly employed but, in many untreated herds, the losses have been very serious.

Another fact which swine raisers should note is man's susceptibility to the same germ which causes swine erysipelas. Handling swine affected with the disease, or products of swine which have the disease, may result in a person contracting it, with serious consequences.

The only safe course, where swine show evidences of any of the above symptoms, is to call a veterinarian for immediate and accurate diagnosis and treatment.

The similarity between swine erysipelas and hog cholera symptoms is very close, and delay in proper diagnosis may result in a heavy loss. Cholera of course, can be prevented by vaccination. The safest precaution is to have hogs immunized against cholera, and to procure a quick, accurate diagnosis of any herd disease affecting swine.

Farm Prosperity Hits Snag

The attempt of Twin Cities newspapers to bring about farm prosperity through headlines has struck a snag. The farmers refuse to be convinced. Response to Governor Benson's call for a conference to discuss farm problems indicates that the farmers still consider that they have problems - plenty of them.

Typical of the letters received by Charles Ommodt, commissioner of agriculture, who is handling all preparations for the conference to be held in St. Paul October 4, is one from Andrew Jensen, vice president of the Farmers Union. Says Jensen, "This certainly is a move in the right direction and I hope Governor Benson pushes it to the limit. This propaganda is vicious and detrimental to the welfare of the farmers and the public in general."

The conference is being called so that farmers may map out a legislative program dealing with such matters as crop insurance, price stability, debts, interest, etc.

The large state-wide farm organizations and cooperatives are being asked to send official representatives, while local organizations will be urged to see that their voice is also heard. It is expected, judging from early replies to the call, that a thousand independent farmers are planning on attending.

In addition to the wide response to the conference in Minnesota, farmers of North Dakota have also indicated their interest. Oliver Rosenberg, state president of the Farmers Holiday Assn., wrote Governor Benson that they are ready to participate in a conference to lay a comprehensive farm program.

"North Dakota farmers are far from prosperous," Rosenberg said. "The prosperity stories in the big newspapers will only make it more difficult for our people to eke out a living this winter." A like opinion was expressed by Morris Erickson, state secretary of the Farmers Union.

Stringent collections enforced by the Farm Credit Administration and private creditors are being met with hostility by farmers who feel that unless they are accorded some leniency they will be no better off than in drought years.

4-H Club Achievement Day

A large enrollment is expected at Warren at the 4-H club Achievement Day on Saturday, Sept. 25. All the exhibits will be in the large 4-H club building at the fair grounds. A show ring is being prepared at one end. The judges, O. M. Kiser, A. M. Pilkey, and A. C. Vogele from the Northwest School, will give oral reason on their placing of all the projects. It is hoped that a large number will be present because of the educational value which may be derived from seeing and hearing the decisions of the judges.

It is hoped that a lamb blocking and hog fitting demonstration will be staged in the afternoon prior to the livestock judging. This may be in the form of a demonstration or on a competitive basis.

Committees are working hard for the preparation of the evening program, also. The following committee has been appointed to have charge of games for the evening: Grace Anderson, Chairman; Lola Rosendahl; Mr. and Mrs. Andy Morkassel, George Dahlquist, Helen Leader, and Harry Howard.

Mr. T. M. McCall, president of the Northwest School will be present to give a short talk in the evening.

Mr. and Mrs. C. A. Larson spent the week end at Grand Forks visiting relatives.

There May Be A Million Ducks

Several people from Holt and many other towns around here spent Sunday motoring thru the Mud Lake area and around Thief Lake to take a look at the many ducks that are there. Some time ago one of the engineers on the Mud Lake project made an estimate of 10,000 ducks out there. Now you could make an estimate of about a million ducks and, still come short of the actual amount of ducks in the area.

Thief Lake also has a large amount of ducks but, not as many as the Mud Lake area. This it seems is due to the fact that all the drowned out crops in the Mud Lake area makes a good feeding ground this fall and attracts the ducks from all over this corner of the state.

Fred Peterson, farmer on the west edge of Mud lake, reported that in two nights the ducks out there ate up over 200 bushels of Barley out of one of his fields. He stated that in all the years he has spent out in the Mud lake area, he has never seen the ducks as numerous as they are there this fall. There is still so much water in Mud Lake that it keeps pouring over into the the large ditch that drains into the Thief River.

Mrs. Paul Olson, Mrs. Christ Saastad and Mrs. C. Hagglund called on Mrs. L. Wegge Monday evening.

There will be a church festival at the Prestebak home 8 miles north of Goodridge on Sunday, Sept. 26th. Dinner will be served at noon and program at 2 p. m. A speaker from St. Paul will be there.

Removing Bodies To Holt

N. B. Ellingson, proprietor of Ellingson's Funeral Service at Warren, has been awarded the contract by the State Conservation Commission to remove the bodies from the Mud Lake and Thief Lake cemeteries, the lands being taken over by the Federal Government in the Migratory Bird refuge. About 30 bodies will be removed, said Mr. Ellingson. The bodies will be moved to cemeteries at Holt, Silverton, Middle River, Grygla and Thief River Falls, depending upon the requests of relatives.

The work of removing bodies from the Mud Lake cemetery was started here this week. Mr. Ellingson was here and hired a crew of men to dig the new and old graves. 12 of the 21 bodies in Mud Lake will be removed to the cemetery in Holt.

Teachers Given Reception

The church parlors was filled to capacity on Wednesday evening when a Teachers' Reception was held in honor of the local school faculty. Rev. Hanson welcomed the teachers in behalf of the local congregation. He also was chairman of the meeting. Mr. Halvorson, Superintendent of the Middle River school, was the main speaker and gave a very good address to both teachers and parents. Several other good numbers were given on the program after which the Girl Reserves, who so successfully arranged the reception, treated the crowd to a good lunch.

Given Bridal Shower

Cecile Peterson visited relatives at Roseau Tuesday. On Tuesday evening she was pleasantly surprised when friends and relatives from Roseau and community gathered at the Malung hall and gave her a bridal shower. She received many beautiful gifts.

Mr. and Mrs. C. L. Heinze of Thief River Falls and Guy Anderson visited at the A. B. Anderson home Sunday afternoon.

Golden Valley Get-Together

As the work of the Golden Valley congregation is nearing its close due to its members being in the Mud Lake Project area and will have to vacate their homes, the congregation is planning a get together after the services on Sunday afternoon The services will be held in the Hillman Grove near Tollef Olson's farm and begin at 2 o'clock sharp. Rev. R. M. Fjelstad, pastor of the Trinity Lutheran Church of Thief River Falls, will preach the sermon for the occasion.

The many former members and friends of the congregation are invited. A committee consisting of Mrs. Olaf Dahl, Mrs. Melvin Olson and Olaf Tveit are working on arrangements.

This congregation was started many years ago and has been going successfully until now because of the faithfulness of the members and no doubt much has been accomplished.

Holm-Dovre Wedding

Last Sunday morning at 10 a. m. in the Lutheran parsonage Miss Rachel E. Holm became the bride of Mr. Theodore L. Dovre. Rev. T. C. Hanson officiated using the single ring ceremony. The newlyweds are both residents of Middle River. Mrs. Dovre is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Holm. Mr. Dovre is the son of Mr. and Mrs. O. H. Dovre of Middle River but at one time lived on a farm east of Holt. Miss Gladys Dovre, a sister of the groom, was the bride's attendant and Mr. Martin Hetland was the best man.

The newlyweds will make their home in Middle River where the groom is in chagre of the Peterson-Biddick station.

Rev. and Mrs. Hanson attended a pastoral conference at Viking on Monday. Rev. C. B. Nervig of Roseau, who spent last year in Europe, addressed the group on the social, economic and religious conditions of Germany and Norway.

The expressions, conscious and subconscious mind, are well defined psychological terms. ## STAR DUST
Movie • Radio
By VIRGINIA VALE

"THE Prisoner of Zenda" threatens to become everybody's favorite picture. Girls love it because it is tenderly romantic, boys are crazy about it because it is a thrilling adventure story, and the old folks like the pomp and circumstance of the court scenes. Of course, the mere fact of Ronald Colman's presence is enough to bring crowds to the box offices. He plays a dual role and the only complaint is that Madeline Carroll does not play two parts too. She is probably the most utterly charming heroine of the year—any year.

Miriam Hopkins

Hollywood had a lot of surprises recently that sent all the girls scurrying out to buy presents. Miriam Hopkins up and eloped with Anatol Litvak, the director, and Alice Faye and Tony Martin rushed off to Yuma, Ariz., and got married. Religious differences had caused the breaking of their engagement several times, she being Catholic, he Jewish. To make matters more complicated both had anti-marriage clauses in their contracts with Twentieth Century-Fox. The studio has forgiven them, but parents are said to be still pouting.

Mr. Litvak, Miss Hopkins' new groom, has just finished directing Claudette Colbert in "Tonight's Our Night," at Warner Brothers'. No one over there will ever forget him. In a scene that took place in a market he insisted on having real geese, turkeys, and chickens. The hot sun got in its deadly work and players had great difficulty going through their scenes without holding their noses. Finally the studio had to replace the poultry every few hours, but all attempts to use papier mache ones failed. Mr. Litvak detected the imitations at once and refused to work until real ones were provided.

Claudette Colbert's good humor made a host of friends for her on the Warner lot and everyone is sorry that she was leaned to them for only one picture. One afternoon almost everyone's nerves were shattered by the many repetitions of a scene. While she was talking to Charles Boyer, a dog was supposed to come in carrying a shoe in its mouth. Over and over the scene was played, but the dog never came in at just the right moment. Finally Miss Colbert, serene and fresh as an April morning, suggested that the director let the dog play the scene with Boyer and she would come in on all fours carrying a shoe in her mouth!

Ever since James Cagney walked out of the Warner studio and went to work for Grand National where he is as happy as can be, there have been battles between the studio and their players. Now Joan Blondell is on strike. She thinks she has been working too hard and refuses to start on the new picture scheduled for her. Kay Francis is trying to break her contract . . . says that she signed it only because they promised to give her the leading role in "Tonight's Our Night." And after all, they gave the role to Claudette Colbert.

Bing Crosby

Bing Crosby's absence from his radio program still leaves a big gap in Thursday night's entertainment, but at last there is a new picture of his to be seen and heard while we wait for his return to the air waves. "Double or Nothing" is pleasant and casual and amiable, just like all Crosby pictures. Three of the songs are real hits—"It's the Natural Thing to Do," "It's On—It's Off," and "The Moon Got Into My Eyes." Martha Raye is there with her frenzied buffoonery, and Mary Carlisle makes the prettiest heroine he ever had.

ODDS AND ENDS—Ever since Nelson Eddy joined Ida Lupino and Charlie McCarthy in that goofy spy travesty on the Sunday evening coffee hour, radio and picture fans have been begging him to play in a motion-picture comedy . . . Phillips Lord is sending out Christmas presents now, because he knows he will be too busy in December with his Gang Busters and "We, the People." He sent Mark Warnow of the Hit Parade a watch with most complicated innards. Four times a day the works whizz around, gaining hours. It came with a guarantee that it would never tell the correct time.

what Irvin S. Cobb thinks about:

The Big Book Craze.

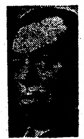
SANTA MONICA, CALIF.—We're promised a historical novel longer than any yet—say half a million words or so. Of course, the author probably uses some words at least twice, but that won't reduce the gross tonnage unless they're very short words.



Irvin S. Cobb

I can't take it. While still convalescent from "Anthony Adverse," I was stricken down by "Gone With the Wind" and had such a relapse that even now I barely can hold on my stomach such comparatively light and trifling stuff as volume VET to ZYM of the encyclopedia.

When reading this modern bulk literature, it upsets me to find my legs going to sleep before I do. And the constant pressure makes callouses on my second mezzanine landing.

I admit these mass production books serve nicely as door stoppers and for pressing wild flowers. I also heard of a chap who detected a prowler under his window and dropped a frothy little work of fiction weighing slightly less than nine pounds on the back of the fellow's neck, dislocating three vertebrae. At last accounts, the surgeons were still picking long jagged chapters out of his spine.

In my present mood, what I crave is the romantic stuff of olden days, in which our sainted Aunt Sophie was wont to inscribe "Alas, how sad!" or "Only too true!" in pale violet ink on the margins. What happened to all the Aunt Sophies, anyhow?

An Actor's Temperament.

WE'VE all been waiting for something to top it, but the best wheeze of the month remains the one that was emitted, not by a paid gagster, but by a simple stage-hand at one of the studios when Mr. Leslie Howard refused to go on making a picture until a group of distinguished visitors, including Mr. Charles Norris, the novelist, had been shooed off the set.

"He ain't sore at you gents," stated the stage-hand to the ousted parties, "but he's been playin' 'Hamlet' on the regular stage and he ain't used to havin' a crowd watchin' him while he's actin'."

If Mr. Norris and his friends wanted to see some really great acting they should have patronized the professional wrestling matches. That's where they put on the heavy dramatic stuff—beautifully rehearsed, perfectly done.

Children's Education

I LIKE the way the wealthy classes in England rear their children. Little Rosemary doesn't recite for the company after dinner, and if Master Jones-Terwillager Minor gets uppity at school, he gets thrashed.

Many a rich American has known how sharper than a serpent's tooth it is to see his daughter grow up a wanton and his boy turn out a waster. Yet, with few exceptions—so few that the newspapers comment on them—it never seems to occur to these fond fathers that less of coddling and pampering and spoiling in adolescence and more of wholesome discipline might produce a higher average grade of heirs.

What set me to thinking along this line was being t'other night at a party where a poor little four-year-old, having already the pitiable assurance of a veteran prima donna, was fetched in to give impersonations. She never again could impersonate natural babyhood though, more's the pity! And her pert small brother was encouraged to dominate the talk.

Mark my word for it, that kid is going to come to no good end—not even a well-spanked end, which would help.

Mr. Pincus' Coup.

IN THESE topsy-turvy times liberal-minded patriots who are striving to steer a middle course between ultraenthusiastic left-wingers and ultraconservative rightists might do well, methinks, to follow the example set by Mr. Pincus.

Mr. Pincus had opened a clothing store. Immediately on one side of him was the clothing store of Mr. Ginsberg and immediately on the other side was the clothing store of Mr. Dreifus; and three clothing stores in a row were too many even for Essex street.

So the adjacent competitors framed a plot to put the newcomer out of business. Next morning their rival, coming down to open up, found over Mr. Dreifus' establishment a flaming legend, to wit:

BANKRUPT SALE

And above Mr. Ginsberg's door was this equally prominent announcement:

CLOSING OUT SALE

Within an hour, smeared across the entire front of Mr. Pincus' store, exactly in between the other two, appeared a huge sign reading as follows:

MAIN ENTRANCE.

When King George Received the Big News from America

Samuel Morse, inventor of the electric telegraph, had only one ambition as a young man and that was to become an artist. He studied under Washington Allston, then the greatest painter in the United States, and with Allston went to London in 1811. There he met Benjamin West who, although an American, was president of the Royal academy, and a great favorite with the king, who later made him Sir Benjamin West.

West was actually at work on a portrait of the king when the latter was handed the Declaration of Independence. Morse heard the piquant story from West himself, says Ernest Greenwood in "From Amber to Amperes." Here it is—as related by Morse:

Turning to the picture of the king, Sir Benjamin West said:

"Do you see that picture, Mr. Morse? Well, sir, the king was sitting for me when the box containing the American Declaration of Independence was handed to him."

"Indeed!" I answered, "and what appeared to be the emotion of the king? What did he say?"

"Well, sir," said West, "he made a reply characteristic of the goodness of his heart," or words to that effect. "'Well,' he said, 'if they can be happier under the government they have chosen, then under mine, I shall be happy!'"

Morse stayed four years in England where he achieved considerable success as a portrait painter. Then returning to his native country, he afterwards became president of the national academy and an eminently successful painter, his sitters becoming so numerous that he was unable to meet and fill all of his orders. It was during his return voyage to America in 1832, following a second visit to Europe, that Morse got his conception of the telegraph. Twelve years later—May 24, 1844—he gave a public demonstration of his invention, sending a message from Washington to Baltimore.

The rest is well known history.—Kansas City Star.

A Worthy Object

WILL power is the mental experience exercised in bringing about a desired end. Therefore, I say that a man must necessarily have a worthy object in view to bring out the best in him—that a man must see more than a salary to be more than a salaried man. A man must see the position of ownership, partnership, management, or increased award, in order to awaken his will power.

The man who does good to another does even more good to himself.

Funster Ought to Have Recognized His Fellow

Jones de Vere Jones decided it would be fun to spend a day in the country. Back to Nature, and all that.

Meeting a farmer in a field he thought to have some fun with him.

"Good-morning," he started. "I must say I admire your part of the country."

Then he noticed a scarecrow in the middle of the field.

"And is that one of the oldest inhabitants?" he went on, pointing to the scarecrow.

"Naw, zur," came the slow reply. "That be no oldest 'habitant. Just a visitor like yourself."

The Scales

WHAT goes up must come down. Or if you wish to put it in more scientific language: Action is equal to reaction and in the contrary direction.

This is the law of compensation. It is the one fixed, immutable law of life and it applies to everything, everywhere. It cannot be evaded or avoided. The working of it may be immediate or it may be a matter of centuries, but if we keep ourselves aware of it we may be saved disappointment and disillusion.

The extent to which we try to restrict that law is absurd. We speak of balanced budgets, balanced rations, and the balance of trade; but we quite ignore balanced lives and balanced sociology; so, in the end, Nature takes the job off our hands, with the consequent upheavals and disturbances.

We work or play to excess, we indulge our appetites and our senses to repletion, perhaps to gluttony, and when we suffer during Nature's work of restoring balance, we rail at fate.

In monarchy and republic we allow our thirst for power and for money to overbalance our lives, both individually and socially, then blame God and man for the chaos which attends the restoration of balance.

In all the affairs of life we may evolve philosophies and devise systems; but just so long as they are out of balance, individually, socially, industrially or governmentally, just so long will the scale teeter up and down to our discomfort.

If as individuals our lives are out of balance, the structure as a whole must also be out of balance; and in time that balance must be restored—by us or by THOSE WHO FOLLOW.—Ray S. Ayers in Detroit News.

OF INTEREST TO THE HOUSEWIFE

Treating Dry Glue. — Vinegar added to dry glue will make the glue fit for use again.

Preparing Parsley. — Parsley washed with hot water keeps its flavor better and is easier to chop.

Egg as Cleanser.—The yolk of egg may be used for removing mud, chocolate or coffee stains from any kind of material except velveteen. Rub into the stain, wash off with warm soapy water, and rinse thoroughly.

Cheese and Tomato Salad.—Three ounces of cheese, two medium-sized tomatoes, seasoning, salad cream, lettuce leaves. Grate the cheese fine, then skin and chop up the tomatoes and mix to a paste with the cheese, adding seasoning to taste. Serve the mixture on individual plates, surrounding with lettuce leaves. Sprinkle the salads with a little finely grated cheese and decorate with small pieces of tomato.

Removing Tobacco Stains.—Tobacco stains may be removed from washable materials by moistening with lemon juice and bleaching in the sun.

Brightening Carpets.—Vacuum-clean carpets first to remove the loose dirt and fluff and then sponge or shampoo with a cloth wrung out of warm soapsuds, or use a good carpet soap. Repeat with another cloth wrung out of clear water, and finish with a dry cloth; always rubbing the way of the pile.

Cleaning Brass.—Never use vinegar to clean brass. Though it cleans at first, it soon causes tarnish. The proper materials for cleaning brass are oil and rottenstone.

Washing New Blankets.—New blankets should be soaked for half an hour in water to which has been added one pound of bicarbonate of soda. Put them through a wringer. All the dressing will then be removed and they may be washed in the usual way.

Unbearable Suffering

I HAVE suffered much, but I am now fully convinced that no man has any right to grumble if he can be ill without experiencing the torture of feeling that if his illness continues for any length of time there will be poverty and inadequate education for the ones that he loves.

Be understanding with those who in their illness are haunted by fears for the future; seek to understand what it is that lies behind their complaining, and ask God to prevent you from being clumsy when you try to give them a message of hope.

HELP KIDNEYS
To Get Rid of Acid and Poisonous Waste

Your kidneys help to keep you well by constantly filtering waste matter from the blood. If your kidneys get functionally disordered and fail to remove excess impurities, there may be poisoning of the whole system and body-wide distress.

Burning, scanty or too frequent urination may be a warning of some kidney or bladder disturbance.

You may suffer nagging backache, persistent headache, attacks of dizziness, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes—feel weak, nervous, all played out.

In such cases it is better to rely on a medicine that has won country-wide acclaim than on something less favorably known. Use Doan's Pills. A multitude of grateful people recommend Doan's. Ask your neighbor!

Vying for Your Favor

ONE, two, three smart frocks on the line ready to go—shopping, kitchenwards, to the office downtown. And as every woman knows, a well stocked wardrobe needs all three.

From Now On.

Says the jaunty model to the left, "I can tell I'm gonna feel well dressed in this little peplum frock: ready for sports, a matinee or dinner in town.

"I made my version of sheer wool with a subdued herringbone weave. It will be my number one attire for a long spell ahead."

One Who Knows.

Miss Keep-the-Home-Beautiful, in the center, expresses herself: "Even when I do housework I like to look and feel fit.

"When I dash out to the store or go across lots to the neighbor's to borrow an egg, I don't bother to change my dress because I have the feeling I'm doing all right as I am. I wouldn't think of a new season coming on without running up a generous supply of crisp, fresh dresses for myself. They seem to set one right, you know, and give you the spirit to pitch into any day's work like a champion."

The Last Word.

Miss Third Party goes in for that new kind of glamour in the simple model at the right. Says she: "I feel that Fall is really the season to step out and hob-nob with Fashion and the Joneses. This frock, which is my weakness in plum-colored wool, was as easy to make as it is to wear.

"Later on I'm going to have a velvet version with short sleeves—these slim lines and elegant shoulders were just made for this queen of all fabrics—and evidently I go for things royal."

The Patterns.

Pattern 1348 is designed in sizes 12 to 20 (30 to 38 bust). Size 14 requires 4⅛ yards of 39-inch material, plus 1⅞ yards for contrast.

Pattern 1304 is designed for sizes 34 to 46. Size 36 requires 3¾ yards of 35-inch material, plus ½ yard contrasting.

Pattern 1374 is designed for sizes 12 to 20 (30 to 38 bust). Size 14 requires 2⅝ yards of 54-inch material. With short sleeves, size 16 requires 4 yards of 39-inch material, plus ⅓ yard for collar in contrast. To trim the collar requires 4½ yards of braid.

The Safety Man

What would you do in case you happened upon a serious automobile accident and found one or several occupants bleeding profusely from cuts? Most people would rush to call an ambulance or a doctor, or hurry the injured to a hospital.

But, how about those precious moments when you are waiting for the doctor or are enroute to the hospital? Are you capable of administering first aid to stop the bleeding? Many, many precious lives could have been saved if someone at the time of the accident had been familiar with the simple method of stopping bleeding by applying pressure with the fingers at certain points on the body, depending upon the location of the injury. You can get pamphlets or bulletins on this subject from your local drug store, library, boy scout leader, or from your insurance company.

The Biology class have gotten their workbooks.

No one in the high school assembly is allowed to chew gum during school hours this year because The Great Northern Railroad Company put in a complaint we were making too much noise. Mr. Karvonen seems to be the only privileged character. Perhaps it is because he is the only one who has learned the art so well that he does not disturb the other classes.

Discuss Grass Seed Prices

County Agricultural Agents and representative farmers from seven northwestern counties met and discussed current prices and yields of sweet clover seed at a meeting at Thief River Falls on Monday, September 27. Counties represented at this meeting were Kittson, Roseau, Marshall, Polk, Pennington and Red Lake. Those representing Marshall County were agricultural agent and and Tom Howard, Alphonse E. Johnson, Chas. N. Kranz.

The following resolution was presented and adopted:

Whereas it has come to the attention of this group, through a survey of the seven counties represented, that the 1937 sweet clover seed crop is not in excess of that of 1936.

Whereas the general price of other farm commodities has advanced in price over the 1937 level and that of sweet clover has not.

And whereas there will be as great a demand for sweet clover seed in 1938 as in 1937 because of the continuance of the soil conservation program.

Therefore be it resolved that we, as representatives of farmers in our counties, recommend that producers hold their sweet clover seed in Northern Minnesota until a suitable advance be made in price to conform to the supply, demand and relative advance in price to conform with other farm commodities.

Stanley Peterson of Raymond, Washington, spent Saturday at the Gullick Swenson and Pete Sorter homes and also visited with his father at Thief River Falls, whom he had not seen for about twenty years. Mr. Peterson who is employed by a large auto firm out west had been to Michigan with 70 men who were all driving back that many new 1938 Oldmobiles to Washington.

M. and will spend three hours in the city, the president speaking from the rear end of his special train and at the dedication of the grandstand at the state fairgrounds. He will be taken on a tour of Grand Forks and East Grand Forks preceding his main address which will be at the fairgrounds at about 11 A. M.

Members of the committee said special arrangements had been made to permit thousands of visitors to see and hear the president on his stop here, and an invitation was extended to all residents of western Minnesota and eastern North Dakota to assist Grand Forks residents in welcoming the president on his only extended stop in North Dakota.

Peterson - Nohre Wedding

The home of Mr. and Mrs. O. H. Nohre was the scene of a pretty wedding last Sunday evening when Miss Cecelia Peterson formerly of Roseau but now of Holt, became the bride of Mr. Harold Nohre. The single ring ceremony was read by Rev. T. C. L. Hanson at 5 o'clock.

The bride was attended by Miss Ethel Nohre, a sister of the groom. The groom was attended by Mr. Alvin Swanson of Roseau a nephew of the bride.

To the strains of Lohengrin's "Bridal Chorus" played by Miss Beulah Bennes, the couple marched down the stairs to their places. Immediately preceding the ceremony, Mrs. T. C. L. Hanson sang "Perfect Love". After the ceremony, Mrs. O. H. Nohre sang "I Love You Truly" followed by the recessional played by Miss Bennes.

The bride's dress was of Burgundy velvet and crepe combination in gold trim and black accessories. She carried a boquet of deep red roses, carnations and pom-poms. Miss Ethel was dressed in jersey Burgundy with braided trim. She also had black accessories.

The reception was given following the ceremony to the immediate relatives of the couple. A beautiful wedding cake graced the table. Miss Edith Hedlund, Mrs. G. Sanoden and Miss Eleanor Peterson had charge of the sumptous wedding dinner.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. L. O. Peterson of Roseau. She has been employed by Carlson Mercantile Co. at Holt since May of last year. Prior to that she was manager of Hartz store at Roseau. The groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. O. H. Nohre and is well known in Holt. He attended Holt High School and graduated from Thief River Falls High School in 1929. In 1934 he graduated from Concordia College in Moorhead with a B. A. degree. For the past two and a half years he has been employed at the local Carlson Mercantile store. They will make their home in the apartments above the store.

Out of town guests were Mr. L. O. Peterson; Mr. and Mrs. Fred Swanson and children, Alvin, Ruth and Carol Ann; Mr. and Mrs. Albert Peterson and children, Grace and George; and Miss Edith Hedlund all of Roseau.

Deputy Sheriff Marshall Kayes was here this week serving notices for delinquent taxes on village property.

The ladies of Holt and community gave Mrs. A. L. Carlson of Argyle a party on Friday at the Mission church.

Six Day Deer Season Approved

A six-day deer season from November 20 to 25, inclusive, in twelve counties and parts of four other, has been proclaimed by Governor Benson.

Accepting the recommendation of Herman Wenzel, conservation commissioner, the Governor ordered the "emergency" season after a survey of game wardens and other observers indicated an abundant northern deer population was confronted with a possible food shortage this winter.

All deer, regardless of age or sex, may be taken.

The open counties:

Cook, Lake, St. Louis, Koochiching, Pine, Aitkin, Carlton, Hubbard, Clearwater, Lake of the Woods, Beltrami, Roseau, northern half of Kanabec, all of Cass north of the north boundary of Crow Wing, all of Marshall and Kittson counties east of the Soo Line railway.

Word was sent out by the Conservation Department last week that there will be no open season on Moose in the Northwest Angle in Lake of the Woods county this fall. No explanation was made as to this new order.

Golden Valley Get-Together

Perfect weather for the occasion greeted the many members and friends of the Golden Valley congregation when they gathered at the Hillman grove last Sunday for the final get-together marking the termination of Golden Valley congregation which has existed for many years. This congregation will cease to exist due to its members being out in the Game Refuge Project. Rev. R. M. Fjelstad of Thief River Falls was the main speaker of the day. Other talks were given by Hjaimer Johnson, Mrs. Olaf Dahl, Mrs. Melvin Olson, Mr. Tom Risdahl and Rev. Hanson. It was a solemn occasion marking the closing of the many spiritually and neighborly activities of the many fine people who have made their homes out there.

30-Day Duck Hunting Season

A 30-day hunting season on ducks, geese, jacksnipe and coot in Minnesota, opening October 9, was set by the bureau of biological survey in Washington. The open season in Minnesota for shooting mourning doves will be from September 1 to November 15.

The waterfowl dates also apply to Michigan, Montana, the Dakotas and Wisconsin, and other states included in the bureau's northern zone. Regulations governing hunting, the first to be made since the signing of the migratory game bird treaty with Mexico last March, were approved by President Roosevelt.

Under the regulations, waterfowl and coot may be hunted from 7 a. m. to 4 p. m. in season, and snipe, rails, gallinules other than coot, woodcock, mourning doves and band tailed pigeons may be hunted from 7 a. m. till sundown.

Protected from hunters in all parts of the United States will be Ross geese, wood ducks, ruddy-ducks, canvas backs, redheads, bufflehead ducks and swans.

The daily bag and possession limit on geese and brant of kinds permitted to be killed has increased to five. Last year the limit was four. Other bag and possesion limits, continued from the last two seasons, place the daily limit on the ducks at 10 in the aggregate and make the possession limit conform to the daily bag. The daily bag limit has increased from 15 to 25.

The three shell limit on repeating shotguns is continued from last year, and hunters are prohibited from using shotguns larger than 10-gauge.

In the intermediate zone the duck hunting season will be from November 1 to November 30, and for the southern zone the bureau set the season to open November 27 and to close December 26.

Fred Peterson moved his house to town this week from his farm in Mud Lake. He will locate near his mothers place in Holt.

O. E. Sovde of Oklee was a business caller here Monday.

How Constipation Causes Gas, Nerve Pressure

When you are constipated two things happen. FIRST: Wastes swell up the bowels and press on nerves in the digestive tract. This nerve pressure causes headaches, a dull, lazy feeling, bilious spells, loss of appetite and dizziness. SECOND: Partly digested food starts to decay forming GAS, bringing on sour stomach (acid indigestion), and heartburn, bloating you up until you sometimes gasp for breath.

Then you spend many miserable days. You can't eat. You can't sleep. Your stomach is sour. You feel tired out, grouchy and miserable.

To get the complete relief you seek you must do TWO things. 1. You must relieve the GAS. 2. You must clear the bowels and GET THAT PRESSURE OFF THE NERVES. As soon as offending wastes are washed out you feel marvelously refreshed, blues vanish, the world looks bright again.

There is only one product on the market that gives you the DOUBLE ACTION you need. It is ADLERIKA. This efficient carminative cathartic relieves that awful GAS at once. It often removes bowel congestion in half an hour. No waiting for overnight relief. Adlerika acts on the stomach and both bowels. Ordinary laxatives act on the lower bowel only.

Adlerika has been recommended by many doctors and druggists for 35 years. No griping, no after effects. Just QUICK results. Try Adlerika today. You'll say you have never used such an efficient intestinal cleanser.

Noticing the note, he telephoned for a doctor who sped to Mrs. Toth's side, reaching her just in time to save her life.

The Happiness Trio

PRIDE goeth with Fall and glamor, too, Milady, when you wear distinguished fashions by Sew-Your-Own! Today's trio gives youth a chance to express itself in an individual manner; gives the adult figure an opportunity to display a new high in chic, and last—but we wouldn't say least—a utility model that's as right for daughter as for mother, as attractive on cousin Emma as it is on Aunt Grace.

Swank 'n' Sweet.

Young and inspired is the little two piecer that just stepped into the picture at the left. The topper is one that will set a vogue in this woman's town and make you the swankiest of the whole lot of Laf-a-Lots. If you're asked to picnic in the colorful Autumn woods, wear this number in henna-colored wool for real satisfaction and that perfect harmony that makes picnicking a picnic.

For Kitchen Capers.

And before you go, there'll be sandwiches to make, potatoes to peel, and lemons to squeeze—that's where and when the gingham gown in the center comes in. Of course, its novel yoke-and-sleeve-in-one construction makes it a most attractive model to sew as well as to wear. The skirt has flare enough for cutting those kitchen capers one has to when minutes are few and work plentiful. Make this simple five-piece frock in two versions and be sure of everyday chic at minimum cost.

Style Success.

While we go picnicking and places, don't think Mommy isn't going to swing out in style, too. She's certain of success when she goes to her Club; she's sure of well-groomed elegance for Sunday best in the slenderizing frock at the right. ## Cutwork That Is Anything but Work

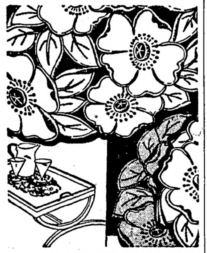
"Cutwork without bars?" Exactly—and that's the very reason this lovely Wild Rose design for doilies or buffet set is so easy to do. So encouraging, too, for the beginner who'd like to try her hand at it. Aren't they life-like—these roses? Delicate shades of pink would be most realistic, of course, but the pattern is no less lovely if worked in thread to match your linen. A refreshment table set with these would be most tempting! In pattern 5503 you will find a transfer pattern of a doilie 11 by 17½ inches and one and one reverse doilie 6 by 9 inches; material requirements; illustrations of all stitches used; color suggestions.



Pattern 5503.

Do not allow yourself to dawdle, to waver in your decision, or permit yourself to do fool things, during the day. Use levelheadedness, good judgment in every act. Go about your work with the consciousness of your masterfulness, holding the ideal of your superiority, your efficiency, your ability to reach the heights of excellence.

Resolve every morning that you will make a red-letter day of that day, for if you are going to make your whole life a masterpiece each day must be a masterpiece.

Legion Head Hits Naziism

FOUR hundred thousand members of the American Legion and their families and friends gathered in New York for the annual convention of the organization which opened with a memorial service for dead veterans. Parades, sham battles and plenty of fun-making marked the proceedings, but the former soldiers also gave much time to serious business. Harry W. Colmer, retiring national commander, delivered a notable report on his stewardship, warning against dangers confronting the nation from within and without.

Harry W. Colmer

Colmer declared attempts to subjugate judiciary would destroy the "checks and balances" in government; and he proposed that the American Legion undertake an educational program on the principles set forth in the Constitution. He asked each post to hold at least one meeting this fall on the basic law.

The commander's warning against perils from without led him to condemn severely German propaganda in the United States and the alleged action of the German government in fostering the organization of Nazi groups and camps in this country. This he called "a gratuitous insult to our free institutions."

President on Constitution

ALL orators on the one hundred fiftieth anniversary of the signing of the Constitution were loud in praise of that great document. President Roosevelt, speaking from the foot of the Washington monument, was emphatic in his expression of admiration for and loyalty to the basic law which his opponents have accused him of trying to undermine. But he called it a "layman's constitution" and a "lawyer's contract." He reiterated his assertions that the Constitution was intended by its makers to be a statement of objectives and not a rigid document, and declared democratic government in this country can do all things which "commonsense people, seeing the picture as a whole, have the right to expect."

"I believe that these things can be done under the Constitution without the surrender of a single one of the civil and religious liberties it was intended to safeguard," Mr. Roosevelt continued, "and I am determined that under the Constitution those things shall be done."

Sharply condemning dictatorships abroad, Mr. Roosevelt said there is a crisis in American affairs that threatens our democracy and that if that democracy is to survive, it must meet the demands of the people for economic and social security and improved standards of living. Plutocratic and proletarian dictatorships, said he, are equally dangerous.

That the President has not abandoned his fight for "rejuvenation" of the Supreme court was made clear by the tenor of his address, and it was expected that he would continue that campaign on his trip to the Pacific Coast, which he began in a private car equipped with a loud speaker. On his way to visit his daughter in Seattle and on the return trip he was to enter the home states of several senators who were active in opposition to the Supreme court enlargement scheme.

Vandenberg's Battle Cry

"WE HAVE just begun to fight" was the battle cry adopted by Senator Vandenberg of Michigan in a speech at Bay City that was taken as the opening of his campaign for the Republican Presidential nomination in 1940. He made it evident that he hopes to be the standard bearer for a coalition party, asserting that a realignment of political parties is inevitable. Indeed, he declared, this probably was the one thing that could save our national institutions. He was not so sure that the opposition to the Roosevelt policies would unite under a new party name. Said he:

"There may be a realistic realignment which will bring like-thinking patriots into common battle front, whether they live north or south of the Mason and Dixon line, whether they live east or west of the Mississippi."

What Will Hughes Do?

OBJECTIONS to the seating of Hugo Black as a justice of the Supreme court on the constitutional ground that the emoluments of the office were raised while Black was a senator brought Chief Justice Hughes back to Washington before his vacation was ended. Associate Justice Brandeis also returned to the capital and he and Hughes were expected to confer on the matter and to examine the objections. Just what Mr. Hughes or any other member of the court could do was uncertain. Constitutional lawyers agree that Black could not be denied his seat because he was a member of the Ku Klux Klan, but many of them thought the court, if it decides to take jurisdiction, could bar him on constitutional grounds. There was reason to believe this solution of the exceedingly unpleasant matter would suit President Roosevelt. Should the President ask Black to resign, the latter might refuse, and that would be most embarrassing for Mr. Roosevelt.

Eden Still Hopeful

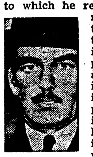
ANTHONY EDEN, British foreign minister, hurried from Geneva to attend a special cabinet meeting to which he reported on developments in the Mediterranean situation that is so threatening to European peace. He told of Italy's reiteration of its demand for parity in the "anti-piracy" patrol, and it was believed both he and Prime Minister Chamberlain were hopeful that a rupture could be averted by a partial yielding to Mussolini in this matter. British public opinion was said to be strongly against a complete concession.



Anthony Eden

Meanwhile events in the Mediterranean were not such as to bolster Eden's peaceful designs. The British aircraft carrier Glorious reported it had been attacked by a submarine near Malta just as it arrived to take part in the patrol of the sea. Also the admiralty announced an unidentified airplane dropped six bombs close to the destroyer Fearless. The British and French fleets began their search for "pirate" submarines.

Spain's premier, Juan Negrin, stood up before the League of Nations and fearlessly presented the evidence of Italian and German intervention in the Spanish civil war, demanding that the league take steps to stop it. He called Mussolini and Hitler "international highwaymen." French Foreign Minister Delbos backed up Negrin's demands in words which were taken to mean that if Italy sends substantial reinforcements to Franco, Spanish rebel leader, or perhaps if she even refuses to withdraw her forces already there, France would consider her security menaced.

The assembly of the League of Nations voted down the Spanish government's request for re-election as a member of the league council.

Achievement of Peace

YOU may either win your peace or buy it; win it, by resistance to evil; buy it, by compromise with evil. You may buy your peace with silenced consciences; you may buy it with broken vows—buy it with lying words—buy it with base connivances—buy it with the blood of the slain, and the cry of the captives over hemispheres of the earth, while you sit smiling at your serene hearths, muttering continually to yourselves, "Peace, peace," when there is no peace; but only captivity and death for you.

Trans-Siberian R. R.

Orenburg was reached in 1877. In 1880 the bridge over the Volga was built and the section connecting the Volga and Obi river basins was begun. In May, 1891, the first work on the real Trans-Siberian railroad was begun. As a single-track line it was completed in 1902. The cost was $175,000,000.

COLLECTING LIQUID RUBBER ON FIRESTONE PLANTATIONS IN LIBERIA
From these plantations comes an ever-increasing supply of the world's finest rubber. Money saved here and in manufacturing and distribution enable Firestone to sell first-quality tires at lower prices.

THAT'S WHY YOU GET MORE FOR YOUR MONEY IN FIRESTONE STANDARD TIRES

FIRESTONE builds a first-quality tire made of top grade materials and sells it for less money because Firestone passes savings along to you in the form of extra values. Firestone controls rubber and cotton supplies at their sources, manufactures with greater efficiency and distributes at lower cost. Because of these economies —

YOU GET EXTRA PROTECTION AGAINST BLOWOUTS—eight extra pounds of rubber are added to every 100 pounds of cord by the Firestone patented Gum-Dipping process. By this process every fiber of every cord in every ply is saturated with liquid rubber. This counteracts dangerous internal friction and heat that ordinarily cause blowouts.

YOU GET EXTRA PROTECTION AGAINST PUNCTURES—because under the tread are two extra layers of Gum-Dipped cords.

YOU GET EXTRA PROTECTION AGAINST SKIDDING — because the tread is scientifically designed.

YOU GET LONGER NON-SKID MILEAGE—because of the extra tough, long-wearing tread.

Make your car tire-safe now for fall and winter driving. Join the Firestone SAVE A LIFE Campaign today by letting your nearby Firestone Dealer or Firestone Auto Supply and Service Store equip your car with a set of new Firestone Standard Tires — today's top tire value.

DON'T RISK YOUR LIFE ON SMOOTH WORN TIRES!

DO YOU KNOW
THAT last year highway accidents cost the lives of more than 38,000 men, women and children?
That a million more were injured?
THAT more than 40,000 of these deaths and injuries were caused directly by punctures, blowouts and skidding due to smooth, worn, unsafe tires?

At right is a section cut from a smooth, worn tire, with non-skid protection worn off. Tires in this condition are liable to punctures, blowouts and skidding.

At left is section cut from a new Firestone Tire. Note the thick, non-skid protection against skidding, blowouts and punctures. Come in and see a demonstration.

Ram Sale To Be Held

To provide Marshall County sheep producers with high quality rams at less expense and trouble, a county-wide Ram Sale and Exchange Day is being arranged to be held at Warren fair grounds on October 13, 1937. Thirty or more good type purebred Shropshire and Hampshire rams assembled from leading breeders will be trucked in for farmers to look over and to buy if they wish. A laid-down price for each ram will be set by the breeder. A number of local sheep men will also bring in purebred rams which they will sell or exchange. It is expected that there will be at least 50 rams from which, selection of a sire can be made.

The county committee which has worked out this ram sale is headed by Carl Anderson. Other members on the committee include A. W. Sommers, Radium; and Otto E. Hjelle, Newfolden. This new plan of aiding in the distribution of high quality sheep sires is being tried out in eleven Northwestern Minnesota counties, says County Agent Ray Reierson. The plan will not only bring in good rams at reasonable prices, but will save breeders the trouble of traveling about in search of rams, a job which might take several days and cost even more than the ram itself.

In addition to the sale and exchange, there will also be a program of talk and demonstrations on sheep breeding and management. An extension livestock specialist from University Farm, will be the speaker.

County Agent, Reierson, says it is hoped breeders will turn out in large numbers to look over these rams. No one will be under any obligation to buy unless he likes the animal and is satisfied with the price. Getting a number of these fine rams into Marshall County flocks will do much to improve the quality of sheep and increase returns for the owners because from a breeding standpoint the sire is half the flock. In three generations 87.5 per cent of the breeding of a flock is determined by the three sires used. Thick set, growthy, money-making lambs can be obtained only by using that kind if rams.

Otto Johnson has purchased the Sovde home in this village and will move there as soon as he has had his farm sale.

The ladies of Holt gave Mrs. C. A. Larson a birthday party on Thursday.

Obituary of Mrs. Hans Knutson

The last sad rites were conducted at Nazareth Lutheran Church last Monday afternoon for Mrs. Hans Knutson, nee Martha Inga Sorum, who passed away last Thursday afternoon during a heart attack.

She was born to Mr. and Mrs. John Sorum at Land, Norway on August 13, 1856 and emigrated to America with them as an infant to settle in Waukon, Alamakee county, Iowa. She was baptised by Rev. O. I. Kjort in the West Pine Creek church.

On April 7, 1876 she was united in marriage to Mr. Hans Christian Knutson, who died on December 8 of last year. This proved to be a happy married life of over 60 years. In 1881 they moved from Iowa to Fertile and lived there 9 years when they moved to East Valley township which was their home until their deaths.

To their union were born 10 children all whom are surviving and mourning her as a good kind mother, and are as follows: Mrs. Theo. Johnson of Glen William, Manitoba; Mrs. Wm. Cuthbert of Portage la Prairie, Manitoba; Mrs. Henry Hoard, Maynard and Oscar of Thief River Falls; John, living northeast of Thief River Falls; Clarence, of Grand Forks; Mrs. Ole Lunke, Mrs. Ed Furr and Mrs. A. C. Conklin, of Holt. Also surviving her are two brothers; M. J. Sorum of Hillsboro, N. D. and J. J. Sorum of Waukon, Iowa. There are 37 grandchildren and 15 great grandchildren.

The church was packed to capacity of relatives and friends who came to pay their last respects. There was a wealth of floral offerings an In Memoriam gifts from the following: Carl Olson and family, Mr. and Mrs. M. J. Sorum and family, Mrs. Fred Larson and son Ludvig, Mr. and Mrs. Iver Larson, Andrew and Carl Holen, Henry and Elmer Holen, Mr. and Mrs. Herman Holen, Mr. and Mrs. Albert Moen, Mr. and Mrs. O. P. Brunsburg, Mr. and Mrs. J. K. Johnson and Mr. and Mrs. G. J. Conklin. Rev. T. C. L. Hanson officiated and the quartet sang.

The services were duplicated as far as possible to that of her husband who was buried on December 12. Honorary pall bearers were: Hans Fosholm, Gullick Swenson, Otto Johnson, Tom Severson, M. J. Lunke and Ole Davidson. Active pallbearers were: Ludvik Larson, Oliver Nohre, Alfred Larson, Carl Lunke, Ole Larson and Oscar Furr.

CAPITAL NEWS REVIEW

The two-fold program to conserve Minnesota's timber, at the same time using it to its fullest economic advantage, was offered by Governor Benson in his Lumberjack Day address at Stillwater last week.

The chief executive recommended setting up "work projects" in cut-over areas to give employment to local settlers and lumberjacks in economic distress, and at the same time to help rebuild worn-out forest resources and provide a basis for future industry here.

He suggested further the development of timber stands which the state of Minnesota already owns. 'With proper cutting," he pointed out, "there stands would probably produce annually a harvest of 60 million feet of saw timber and 100,000 cords of pulpwood, giving employment to 1,500 men most of the year."

Minnesota now imports fully half of its timber, and since these publicly-owned timber stands are not in locations that can be logged by private companies at a satisfactory margin of profit, the state would be justified in undertaking the work, the governor said.

The unity resolution adopted by the Minnesota State Federation of Labor at their annual convention in Hibbing last week express the hope Roosevelt, who will be in St. Paul on the day of the conference, to address the gathering. No reply has yet been received from Washington.

A move to unite three major farm groups in Minnesota was made at Montevideo last week when members of the Farmers Union, the Holiday Association, and the Cooperaand desire of the rank and file of labor throughout the country for a united labor movement in this country. It was significant that it was adopted without a dissenting vote of the 754 delegates in attendance.

The national heads of the AFL and the CIO cannot afford to ignore the rank and file demands for unity. No matter where the fault for the present disunity lies, if it continues the only ones to benefit will be enemies of labor.

The delegates voted unanimously for the calling of a special one-day session of the Legisalture to pass the necessary housing legislation to enable the state to share in federal housing funds. Approximately $42,000,000 is available to Minnesota for low rental housing projects if this legislation is passed. Governor Benson recommended and the House passed housing legislation during both the last regular and the special sessions, but in each case the reactionary-controlled Senate turned thumbs down.

Reinstatement of the minimum wage law for women and minors has resulted in wage increases for 368 women and 111 minors, a statement by Florence Burton of the state industrial commission shows.

Total pay adjustments made by firms in 54 towns to conform with the minimum wages set by law equalled $6,815.66 during the last three months.

"The actual amount of money involved while not extensive, is significant," Miss Burton said, "since it results in most cases in a permanent increase in wages paid to all persons affected."

The Safety Man

Have you ever caused someone to be injured? Have you ever been called upon to perform the painful duty of notifying the mother of several children that her husband has been killed in an accident?

If ever you were assigned such dnty, you will realize the importance of safety and accident prevention. The grief that can strike a home so suddenly should make us all realize that we are a part of this entire scheme and that each and everyone of us should cooperate with everyone else in the prevention of accidents on our highways, in our home, and at our place of work.

Will you gamble with the happiness of your family? The man who takes chances with his own safety gambles with the future happiness of his wife and children.

MUSSOLINI VISITS HITLER

War Strength of Nazis Displayed for Il Duce . . . Japan Sharply Warned Not to Bomb Russian Embassy

Il Duce and Der Reichsfuehrer Review Nazi Troops in Munich.

Edward W. Pickard
SUMMARIZES THE WORLD'S WEEK
© Western Newspaper Union.

War Dance for Duce

BENITO MUSSOLINI, visiting Adolf Hitler for the purpose of composing and presenting to the world a statement of the intentions and demands of the Italian and German governments, was received by the Nazis with great enthusiasm. Il Duce, on the way to Berlin, stood on a hill in Mecklenburg with Hitler and witnessed a big war dance staged by the reichsfuehrer that displayed the regained military might of Germany most impressively. Hitler's best officers and troops, armed with the latest weapons of death, put on a sham battle participated in by all land and air forces. In the nearby Baltic the German warships showed how they chase "Red" submarines; and at Wustrow the anti-aircraft batteries gave a demonstration of their effectiveness.

Adolf Hitler

The huge munitions plants in the Ruhr district were visited, and the throngs of workers, given a holiday with pay, cheered the two dictators heartily. Every city and village was decorated. In Berlin there were tremendous demonstrations and elaborate festivities in honor of the visitor from Rome.

As for the statement by the rulers of Italy and Germany, the best guess was that it would declare that hereafter Fascism and Naziism must be shown proper respect by all powers, that "defamation" of the regimes must stop and that their aims and intentions must be understood by the world and that their right to political parity must be recognized.

To the German press Mussolini said: "My visit to Germany is wholly a matter of the heart, a visible sign of the cordial friendship between two great, cultured peoples that trust each other implicitly.

"The two peoples will clasp hands, will put their packs and rifles on their shoulders and will march side by side in the future, for this future belongs to us."

Russia Warns Japan

TOKYO officially notified Berlin that the Chinese were plotting to attack the Russian embassy in Nanking with planes disguised as Japanese aircraft, for the purpose of involving the Soviet government in the Sino-Japanese conflict. With the equivalent of "Oh, yeah?", Russia retorted with a stern warning that it would hold Japan responsible for any bombing of the embassy, intentional or accidental. The Soviet officials said they considered the reported plot a "pure prevarication showing the intention of some Japanese military powers to bombard the Soviet embassy intentionally and then try to escape responsibility."

With callous brutality Japan continued the air raids on Nanking, Canton and other large Chinese cities, the bombs slaughtering thousands of helpless civilians. The utter contempt for protests of western nations shown by Japan seemed warranted by the failure to insist on respect for the nine-power treaty guaranteeing the territorial integrity of China. For this failure Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek blames especially the United States. "This war," said he, "will last as long as Japanese aggression lasts in China."

The League of Nations advisory committee adopted a resolution condemning the Japanese aircraft for bombarding open towns, though the British tried hard to avoid mentioning Japan by name.

Leland Harrison, the American observer without vote, sat silent throughout the acrimonious debate in the committee.

A Japanese submarine sank a fleet of Chinese fishing junks off the coast of southern China, killing 300 men, women and children.

Yarnell's Policy Wins

ADMIRAL HARRY YARNELL was decidedly opposed to the policy of Washington to withdraw American warships from Chinese waters in the face of danger. His protests have been considered by the general board of the Navy department and his program approved. Consequently our naval vessels will remain there to protect our nationals "as long as the present controversy between China and Japan exists."

The Navy department announced that the Asiatic fleet could not be withdrawn under present conditions "without failure in our duty and without bringing great discredit on the United States navy."

More Woe in Palestine

GREAT BRITAIN'S contested plan to divide Palestine between the Jews and the Arabs, with a slice for herself, came to the front again when Lewis Andrews, British commissioner of Galilee, was assassinated by a group of terrorists in Nazareth. Three men, two in European garb and one in peasant clothing, ambushed Andrews and shot him and his bodyguard to death.

Andrews had gained the enmity of extremists because of the strictness of his rule as district commissioner and his life had been threatened frequently.

O'Mahoney Butts In

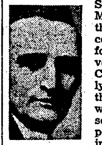
PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT, on the way to Seattle, first entered the "enemy's" country when he crossed the border of Wyoming, the state of Senator Joseph O'Mahoney, leader of the anti-Supreme court enlargement forces. Mr. Roosevelt's train reached Cheyenne in the early morning, and there, among the welcomers, was Joseph, though he had pointedly not been invited to board the train. He walked alongside the President's car and Mrs. Roosevelt emerged, shook his hand and asked after Mrs. O'Mahoney.



Senator O'Mahoney

The senator then entered the private car and he and Mr. Roosevelt shook hands and said "Hello," but the atmosphere was decidedly chilling; he took leave of the party at Casper, Wyo., after accompanying the President and his group on a drive about that city.

The Chief Executive spent two days in Yellowstone National park, and then went on to Boise, Idaho; to the Bonneville dam near Portland, and thence to Seattle.

No Special Session

ACCORDING to high government officials in Washington, the President has dropped his plan to call a special session of congress in November. Administration leaders, it was said, were convinced that it would only invite trouble over the appointment of Hugo Black to the Supreme court and further damage Mr. Roosevelt's legislative program.

Noted Merchant Dies

EDWARD A. FILENE, best known of all Boston's merchants, died of pneumonia in the American hospital in Paris. He was seventy-seven years old. Besides being a business man, Mr. Filene was a noted social economist. He was sometimes called the apostle of mass production and distribution.

Only ten days after he took charge of the American legation in Vienna, Grenville T. Emmet died of double pneumonia. He was sixty years old and was a former law partner of President Roosevelt. He was minister to the Netherlands in 1933 and was given the Austrian post last July.

Home Heating Hints

By John Barclay
Heating Expert

Have Your Furnace Cleaned and Inspected Now Before the Cold Weather Comes Along.

HERE'S a straight money-saving tip: Before starting your heating plant this fall, be sure it's thoroughly vacuum cleaned. It is one of the greatest precautions you can take to insure its most economical operation during the winter ahead.

When the heating surfaces are covered with as little as one-sixteenth of an inch of soot (which acts as an insulator against heat, being five times as effective as asbestos) it wastes fully one-quarter of every ton of coal you burn! What's more, a furnace caked with dirt and dust won't deliver nearly as much heat as a clean furnace will.

Call in a competent service man now and arrange for a thorough vacuum cleaning of your furnace. He will do the job without muss or inconvenience.

While he's doing that, have him check up the whole heating system from flue to ashpit—guard against any possible failure of the plant after cold weather sets in. I know you'll find the cost is little compared with the staggering cost of the fuel that a dirty, faulty plant is sure to waste! Every home-owner wants to save and not waste his fuel dollars!

HAREM-SCAREM

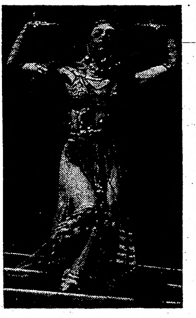
No. 1: Syria is under French mandate, but Paris has had nothing to do with this classic, native dance featured at a recent Syrian-American Mahrajan (picnic, to you).

No. 2: The caper is called "Dance of the Harem," better termed "A Gambol of the Imagination."



No. 3: Sonami, the native dancer was tireless in her effort to please and whenever her—er—feet became weary, she danced with her neck.

No. 4: The music gains intensity—Sonami plies her wavy powers—the merrymakers lay aside their lamb chops and sugared dates, to observe the skillful whirl of a flimsy skirt around what appears to be a motionless torso.

The Only Way for Chap in Such a Fix

Two heavyweight boxers—not, let it be added, in the first class—were booked to fight an important contest.

Each man, secretly, had backed himself to lose the fight.

During the first round one of the men accidentally hit his opponent a light tap on the nose, whereupon the recipient of the blow lay down and let the referee start counting.

The other man was in a quandary. However, just as the referee reached the count of "nine," a brilliant idea came to him.

Rushing over to his prostrate opponent, he kicked him fiercely in the ribs, and was disqualified.

Your kidneys are constantly filtering waste matter from the blood stream. But kidneys sometimes lag in their work—do not act as Nature intended—fail to remove impurities that, if retained, may poison the system and upset the whole body machinery.

Other signs of kidney or bladder disorder may be burning, scanty or too frequent urination.

It would require an angel to live under a system in which all things are held in common.

We sometimes wonder if a pugilistic champion could stand three days of haying.

Solon wasn't so smart. He said "Reprove thy friend privately; commend him publicly." Reprove thy friend privately and thou'lt have none. We don't reprove our friends; we love 'em.

There Are Such Men

The clinging vine girl no longer exists. But what if the sturdy oak kind of a man keeps on looking for her?

If a broken friendship is ever made whole again it never was really broken.

Ought two people with the same literary and dramatic ambitions marry? Don't worry. Not one time in a thousand will they.

If the bombing apparatus of war is developed any further, all the wars will be "dig-in" wars.

Worthy of Friendship

"MAKE me worthy of friendship, and give me friends; make me worthy of love, and give me love," was the daily prayer of a loyal heart that had learned the sacredness of human ties. Many a lonely one, complaining of neglect and isolation would find life's whole environment changed by learning humbly and sincerely to pray that prayer. Friendship, to abide, must find a worthy resting place, and love has its duties. No one can demand either as a right. The heart that is tenderly and unselfishly ready for them will never miss them.

I LEARNED TO 'BEAT' ACID INDIGESTION
ONCE LIFE WAS MISERABLE, NO APPETITE... LITTLE SLEEP...UNTIL THE DOCTOR SAID 'ALKALIZE'
BUT NOW—AT THE FIRST SIGN OF ACID-INDIGESTION I USE PHILLIPS' AND I FEEL LIKE A NEW PERSON ALMOST IMMEDIATELY!
The fastest way to "alkalize" is to carry your alkalizer with you. That's what thousands do now that genuine Phillips' comes in tiny, peppermint flavored tablets — in a flat tin for pocket or purse. Then you are always ready.
Use it this way. Take 2 Phillips' tablets — equal in "alkalizing" effect to 2 teaspoonfuls of liquid Phillips' from the bottle. At once you feel "gas," nausea, "overcrowding" from hyper-acidity begin to ease. "Acid headaches," "acid breath," over-acid stomach are corrected at the source. This is the quick way to ease your own distress — avoid offense to others.

Preacher Got His Man

Lorenzo Dow, an itinerant preacher of more than a century ago, promised to find out who had stolen his friend's ax. In the midst of his sermon, he held out a large stone, and brandishing it, thundered, "Some one here stole my friend's ax. I am about to hurl this stone at the thief, and if he doesn't dodge it will hit him square on the forehead!" One man was observed to dodge his head violently — the thief, of course.

High School

The biology class went on a field trip during class on Monday They studied the various trees identifying them by their leaves.

The geometry class has begun theorem three and will soon be working problems applying this theorem.

Last Tuesday Mr. Munch of Crookston gave a very interesting talk on Wild Life to the high school and upper grades. He told them many worthwhile facts about the values of the various animals. The truth that animals which many think are harmful are really quite beneficial was clearly illustrated by Mr. Munch. His message helped all to more fully appreciate nature.

On Friday a farewell party was given in honor of Rosella Doran. A token of remembrance was given her, games were played and refreshments were served.

Grades 6, 7, 8.

During the past week, we have had whispering rules. These rules have been very helpful in keeping us from talking out of turn.

We have four new teeter boards on the playground.

Over half of the boys in the upper grades are boy scouts. They went to Crookston on Friday for the Water Carnival.

Grades 3, 4, and 5

We are very proud of our new plants. These were given to us by Mrs. T. C. L. Hanson.

In art class last week we made cut-out posters of Indians in canoes on a lake. We have also made many pictures of things related to our study of Indians. We are making a collection of Indian relics for the sand table.

Last week the third grade received new Indian workbooks for History.

"The Little Citizens League" held a fine meeting last Friday. A short program was presented and various monitors for the room were appointed.

Last Tuesday the third, fourth and fifth grades took a hike through the woods. We gathered leaves, moss and birds' nests.

Grades 1 and 2

In Nature Class we have studied the Yellow Jacket and the Wooley Bear Caterpillar.

Shirley and Joyce had 100 in spelling.

In Art Class we are making a frieze to show how children can help at home.

The October enrollment into the CCC appears to be attracting a wide interest among the young men in Marshall county according to information received from the local Welfare Office. It is expected that the enrollment will take place one of the first ten days of October and boys who have not already done so who are interested in entering CCC at this time should call at the Welfare Office to file application.

Rules have been changed again to permit boys to enroll who have had previous service. Regulations are now changed so that a boy that has been out of CCC for six months or more can re-enroll. Also the rule against a boy re-enrolling because of 18 months or more previous service is now removed. Any boy, otherwise eligible, between the ages of 17 and 23 can enroll in the CCC except if he has been discharged from the CCC within the past six months.

Rev. Hanson and Mr. Hans Fosholm spent Tuesday and Wednesday at Middle River attending the Circuit meeting.

Pheasant Season Opens Sat.

Minnesota's annual open season for the taking of ringnecked pheasants, cut to three half-days following a second survey ordered made by Conservation Commissioner Herman C. Wenzel, starts Saturday noon. Pheasant hunting will continue Sunday and Monday, October 17 and 18, with shooting permitted each of the three days from 12 o'clock noon until 5 p. m.

"Persistent reports reaching me that ringnecked pheasants were scarce and that in many counties foundation stock would be jeopardized by too long an open season caused me to have a second survey made," Mr. Wenzel said. "A much below normal hatch and a marked increase in natural enemies of the pheasant has brought about the decline in numbers."

Fifty-two of Minnesota's 87 counties are open to pheasant hunting this season. These counties are Traverse, Grant, Douglas, Big Stone, Stevens, Pope, Stearns, Sherburne, Swift, Kandiyohi, Meeker, Wright, Hennepin, Anoka, Washington, Lac qui Parle, Chippewa, Yellow Medicine, Renville, McLeod, Carver, Lincoln, Lyon, Redwood Brown, Nicollet, Sibley, LeSuer, Scott, Rice, Dakota.

Goodhue, Wabasha, Pipestone, Murray, Cottonwood, Watonwan Blue Earth, Waseca, Steele, Dodge, Olmsted, Winona, Rock, Nobles, Jackson, Martin, Faribault Freeborn, Mower, Fillmore and Houston. All other counties are closed.

Three male birds or two males and one female may be taken by one person in any one day. Five male birds or four males and one female may be in possession of one person at any one time. The season limit is 10 male birds or eight males and two females per person.

Crew Working at Mud Lake

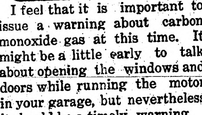
McGarry Bros. who have the contract to dyke Mud Lake and who have kept two large drag lines out there all summer digging ditches, have now put on their crew of men again to do rip-rap and dam building work before it freezes up. Several young men from Holt are on the job.



I feel that it is important to issue a warning about carbon monoxide gas at this time. It might be a little early to talk about opening the windows and doors while running the motor in your garage, but nevertheless it should be a timely warning.

As soon as cold weather sets in people frequently run the motor in the garage to warm it up before driving away. This is done to prevent frequent 'stalls' on the highways.

Whenever you must do this be sure that the windows and doors (all of them) are wide open so that you will get proper ventilation. By running the motor in the average garage with doors and windows closed for a period of three minutes sufficient gas is formed to kill you.

The gas is very poisonous. You cannot see it, smell it, taste it or feel it.

Ventilate!

Health hints for LIVESTOCK

Enteritis Costs Hog Raisers Millions

—Prepared by American Foundation for Animal Health

While hog cholera is, without doubt, the most dangerous and costly swine plague in America, the intestinal disease called Enteritis ranks a close second in causing tremendous annual losses.

Hog cholera, of course, can be prevented almost 100 per cent by vaccination. But there is no dependable vaccination as yet for Enteritis, and no sure cure.

Resembling typhoid fever in human beings, Enteritis creates greatest havoc in growing pigs by producing a surface gangrene or rot of the lining membrane of the intestines.

First signs of the disease are when the hogs begin to lose weight while on good rations. Their appetite continues good, but the loss of weight continues. Sometimes the condition is accompanied by diarrhea. When such symptoms show up, a veterinarian should be called immediately. Because if proper measures are applied in time, death losses and spread of the disease to other hogs can usually be controlled.

There is no sure cure for Enteritis. Farmers should be warned against peddlers who purport to sell cures for Enteritis or "necro", as health authorities have repeatedly advised that no sure cure exists at present.

Vaccination of herds suffering from Enteritis may result in heavy losses. For this reason, hogs should receive careful inspection by a veterinarian before cholera immunization is administered.

Of course, the time to vaccinate against cholera is while the pigs are healthy, and before they can be weakened by any of the prevalent swine diseases.

Prevention of Enteritis is best accomplished by selection of disease-free breeding stock, careful farm sanitation, use of the McLean County clean ground system for growing pigs, and suitable medication by a veterinarian at first signs of an outbreak.

Roosevelt Likes Minnesota

President Roosevelt again has come to Minnesota, delivered a political address in which he praised "my old friend Governor Benson" and "another old friend who has passed on--Floyd Olson," said some very complimentary things about the liberal political movement in this state (meaning the Farmer Labor Party) and left with a definite promise to return again.

Referring to the liberal political movement here, the President said: "The people of Minnesota have proved in the past that you favor progress and continued progress in government. You are not the wild-eyed radicals that some people in Wall Street think you are. You believe in constitutional democracy as I do. You understand me when I speak in national terms. You believe with me that businessmen will most prosper as the workers and farmers prosper".

But the part of the speech which political observers attached the greatest significance to was when he declared: "We have worked for a common goal in the past and our cooperation is by no means at an end."

Drivers Break Road Laws

Pokey drivers are a menace on the highway and whether they know it or not are breaking the state law when their road pace forces traffic constantly to pass around them.

Thus does W. F. Rosenwald, state traffic engineer of the state highway department, classify the driver who loafs down the highway with no regard for the traffic behind.

"Its true that in most instances the persons who drive 30 miles an hour in zones where a speed of 50 is reasonably are of the old school and sincerely look at themselves as the only drivers practicing safety on the road. Ironically, they go dangerously slow because they believe in safety.

"But if the tortoise-like drivers would consider that they are forcing traffic of normal speed to flow around their cars thereby chancing headons with traffic from the opposite direction, if they would consider the chances that impatient drivers will take to pass them, if they would consider the wear and tear on the nerves of the drivers behind them, they cannot help but become aware that they are not safe drivers but dangerous drivers who at times constitute a bigger threat to life and limb than the motorist who consistently drives over sixty. They gamble with their neighbors lives if not with their own.

"Consequently the new uniform traffic code makes it a misdemeanor to drive so slow so as to impede traffic. The inordinately slow driver should take into consideration others who are using the road."

The highway patrol has been ordered to pointedly warn pokey drivers to step up their speed to a reasonable rate. If there warnings are not heeded, they have instructions to bring offenders into court for persecution.

Joe Moline, who is attending college at St. Cloud and Roy Moline who attends high school at Crookston spent the week end here visiting home folks.

HUGO BLACK CONFESSES

New Justice Says He Was Kluxer But Resigned . . . Rail Strike Averted . . . Windsor Coming to America

Justice Black Delivering His Notable Address by Radio.

Edward W. Pickard

SUMMARIZES THE WORLD'S WEEK

© Western Newspaper Union.

Black Joined Klan; Quit

"I DID join the Ku Klux Klan. I later resigned. I never rejoined."

Thus Hugo L. Black, now Associate Justice Black of the Supreme court, admitted to an immense radio audience that the charges against him were true.

Black asserted that since he quit the Klan he has had nothing whatever to do with it.

He cited his record in the senate and in private life to back up his assertion that he was entirely free from religious or race prejudices. While he apparently repudiated the principles of the Klan, he did not explain why, on receiving a life pass card after his election to the senate, he said to a gathering of Klansmen:

"I realize that I was elected by men who believe in the principles that I have sought to advocate and which are the principles of this organization."

Black emphatically declared his devotion to the principles of the Constitution and the Bill of Rights, and said that he was of "that group of liberal senators who have consistently fought for the civil, economic and religious rights of all Americans, without regard to race or creed." Some of his best friends, he added, were Catholics and Jews, and members of the colored race.

At the outset of his address Black undertook to turn the tables on his accusers by asserting that the "campaign" to discredit him "fans the flames of prejudice and is calculated to create racial and religious prejudice."

"When this statement is ended," he concluded, "my discussion of the question is closed."

There was a definite note of defiance in Black's address, but it is fair to assume that the American public was not satisfied with his explanation. From all parts of the country came renewed protests against his presence on the Supreme court bench, and various large associations "resoluted" about it. Many of the senators who voted to confirm his appointment because they accepted the assertion of his friends that he was not a Kluxer are resentful at the deception practiced on them—but what can they do about it now?

President Roosevelt, up to the time of writing, had maintained silence. One of his aides explained that the President decided some time ago that there was no course of action open to him in the Black case.

When Justice Black took his seat, the chamber of the Supreme court was crowded to capacity. Albert Levitt, an attorney, was on hand to ask permission to file a suit seeking to force Justice Black to show cause why he should not be declared ineligible to sit. The court deferred action on the request. Another motion to the same effect was filed by Patrick H. Kelly, a Boston lawyer.

Special Session

ON HIS way from the West President Roosevelt made a speech at Grand Forks, N. D., in which he declared his intention of continuing his fight to "reform" the Supreme court. He also announced attempts to pass crop control and labor legislation would be made at a special session of congress which probably will be called about November 15.

Rail Strike Averted

THERE will not be a nationwide strike of railway workers. Such a disaster was averted when the five operating railroad brotherhoods accepted an offer of the companies of a flat raise of 44 cents a day. They and the fifteen "non-operating" unions had demanded a 20 per cent wage increase. The latter already had agreed to a raise of 40 cents a day.

For five weeks Dr. William M. Leiserson, member of the national mediation board, had been holding daily conferences with representatives of both sides.

In announcing the terms of the agreement, Leiserson praised the co-operation of both parties, saying the manner in which they receded from their original positions was the biggest factor in the settlement.

H. A. Enochs of Philadelphia, chairman of the carriers' conference committee, estimated the increase would mean an average raise of 6.6 per cent for the 75,000 workers.

A. F. of L. May Expel C.I.O.

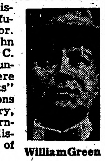
WHEN President William Green opened the annual convention of the American Federation of Labor in Denver, he was not able to present an optimistic picture of the future of unified labor. The battle with John L. Lewis and his C. I. O. continues unabated, and there are "dogfights" among the unions all over the country, generally concerning jurisdiction disputes or shifting of affiliation.



William Green

If the report of the federation's executive council is adopted, the C. I. O. unions will be finally ousted. The council said in part:

"For two years we have pursued a policy of toleration . . . All of this has failed . . . Now the executive council feels that the time has arrived when the American Federation of Labor must meet the issue in a clear-cut and positive way . . . The issue which created the division in the ranks of labor must be made clear.

"In order to accomplish this purpose the executive council recommends that the convention confer upon the executive council authority and power to revoke the charters of the international unions holding membership in the Committee for Industrial Organization."

President in Chicago

CHICHGO put on its best dress to receive President Roosevelt, who spent two and a half hours there. The main purpose of the visit was the dedication of the new outer drive across the mouth of the Chicago river, a project that was partly paid for with federal money. Mr. Roosevelt first reviewed a long and colorful parade and led the way across the structure. Then from the south end of the bridge he delivered an address that was broadcast by radio.

The President was entertained at luncheon by Cardinal Mundelein, a friend of long standing, and soon after proceeded on his way to his home in Hyde Park, N. Y.

Windsor Coming to U. S.

HIS honeymoon being ended, the duke of Windsor intends to take up the really serious things of life, and before long he will come to the United States for the purpose of studying housing and working conditions in this country. This was announced in Paris by the duke's secretary, who said Edward and his duchess would first go to Germany for a similar survey there.

The duke's interest in such matters is no new development, for as Prince of Wales and during his brief reign as king-emperor Edward was notably concerned with the social welfare of his subjects. On many occasions he assailed housing conditions of British workers.

In London it was said the government had given reluctant permission for the duke's American trip in order to avoid an open rupture with him. He resented the close restrictions placed on his movements and, it was rumored, had threatened to return to England.

American friends of the Windsors think they may make their temporary home at "Wakefield manor," near Front Royal, Va., possibly arriving there in November. The manor is the estate of Mrs. George Barnett, cousin of the duchess.

Difficult Housecleaning

Buckingham palace in London contains so many pieces of furniture and objects of art that the cleaning staff frequently refers to a set of room photographs to be sure that everything has been put back in its proper place and position.—Collier's Weekly.

IT'S GREAT TO BE BACK AT WORK when you've found a way to ease the pains of RHEUMATISM and do it the inexpensive way, too.

You can pay as high as you want for remedies claimed to relieve the pain of Rheumatism, Neuritis, Sciatica, etc. But the medicine so many doctors generally approve—the one used by thousands of families daily — is Bayer Aspirin — 15¢ a dozen tablets — about 1¢ apiece.

Simply take 2 Bayer Aspirin tablets with a half glass of water. Repeat, if necessary, according to directions.

Usually this will ease such pain in a remarkably short time.

For quick relief from such pain which exhausts you and keeps you awake at night — ask for genuine Bayer Aspirin.

Trim Ways to Greet Fall

WHEN the haze hangs in the horizon and you want to step right out and tell the world it's grand to be alive—that's when you want simple dresses like these to wear. Under a coat or without a coat—they're tops. Sew-Your-Own approves this fashion for simple things and helps you to make them for your own wardrobe with the aid of the three patterns shown here. Full instructions included.

Coat Dress for Large Women.

The woman with a real figure problem likes the ease and trim lines of this Princess coat dress, made to wear as casually as a coat. The dress buttons like a coat and takes inches off the silhouette. It's designed on flattering semi-fitted lines and is correctly made in silk or wool fabrics. For morning wear, this is a frock smartly made in sturdy cotton.

Slim Waistline in Misses' Frock.

If you wear a 12 to 20 size, then you'll want this very becoming dress made with lifted waistline to give you a molded figure-line. Square shouldered and trimly finished with two pockets, this dress will see you through every daytime occasion and is smartly made in any fabric you prefer—silk, velveteen or thin wool.

Woman's Shirtwaist Dress.

This fashion—good year in and year out—is one which you will want in your wardrobe in a heavy silk or in a sturdy cotton. Make it yourself and have a dress that you can wear at every hour of the day. Note the raglan sleeves extending from the yoke of the dress, a detail that assures you complete comfort and free movement.

Pattern 1983 is designed for sizes 36 to 50. Size 38 requires 3¾ yards of 54-inch material, plus ⅞ yard 39-inch fabric to contrast.

Pattern 1379 is designed for sizes 12 to 20. Size 14 requires 2⅞ yards of 54-inch material.

Fire Menaces Chicago Stock Yards

Flames which swept over a block-square building of one of the major meat-packing plants in the Union Stock yards at Chicago caused damage in excess of $200,000. Nearly a third of the fire-fighting apparatus of the city was called to the yards to prevent a spread of the conflagration. Picture shows firemen fighting the blaze.

THREW FIRST CURVE

Fred Goldsmith, a real veteran of the diamond, is shown as he demonstrated how he threw the first curve ball, originated by him. This "roundhouse" surprised the batter by coming in wide and breaking right across the plate. Goldsmith, as a member of the Chicago White Stockings, pitched the first world series game held between his team and the Cincinnati Red Stockings in 1882. This was six years after the founding of the National League in 1876.

Loyalist Sub Stranded at Brest

Pictured above in the harbor of Brest, France, is the Spanish loyalist submarine C-2, left stranded by its crew which divided into Red and anti-Red groups. A rebel plot to seize the submersible failed and the boat is now awaiting a new crew to take it back to Valencia, Spain.

Shanghai in a Daze as Flames Sweep City

While on all sides their city burns before their eyes, these residents of Shanghai walk listlessly about the foreign settlements apparently apathetic to their fate. The dense columns of smoke rise from buildings set afire by exploding aerial bombs and shells.

Appreciation

TO BE able to appreciate the best that there is in life is an ideal that every youth should have. There are all sorts of things in life, some of them good, some of them bad, and some neither very good nor very bad. There are hosts of young people who miss the best things, because they have fixed their attentions on lesser things. So the finest things in life they never see. The youth who has learned to look for the best in music, in art, in literature, in his associates and in himself, will get the most out of life.

Constipated? It's Nerves Not Poisons That Make You DIZZY and DOPEY

Modern doctors now say that constipation swells up digestive organs causing pressure on nerves in this region. This nerve pressure causes frequent bilious spells, dizziness, headaches, sour stomach, dull, tired-out feeling, sleepless nights, coated tongue, bad taste and loss of appetite.

Don't fool with laxatives that give slow action, overnight relief, or are timed to act in 12 to 24 hours. What you want is QUICK results. GET THAT PRESSURE OFF THE NERVES. Flush the intestinal system. When offending wastes are gone, the bowels return to normal size and nerve pressure stops. Almost at once you feel marvelously refreshed, blues vanish, and life looks bright again.

That is why so many doctors are now insisting on gentle but QUICK ACTION. That is why YOU should insist on Adlerika. This efficient intestinal evacuant contains SEVEN carminative and cathartic ingredients. Adlerika acts on the stomach as well as the entire intestinal tract. Adlerika relieves stomach distress at once and often removes bowel congestion in half an hour. No violent action, no after effects, just QUICK results. Recommended by many doctors and druggists for 35 years.

Affectation of Sanctity

WOMEN WHO HOLD THEIR MEN NEVER LET THEM KNOW

NO matter how much your back aches and your nerves scream, your husband, because he is only a man, can never understand why you are so hard to live with one week in every month.

Too often the honeymoon express is wrecked by the nagging tongue of a three-quarter wife. The wise woman never lets her husband know by outward sign that she is a victim of periodic pain.

For three generations one woman has told another how to go "smiling through" with Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. It helps Nature tone up the system, thus lessening the discomforts from the functional disorders which women must endure in the three ordeals of life: 1. Turning from girlhood to womanhood. 2. Preparing for motherhood. 3. Approaching "middle age."

Don't be a three-quarter wife, take LYDIA E. PINKHAM'S VEGETABLE COMPOUND and Go "Smiling Through."

WNU—Y 37—41

Sentinels of Health

Don't Neglect Them!

Nature designed the kidneys to do a marvelous job. Their task is to keep the flowing blood stream free of an excess of toxic impurities. The act of living—life itself—is constantly producing waste matter the kidneys must remove from the blood if good health is to endure.

When the kidneys fail to function as Nature intended, there is retention of waste that may cause body-wide distress. One may suffer nagging backache, persistent headache, attacks of dizziness, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes—feel tired, nervous, all worn out.

Frequent, scanty or burning passages may be further evidence of kidney or bladder disturbance.

The recognized and proper treatment is a diuretic medicine to help the kidneys get rid of excess poisonous body waste. Use Doan's Pills. They have had more than forty years of public approval. Are endorsed the country over. Insist on Doan's. Sold at all drug stores.

Safetygrams

BY FRED W. BRAUN
The Safety Man

Say what you like, preach what you like, teach what you like - - children are bound to play in the streets. Youth is reckless, youth is care-free, and accordingly does not take time to reason out possible dangers.

A ball suddenly rolls out into the street and the youthful player starts after it regardless of what might happen. His one ambition is to get that ball and get it back into the playing field before the runner can advance too far. The man driving an automobile should take into consideration these possibilities, and wherever children are playing in lots, school yards, or elsewhere, care should be taken while passing these premises.

I'll bet dollars to doughnuts you will never regret doing so.

WHO'S NEWS THIS WEEK...

By Lemuel F. Parton

NEW YORK.—Big, square-headed, ham-fisted Ernest Bevin, czar of right wing British labor, lost his first big fight at the Bournemouth conference as the Labor party voted greater representation for its left wing political elements. Mr. Bevin is the Sam Gompers of British labor, opposing political activity, labor theorists, philosophers, communists and intelligentsia, and relying solely on the economic squeeze for tying knots in the lion's tail—and on occasion he has made the lion yelp resoundingly.

Left Wing of British Labor Gains Power

The Bournemouth showdown, lightly touched in American news dispatches, is a victory for the "united front," for such left wing ascendancy as that of Maj. Clement R. Attlee and Sir Stafford Scripps; it marks a potential schism in British labor and it reveals distinct similarity to nascent political and "ideological" trends in American labor.

He is head of the powerful Transport Workers' union, a large element of which clamored for a boycott against Japanese goods and threatened to refuse to handle them. England notes all this with acute memories of 1926, when Mr. Bevin and his dock workers gave Britain a severe case of jitters with their paralyzing strike. He was similarly obdurate when he pulled the big London bus strike at the time of the coronation.

Innocent bystanders cheer his roundhouse swings at the reds, but wonder who'll bell the cat if he gets more power—and Mr. Bevin has an aggravated case of the power itch. In the present issue—roughly comparable to the disagreement between John L. Lewis and William Green—conservative opinion is being heavily mobilized behind Mr. Bevin.

Mr. Bevin's Bad Case of Power Itch

He is from the Limehouse district, an expounder of traditional trades-union doctrine, such as Gompers taught, based chiefly on "Reward your friends and punish your enemies," and never mind the philosophy or politics. Bulky, moon-faced and belligerent, he is not only a fighter and organizer, but a clever strategist. As in 1924, battling the ship-owners for a shilling a day raise in dock wages. Professors at a conference showed charts proving a worker could get fat on the current wage. He stepped out and translated a day's wages into bread and margerine. It was a pitiful showing. They won their increase.

MUSSOLINI and Hitler, oiling up the Rome-Berlin axis, didn't hesitate to let the world know they can't lose. They might ponder what happened to Slip Madigan when he broke loose from the traditional inferiority complex of football coaches. Recently, setting a precedent, he said St. Mary's was going to trounce California and there was no use making any bones about it. Then California trimmed St. Mary's, 30 to 0.

Mr. Madigan Lives Up to His Nickname

Since Mr. Madigan and his "Galloping Gaels" were last seen hereabouts, the bankers have grabbed old alma mater, but they are still going strong, a lucid spot of color on this year's football horizon. It seems to be something new—a top-hole football outfit touring for a foreclosed college.

In the 16 years in which Mr. Madigan coached the little college of Moraga valley, California, 20 miles east of Oakland, he pulled it up from a dejected little hangnail squad to a roving, ravening band of man-eaters. "The Mad Magician of Moraga," alliterated the football scribes, referring to Mr. Madigan, who was not only coach, but trainer, rubber, handler, doctor, dietitian and pants mender.

I remember looking on, in 1920, I think it was, when California beat St. Mary's, 120 to 0. The college was a dingy little red brick building in a sleazy little side street. They took drubbings like that every year.

Early Days of St. Mary's Sad Ones

Then came Slip Madigan, from Notre Dame, via Oregon. His main assets were a law degree, several pink shirts and an unmatched instinct for showmanship. He set the place on fire with football fervor. Two years later, they licked California, just as if Ethiopia should lick Italy today. From then on, there was no stopping them. The college got plenty of funds and moved to a nice home in the Moraga valley. The "Moraga Maulers," with candy-colored pants this year and red silk next year, pounced and devoured all over the country.

The financial crack-up focused on Slip Madigan's salary. Last February, bondholders charged the college had turned over to him all of the $38,324.15 receipts from the Fordham game. Last July, the college was sold at auction, but, college or no college, the Gaels keep on galloping. Just a fast, 16-year running start, and they can't slow down.

HOW OFTEN CAN YOU KISS AND MAKE UP?

FEW husbands can understand why a wife should turn from a pleasant companion into a shrew for one whole week in every month.

You can say "I'm sorry" and kiss and make up easier before marriage than after. If you're wise and if you want to hold your husband, you won't be a three-quarter wife.

For three generations one woman has told another how to go "smiling through" with Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. It helps Nature tone up the system, thus lessening the discomforts from the functional disorders which women must endure in the three ordeals of life: 1. Turning from girlhood to womanhood. 2. Preparing for motherhood. 3. Approaching "middle age."

Don't be a three-quarter wife, take LYDIA E. PINKHAM'S VEGETABLE COMPOUND and Go "Smiling Through."

Some pups, like many people, ofttimes acquire an exalted opinion of their potency and will rush in—to annoy the most patient, with silly, little, wiggly maneuvers—oblivious of the fact that they are flirting around a very, very sound pair of jaws. And that, by doing so, they are in a fair way to make their efforts appear very, very ridiculous, indeed, to a more mature judgment.

Heedless of the gnarling signs of a waning temper, they continue to rear on their hind legs, to better impress their added height, until—a massive paw sets them to one side or on their ear—as the parade goes on, with all hands assuming their correct proportions.

Wool Is Going Places

LADY, lady, lady have you anything in wool? Smart women everywhere are clamoring for wool. They're wearing it to work in, to play in, to date in, to go to church in. Yes, wool is going places! Sew-Your-Own is here today (and will be here tomorrow) with three ultra-smooth new models for you to choose from—just to make sure you won't be a poor little lady without "something in wool" for Fall.

Needs Slim Lines.

That "something in wool" might well and easily be the handsome model at the left above. Especially does a weightier fabric need slim lines and here you have them pared down to hairline precision. The zipper from throat to hemline gives this frock additional chic, and the far-reaching collar takes care of that all-important need for contrast. French wine, black, duck green, and gendarme blue are the popular colors.

Compliment to Youth.

Youth and the blouse 'n' skirt have always gone sporting together. That's a compliment to youth and real flattery for the two-piecer above, center. This engaging combination has a waist-coat-ish topper and a simply cut, flaring skirt. A singular asset is its size range: 14 to 42. And because it is figure flattering every size is benefited. Acetate crepe is lovely for the blouse; velvet or thin wool is smart for the skirt.

For a Busy Body.

If you're a busy body or a lady of legion labors, you'll thank Sew-Your-Own for the charming new frock at the right. Now is the time to cut two versions: one in gingham for housework, another as your "something in wool" in the long sleeve style for all occasions. Remember then, double your chances for day-in, day-out chic with this one becoming model and save one-third on time and one-half on the price of your new Fall wardrobe assets.

The Patterns.

Pattern 1375 is designed for sizes 12 to 20 (30 to 40 bust). Size 14 requires 2½ yards of 54-inch material. With short sleeves, 3½ yards of 39-inch material. Collar and cuffs in contrast take five-eighths of a yard.

Pattern 1302 is designed for sizes 14 to 20 (32 to 42 bust). Size 16 requires 4⅜ yards of 39-inch material.

Pattern 1382 is designed for sizes 34 to 48. Size 36 requires 2½ yards of 54-inch material with long sleeves; 3¾ yards of 39-inch material with short sleeves.

Cause of Hail

Hail, differing from sleet, is not an exclusive by-product of winter. It results when an upward gust of wind carries raindrops high enough to freeze. They fall, pick up more water, are again lifted, frozen. A little more of that and the stones are heavy enough to fall straight to earth.

The most severe hailstorms have occurred in tropical countries. South Africa probably has the most dangerous. Stones weighing more than 1½ pounds have bombarded Natal.—Washington Post.

HOW TO CHECK JAPAN?

United States Doesn't Wish to Take the Lead . . . No Peace in Labor Ranks

Hull, Davis and Welles Going to Confer With President.

Edward W. Pickard
SUMMARIZES THE WORLD'S WEEK
© Western Newspaper Union.

May Meet in Brussels

HOW far President Roosevelt is willing to go in the effort to stop Japan in China is what other powers, especially Great Britain, are eager to know. The people of the United States also would like to be informed in that matter. The British statesmen wish America to take the lead, and also they would like the suggested conference of the nine-power treaty signatories to be held in Washington. This latter suggestion is definitely opposed in our capital, and so it was believed Brussels might be selected as the meeting place. Cities in Switzerland also were considered.

Mr. Roosevelt, who conferred with Secretary of State Hull, Undersecretary Sumner Welles and Norman Davis, his roving ambassador, was represented as being strongly averse to taking a solitary lead in the action to check the Japanese. Apparently he preferred that the "quarantining" of nations guilty of "international lawlessness" which he proposed in his Chicago speech should be limited to a united international moral stand.

The National Council for Prevention of War, representing a part of the extreme peace sentiment in the United States, announced that its annual meeting had declared for immediate invocation of the neutrality law which the President has not seen fit to put in operation. The council was strongly against a boycott on Japanese goods, believing this would only aggravate the situation.

Japan Denies Violations

IN A formal reply to the charges of treaty violation the Tokyo foreign office flatly denied responsibility for the Sino-Japanese conflict and asserted that China, not Japan, had violated the treaties. The anti-Japanese attitude and the mobilizing of Chinese troops, said the statement, forced Japan to take military action, entirely in self-defense. Japan disclaimed any desire to annex parts of Chinese territory, and declared the accusing nations misunderstand the situation.

Italy Supports Japanese

THERE was considerable doubt whether Italy would take part in the Pacific treaty conference, but it was assumed that if it did, it would defend the course pursued by Japan in China and would do what it could to frustrate the designs of the other conferees.

Giacinto Auriti

This was assured by the message conveyed to the Tokyo government by Giacinto Auriti, Italian ambassador to Japan. According to a Japanese news agency, Auriti promised Kensuke Horinouchi, Japanese vice foreign minister, that "Italy will never spare general support to Japan."

Japs Win Big Battle

DISPATCHES from Shanghai said the Japanese forces in north China had won a big victory in Hopei province, breaking through the Chinese lines at Shichiachuang on a vital railway after three days of fierce fighting. However, the Chinese claimed to have strengthened their positions in that region and it was reported the communist eighth route army was heavily attacking the rear and flank of the Japanese columns in Shansi province.

Neutral observers thought the Japanese conquest of North China would soon be complete.

In Tokyo Prince Konoye, the premier, formed a supreme war council of national leaders.

Japan's plan to set up an autonomous republic comprising the five northern provinces is revealed in the Tokyo press. The capital is to be Peiping under its old name of Peking.

No Peace for Labor

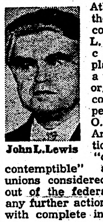
WAR between the rival factions in American organized labor is not going to cease in the near future. The C. I. O. leaders gathered in Atlantic City for their first "war council," and John L. Lewis, their chief, revealed plans for setting up a permanent dual organization. He condemned the suspension of the C. I. O. unions from the American Federation of Labor as "cowardly and contemptible" and said those unions considered themselves now out of the federation and awaited any further action by the federation with complete indifference.



John L. Lewis

In the federation convention at Denver it was taken for granted that the ten C. I. O. unions would be finally expelled, and President Green announced plans for the attack on the rival organization in several great fields. The first vigorous blow will be struck on the Pacific coast in a drive to organize workers in the cannery and agricultural field. The second battle ground will be among the white collar workers generally, and an effort to offset the C. I. O. maritime groups on the Pacific coast was considered.

One of the speakers in Denver was Senator George L. Berry of Tennessee. He has kept his pressmen's union within the federation, although he was closely associated with Lewis in "Labor's Non-Partisan league." Berry maintained his seat on the fence, wishing success to the federation organization campaign, and also to the organizing efforts of "others."

More TVA's Opposed

ONE of the bills which President Roosevelt wants congress to push through in the expected special session is the measure introduced by Senator Norris creating seven more TVA's to preserve and develop natural resources throughout the country. The bill was approved by a senate subcommittee, but publication of hearings held by the house committee on rivers and harbors shows that interested departments of the government oppose the plan.

In these published hearings the Department of Agriculture especially excoriated the authority idea, saying that "it would permit and seems even to propose duplication by the conservation authorities of a large part of the work of the Department of Agriculture."

The Treasury department objected to construction, operation, and maintenance of sewage and industrial waste disposal plants by federal authorities working "independent of and not subject to health laws of the respective states."

The Department of Justice "preferred" not to offer any suggestion. The Department of Labor reported "no specialized knowledge" of flood control and conservation.

Court Upholds Black

FOR the present, at any rate, Hugo L. Black's seat on the Supreme court bench is secure. The court refused to permit Albert Levitt, former federal judge in the Virgin Islands, and Patrick Henry Kelly of Boston to contest the legality of Black's appointment. The ruling was announced by Chief Justice Hughes, who said the two men did not have sufficient interest in the litigation. Levitt indicated he might start other proceedings.

87 SPEED RECORDS BROKEN TO MAKE TIRES SAFER FOR YOU

Never Before Have Tires Been Put to Such Gruelling Torture

Ab Jenkins, World's Safest Driver, Establishes 87 New Records for Safety, Speed, Mileage and Endurance . . . He Drove 3,774 Miles in 24 Hours on the Sharp Granite-like Surface of the Bonneville Salt Beds at Average Speed of 157.27 Miles an Hour

AT SPEEDS as high as 180 miles an hour—with the hot, coarse, abrasive salt grinding, tearing, scorching his tires—Ab Jenkins' special racer, weighing nearly three tons, pounded over the Bonneville Salt Beds at such terrific speed that it caused the surface to break up. Before the end of the run the track was so pitted and rough that it was almost impossible to hold the car on its course. Yet Jenkins set 87 new World, International and American speed records on Firestone Tires.

Building tires capable of establishing such records is made possible by patented Firestone manufacturing processes. These exclusive features enable Firestone to provide car owners with extra safe tires.

For the greatest protection equip your car with Firestone TRIPLE-SAFE Tires. By TRIPLE-SAFE we mean—

1 PROTECTION AGAINST SKIDDING—The scientific tread design stops your car up to 25% quicker.

2 PROTECTION AGAINST BLOWOUTS—The Firestone patented Gum-Dipping process counteracts internal friction and heat that ordinarily cause blowouts.

3 PROTECTION AGAINST PUNCTURES—Two extra layers of Gum-Dipped cords under the tread give extra protection against punctures.

In the afternoon a program and reception was held at the Mission Church in Holt and was attended by hundreds of friends, neighbors and relatives.

Safetygrams

BY FRED W. BRAUN
The Safety Man

Safety education is a very important item in our schools today It should be taught to all classes. Teaching or preaching safety, however, is not enough. If the only thing a child gets out of safety education is a bundle of facts he can recite to the teacher or visitors, I don't believe we have taught him a thing. He must "do" what he is being taught--he must do what people preach to him. A famous author once said "I have quit trying to Be good, but I have not quit trying to Do good.

That is the thought. Cultivate safe habits in the children thru safety education. Safety education must, of course, be based on intelligence, facts, and ideals, but is must have coupled with that desirable and safe habits.

Safety education is a conception of life or state of mind. It must, however, at the same time create a machine or a thought for building efficient and safe conduct.

Shirley Ann, infant daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Willie Hagen, received Christian baptism at the Lutheran parsonage on Monday, Oct. 25. She was born on Sept, 11, 1937. Her sponsors were Mrs. Lawrence Peterson and Miss Mildred Hagen.

BUILDING TESTS WALLS FOR FAIR

NEW YORK (Special).—Although the the opening date of the New York World's Fair is still almost two years away, the Fair site already has one building that mystifies all persons who pass that way and one that is of great interest to the contractors and builders of the whole country. The big sign says it is the "test building."

The building can be made to do a lot of things just short of a late dance step. It can be made to twist, heave, buckle, sag or otherwise contort, all at the will of the Fair's engineers. It has a sawed-off tower arrangement on one end. Some sections of its walls are dazzling under the sun and are, obviously, encrusted with bits of broken glass. Its four walls, in fact, comprise 43 different set-ups of material, supports and surface coatings. When its day is done it will be made to collapse by the turn of a screw.

The unique building is typical of nothing other than itself, say Fair officials, since it is just a set of walls, upon which to try out the merits of various types of wall coating and stucco treatments.

The durability, appearance and structural peculiarities of walls are of great importance to the Fair, since its 300 buildings will require around 15,000,000 square feet of such enclosures.

The interior of this "wall laboratory" is given over to the Corporation's illumination engineers and their experimentation with new lighting devices.

Let us have faith that right makes might, and in that faith let us to the end dare to do our duty as we understand it.—Abraham Lincoln.

What Two Things Happen When You Are Constipated?

When you are constipated two things happen. FIRST: Wastes swell up the bowels and press on nerves in the digestive tract. This nerve pressure causes headaches, a dull, lazy feeling, bilious spells, loss of appetite and dizziness. SECOND: Partly digested food starts to decay forming GAS, bringing on sour stomach (acid indigestion), and heartburn, bloating you up until you sometimes gasp for breath.

Then you spend many miserable days. You can't eat. You can't sleep. Your stomach is sour. You feel tired out, grouchy and miserable.

To get the complete relief you seek you must do TWO things. 1. You must relieve the GAS. 2. You must clear the bowels and GET THAT PRESSURE OFF THE NERVES. As soon as offending wastes are washed out you feel marvelously refreshed, blues vanish, the world looks bright again.

There is only one product on the market that gives you the double action you need. It is ADLERIKA. This efficient carminative cathartic relieves that awful GAS at once. It often removes bowel congestion in half an hour. No waiting for overnight relief. Adlerika acts on the stomach and both bowels. Ordinary laxatives act on the lower bowel only.

Adlerika has been recommended by many doctors and druggists for 35 years. No griping, no after effects. Just QUICK results. Try Adlerika today. You'll say you have never used such an efficient intestinal cleanser.

A Trio of Triumphs

THE way to day-in, day-out chic for the woman who sews is shown in today's attractive new three-way plan. It goes deeper than the surface, you see, in the presentation of a sleek new slip. Ah, and it gives great thought to the surface, too, as you can't help but note in the two wing-side models. This is one triangle every woman who sews should want to know all about.

Spicy New Model.

As shipshape as a Parisian streamline fashion and, in its own role, as important—that's the little number at the left above. It does wonders to give one that up and doing feeling that's handy to have around the house in the morning. You can repeat it time and again without fear of being repetitious; without losing your fondness for it. Anything in gay cotton: shantung, print, gingham, crash, will do nicely for this one.

A Congenial Slip.

Beneath a well-groomed surface hangs a perfect fitting slip! That's an old and honest notion and one Sew-Your-Own abides by religiously. Today's five piece version is as easy to put together as it is congenial to your comfort and outward superbness. Make two while you're about it: one with a plain top for everyday, the other with a bit of frou-frou for dress-up occasions.

Deft Design.

The "girl in the little green hat" wears a dress with many tucks in this her latest picture. It is the dress for you, Milady, to star in at familiar Fall festivities. Deftly but definitely it gives you emphasis where you want it; soft pedals worry-areas. No more willing and able frock than this was ever designed and it can be yours so easily. Thin wool is a smart material and it fits this frock's personality to a T. Let's sew and be seen places this Fall. Okay?

Pattern 1389 is designed for sizes 36 to 52. Size 38 requires 4⅜ yards of 35-inch material, or 4½ yards, with long sleeves.

Pattern 1988 is designed in sizes 34 to 46. Size 36 requires 3⅛ yards of 39-inch material, plus 1 yard of ribbon for shoulder straps, and 1½ yards of edging for finishing upper edge.

Pattern 1392 is designed for sizes 14 to 20 (32 to 42 bust). Size 16 requires 2¾ yards of 54-inch fabric.

Simple Way to Avoid Dust When Shaking Grates and Taking Ashes From Pit

THERE is an easy way to keep dust from sifting through the cracks of the ashpit door when shaking furnace grates. Quite a few readers have asked me ho wit can be done, and I'm sure many more of you will be interested. Here's how:

Have a spray made of small pipe, connected with the cold water system installed in the ashpit of the furnace. Only a short length of pipe will be needed. In it have small holes drilled and cap the free end.

Just before shaking the grates, turn on the spray. It will throw a fine mist over the whole ashpit, wetting down the ashes as they drop through the grate openings and settling the dust immediately. Then remove the ashes from the ashpit. They will be sufficiently wet to prevent the dust from rising and settling in the cellar.

The cost and installation of such a spray will be but little, and it certainly will save you considerable work in dusting off things on which the dust would otherwise settle.

The Lowly Peanut

Some 300 useful products have been made from or with peanuts, it is claimed, including butter, cheese, candies, coffee, pickles, oils, dyes, lard, shaving lotions, flour, soap, breakfast food, linoleum, ink and even axle grease. Paper is made from peanut shells. The peanut crop in the United States is worth about $60,000,000 annually.

HEADACHE REMEDY STARTS WORKING IN SECONDS

THE REASON BAYER ASPIRIN WORKS SO FAST

Drop a Bayer Aspirin tablet into a tumbler of water. By the time it hits the bottom of the glass it is disintegrating.

This speed of disintegration enables genuine BAYER Aspirin tablets to start "taking hold" of headache and similar pain a few minutes after taking.

All people who suffer occasionally from headaches ought to know this way to quick relief.

At the first sign of such pain, take two Bayer Aspirin tablets with a half glass of water. Sometimes if the pain is unusually severe, one more tablet is necessary later, according to directions.

If headaches keep coming back we advise you to see your own physician. He will look for the cause in order to correct it.

HOW LONG CAN A THREE-QUARTER WIFE HOLD HER HUSBAND?

YOU have to work at marriage to make a success of it. Men may be selfish, unsympathetic, but that's the way they're made and you might as well realize it.

When your back aches and your nerves scream, don't take it out on your husband. He can't possibly know how you feel.

For three generations one woman has told another how to go "smiling through" with Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. It helps Nature tone up the system, thus lessening the discomforts from the functional disorders which women must endure in the three ordeals of life: 1. Turning from girlhood to womanhood. 2. Preparing for motherhood. 3. Approaching "middle age."

Don't be a three-quarter wife, take LYDIA E. PINKHAM'S VEGETABLE COMPOUND and Go "Smiling Through."

WHO'S NEWS THIS WEEK...
By Lemuel F. Parton

NEW YORK.—Young James Delmage Ross rode a bicycle from Chatham, Ont., to New York city to get a job as a chemist. He got the job, but noted that everybody in the factory did nothing but work pestles. Pestling seemed piffling, so he pedalled back to Chatham and kept on going, on his bicycle, on foot and on boats.

Pestling Is Piffling to Young Ross

He's been around a lot and now, at sixty-four, the President hands him a job which no mere pestler or pedaller could handle—boss of the Bonneville project, the biggest dam in the world. He will resign from his S. E. C. post to become administrator of the huge power plant.

Mr. Ross was for 20 years head of the municipal power development of Seattle. His selection for Bonneville is taken as an administration declaration that it is going all the way through on its power plans.

He has not only been a vigorous champion of public development, but he has fought for public distribution. Here, he says, is the kernel of the whole business. He says private companies could manufacture power at possibly a lower cost than could the government, and makes his fight on distribution costs. He stakes out big regional power hookups through the Northwest, existing and planned. His policies are aggressive and far-reaching and his appointment would seem to sharpen the disagreement between the President and the power companies.

He has taken and administered a lot of punishment. Several years ago, a newly elected Seattle mayor tossed him out of his power plant job. They recalled the mayor and named a mountain after Mr. Ross, a rocky peak overhanging the Skagit river, which Mr. Ross wants to rope and hog-tie for the good of all concerned, as he sees it.

Knows How to Absorb Punishment

Then his partisans, just to show that they were with him, spotted up a mountain side, on the Cascades, for a Gutzon Borglum bas relief, like the sculptures of Presidents in South Dakota. The project is still being worked up.

His was one of those "roll your own" educations. After his bicycle trip to New York, he headed for the Alaska gold fields in 1898, bicycling to the fade-out of the road, tramping up through Edmonton, making his own boat for the rest of the trip.

Later, in Seattle, he helped design the first municipal power plant and stayed on the job 32 years.

He loves kilowatts and amuses himself in his rambling old house by keeping a copper ball in the air with no visible support and by frying eggs in an electrified pan held in his hand. On his living room table is a book on the natural sciences, published in 1832. He says it started him on his career and he keeps on reading it.

Keeps Trick Gadgets in His House

He was consulting engineer for the New York power authority when Franklin D. Roosevelt was governor; also consultant for the St. Lawrence seaway and power project. He went to Washington as consultant for PWA power development and later was appointed a member of the S. E. C.

As he caroms around mountain cliffs, a violet by the roadside brings a yell to the chauffeur and a screech of brakes. He just has to get out and look at it. He is childless, but he and Mrs. Ross have reared five children.

MRS. ANNIE NATHAN MEYER, founder of Barnard college, is against women "scabs." "I feel it would be better," she says, "if women, instead of scabbing for lower wages, would seek out new fields in which there would be no competition with the men."

Lady 'Scabs' Are Bane to Mrs. Meyer

Mrs. Meyer dislikes being called a feminist, but, in her early youth, she dropped her subscription to Godey's Ladies' Book and urged women to do something on their own account. Women as people have been her absorbing life interest.

She was an anti-suffragist, but now qualifies her opposition. She thinks women ought to be honest and admit that, when they take a job, they are out for a husband. And that, she thinks, is as it should be. She has written 15 plays, 8 of which were produced, some of them on Broadway.

She is a small, merry, white-haired woman, living her life with keen zest at seventy, in her book-littered Park avenue home. She is known as a writer, lecturer and playwright.

Using Kerosene Safely.—One of the safest ways of using kerosene is to mix it with wood or coal ashes, then use a few spoonfuls of this mixture when starting or rekindling a fire. This can be stored for regular use in a gallon bucket or other suitable container.

Dried Peel.—It is nice to dry the skins of several oranges and lemons and grate them, then putting them in a glass bottle in the refrigerator to be kept for flavoring purposes. It certainly saves time in the future and one is inclined to use these flavorings in interesting ways if already at hand.

Spaghetti and Cheese.—A nice way of preparing spaghetti that does not require lighting the oven. Fry one chopped onion and one-half pound ground meat in olive oil until nicely browned. Add two cups tomato puree or sifted tomato pulp, one teaspoon paprika, salt and pepper to taste. When nicely blended serve over plain boiled spaghetti and over the top sprinkle finely grated cheese.

GET READY FOR WINTER DRIVING

No section of our population is more dependent upon the automobile as a means of transportation than the residents of the smaller communities and rural districts.

Yet each Fall, many car owners cause themselves a great deal of trouble and expense by neglecting one or all of the simple yet necessary steps to assure proper operation of the car in Winter weather.

A minimum Winter protection program should cover:

1. Complete change to correct grade of lubricants for motor, transmission and differential.
2. Motor tuned up, including adjusting of carburetor, valves, distributor, sparkplugs, generator and all electrical equipment.
3. Drain and flush cooling system. Refill with suitable anti-freeze solution.

Selection of motor oil and greases for Winter driving is particularly important. You must select an oil which will permit easy starting, that will lubricate the motor throughout the entire driving range of speeds and will continue to do so for a reasonable mileage.

For many years Quaker State Winter Oils and Greases have been recognized as the highest quality and most generally satisfactory Winter lubricants on the market.

Through Quaker State's highly developed methods and equipment it is possible to produce a motor oil which will have a satisfying body over the 400-degree range of temperature it will meet. That is, when the motor temperature is way below zero, the oil will still be fluid enough to allow the motor to turn easily and also to flow freely to all the bearings. Yet this same oil has enough body to stand up and to give the motor proper lubrication when the temperature inside the cylinder wall reaches 400° and over.

As with any other product you buy, you get what you pay for. An oil of Quaker State quality is necessarily expensive to make. This does not mean, however, that Quaker State is more expensive to use. Being pure, concentrated lubrication, it stands up longer in service. It gives more miles per quart and at the same time gives the bearing surfaces safer protection.

You will want to step into the car, even when the mercury is hiding in the bulb and press the starter with every expectation that the motor will start off with its usual Summer zest. This sure starting, plus motor protection, is only possible by preparedness.—Adv.

WIRE INFORMATION

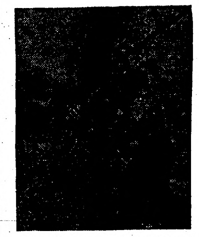
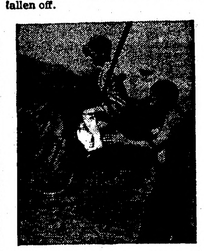
When a circus kid gets a bike it has a string tied to it, generally a ¾ inch kind that stretches across the horizon.

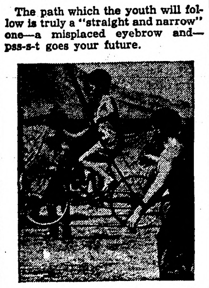
And when he goes on an early morning jaunt it is for a training lesson, the kind you wouldn't care to take from a correspondence school. Or from any other kind of a school if you are as faint-hearted as most folks.



Papa Gretona, of the high wire and handsome Gretonas, is bringing up his ten-year-old son to follow in the footsteps of his ancestors. They've been doing these things for ages, and not even their interest has fallen off.



The path which the youth will follow is truly a "straight and narrow" one—a misplaced eyebrow and—pss-s-t goes your future.



In five years of ceaseless practice Little Enrico has become confident enough to venture across a cable suspended two feet off of the ground—before he can "join the act" he will have to breathe normally on that same cable 65 feet up. Let's see—at the rate of two feet every five years he should reach his goal about the time we balance the budget. He will then have difficulty in keeping his long, white beard from getting tangled up in the spokes.

HOW TO SEW
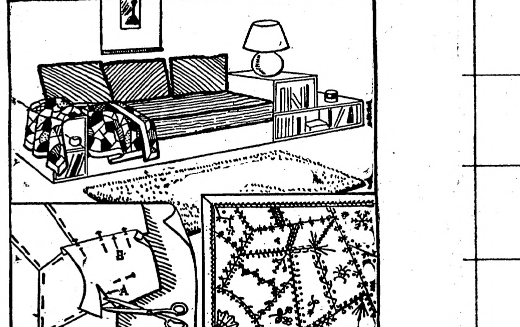
by Ruth Wyeth Spears



Crazy Patch Work at Home in a Modern Setting.

THE crazy patch is the oldest of quilt patterns, yet there is something amazingly modern in its angular lines. So whether your living room is traditional in style or newer than tomorrow you will be interested in the revival of crazy patch work for what our grandmothers and great-grandmothers called a "slumber throw."

A corner of one of these old silk crazy quilts is shown here at the lower right. The pieces were small—many not more than 1½ inches wide or long. A variety of embroidery stitches joins the pieces. Both plain and figured silks were used, the plain patches often being embroidered with flowers, fans and other amusing motifs—note the beetle embroidered on one patch. Several colors of silk embroidery thread were generally used but in the most artistic of these quilts one color predominated in the embroidery.

Larger patches with simple feather stitch and herring-bone stitch at the joinings also give a good effect. The pieces are sewed to a foundation of some firm soft material. Outing flannel or an old wool blanket are good. Pin a piece in place over the space to be filled, trim the edges to the right shape, as at A, allowing enough to turn under, as at B, where the patch laps over the one next to it. Baste the turned edges down as shown. When a number of patches have been basted in place, sew them down to the foundation with the embroidery stitches and then remove the bastings. The backing is tied to the front with silk embroidery thread as comforters are tied. Little or no padding may be used and a plain band around the edge is effective.

High School

We all enjoyed the four day vacation we had last week.

Last Tuesday a movie was shown to the entire school. This picture was about Alaska, showing the plants and animals. It was very surprsing to find that some of our animals still roam wild in this country, although in smaller numbers. The Felix comedy was enjoyed very much.

The freshmen class held a class meeting on Tuesday.

The English 3 class have completed their study of grammar and have begun short stories.

Grades 6, 7, 8.

At our program on Wednesday Roy Johnson gave a very interesting imitation.

We are all busy planning for our Halloween party which we will have on Friday.

Grades 3, 4, and 5

We are busy preparing for a Halloween party, next Friday.

American Boy Introduces A New Football Game

In the early fall issues of the AMERICAN BOY there'll be presented the story of a new game—six-man football—fast as professional football, wide open as basketball, thrilling as hockey!

The game came to life through the need of small schools for some substitute for 11-man football, which was too expensive. Stephen Epler, a Nebraska graduate student in athletics, developed the game of six-man football to meet this need. In six-man football anybody can score, the possibility of injury from mass plays is minimized, and the game is open enough for spectators to follow every exciting development.

The new game is a hit. New schools are taking it up every day. In coming issues THE AMERICAN BOY tells the world about this practical new game. In addition, it presents The American Boy Official Handbook, which can be obtained from the magazine at 20 cents a copy, or 15 cents when bought in bulk.

NOTE: Subscription price of THE AMERICAN BOY will be raised in the near future. Send your subscription order at once to take advantage of the bargain rates now in effect: one year at $1.00 or three years at $2.00. Foreign subscriptions 50c a year extra. Send your name, address and remittance to THE AMERICAN BOY, 7430 Second Blvd., Detroit, Mich. On newsstands the price is 15c a copy.

Red Cross Roll Call

Again the National Red Cross will seek your membership dues during Nov. 11 to 25th. Thousands of public-minded citizens are rallying to the colors of American National Red Cross, this great institution for the alleviation of human distress in time of disease and disaster. The vast work which the American Red Cross carries on each year is made possible through the support of millions of men and women who join as members and through the work of thousands of devoted volunteers who serve without pay and give unstintingly of their time in this service of mercy.

The acomplishments of the Red Cross services for the year 1936-1937 ending June 30th, were as follows:

The Red Cross gave food, clothing, shelter, medical aid and rehabilated homes in 128 disasters during the year in the United States, its insular possessions and by contribution to foreign countries. The floods in the Ohio and Mississippi Valleys beginning in January presented the greatest disaster emergency in the nations history. More than 97,000 families were returned to their homes and farms which the Red Cross rebuilt or repaired refurnished or otherwise restored

The number of persons aided in disaster during the year was approximately 1,360,000. In relief work for disaster victims, the Red Cross expended $23,462,202.40. Of these disasters 106 occured in 36 states. Only 12 states of the Union escaped some type of catastrophe during the year.

The citizens of Marshall County have been spared serious calamity. A sense of gratitude should stir us. A spirit of sympathy should move to become members. Only a percentage of 3.43 of the 17,003 our county are members of the Red Cross. This number should be augmented this year. Let us address ourselves to the task and achieve it.

Safetygrams BY FRED W. BRAUN © The Safety Man

"The accident was caused by the glaring lights of a passing automobile." So reads an accident report.

Every motorist in the country knows well what that statement means. It is dark and a motorist driving carefully is suddenly blinded by the glare of an approaching car. From that instant, it is as if he were without eyes. He cannot see the road ahead, judge the speed, or decide definitely the position of the approaching car. He may slow down or come to a stop, but in that time in his blindness he may drive off the road into a railing.

Courtesy is the answer to the elimination of these accidents. If all drivers would dim their lights, this glaring condition would be eliminated. It can be done if we all cooperate, and it is certainly our duty as citizens to protect the other fellow and be protected.

Dim your lights!

Friends and relatives gave Lorraine Kolden a bridal shower in the Nazareth Lutheran church parlors on Monday evening. She received many beautiful and useful gifts. Several relatives from Roseau and Gatzke were present.

Aksed About Corn Loans

Asked if corn loans would follow the loans to cotton producers, Secretary of Agriculture Henry A. Wallace said during a recent trip through this section of the country that "the middle-western farmer is riding high on his own tractor and can get along without government gas".

Unfortunately, Mr. Wallace's measure of the gas tank was more optimistic than accurate. Farmers produced a heavy corn crop this year with the result that there has been a constant drop in price.

In southern Minnesota, where most of the state's corn crop is grown, farmers can see no reason why Uncle Sam, having dipped into his pockets to aid cotton farmers, cannot do the same for them. Such a program is not very expensive, for farmers will sell the crop at a later day and pay their loans. In the meantime they avoid the necessity of dumping their grain into overburdened market and turning over to the speculators the advantage of seasoned price upturns.

Marlan Augustine spent the week end at the Northwest School at Crookston where he attended the homecoming exercises, and also visited with his sister Angeline who is a student there.

Tells Italy France Is Prepared to Use Force . . . Japs Checked at Shanghai . . . Roosevelt on Farm Program

The news camera man took his life in his hands to secure this excellent photograph of Japanese "mopping up" operations in the Chapei district of Shanghai. "Mopping up" is the military euphemistic term for stamping out whatever life is left after the artillery bombardment has done its work.

Chautemps Gives Warning

IF THE necessity arises, France is prepared and ready to employ force in defense of her vital interests. At the same time she offers peace to all nations "that will prove by their acts their desire to keep their engagements loyally."

M.Chautemps

Such was the warning, evidently directed especially to Italy and Germany, which Premier Camille Chautemps uttered before a congress of the central federation of his Radical Socialist party.

"I hope especially in the grievous affair of Spain this pacific, prudent, and courageous action will succeed in cutting short the violations of justice which cannot be renewed without constraining France and Britain to renew their liberty of action," Chautemps said.

The premier's declaration recalled French insistence that unless the nonintervention committee soon pulled foreign troops out of Spain France would open her frontier to aid the Spanish government.

Mussolini insists there are only 40,000 Italian volunteers in Spain and Fascist organs in Italy said these figures must be accepted by the nonintervention committee without argument.

Dispatches from Paris say that Mussolini and Hitler at their recent meeting in Germany reached an agreement by which Italy was given the right to order some long range guns from the Krupp works and armor plate for a new warship. In return Hitler was promised a free hand in southeastern Europe to obtain the foodstuffs and trade Germany needs. Italy is plainly menacing France's African possessions, but the danger of an advance by Germany through Czechoslovakia and Austria has delayed a showdown in the Mediterranean.

Chautemps' declaration of policy may give Il Duce pause.

Franco's Progress

GENERALISSIMO FRANCO, having completed his conquest of Gijon and the rest of the loyalist territory in northwest Spain, began moving his insurgent forces eastward to the Aragon front, where his officers said the "decisive offensive of the war" would be begun.

Government dispatches announced the Madrid-Valencia loyalist regime was prepared to block the insurgents on all sectors of the 300-mile line from the French frontier south to Teruel, east of Madrid.

Ecuador Coup de'Etat

GEN. ALBERTO ENRIQUEZ, war minister of Ecuador, and officers of the army executed a coup d'etat which forced Provisional President Federico Paez to resign and leave the country. Enriquez at once assumed power as "supreme chief" with a cabinet composed largely of army officers. He decreed the establishment of a popular tribunal to deal with persons accused of tampering with public funds and announced "a national political purge." The people accepted the change of government quietly.

Japanese Drive Checked

SIX days and nights of intensified fighting around Shanghai brought from the spokesman of the Japanese army the admission that its general advance of more than 100,000 men with tanks and planes was "slowed down." The Chinese had blown up bridges, mined highways and erected barbed wire entanglements, and all the time had battled the invaders desperately.

Bullets from a Japanese plane killed one British soldier and endangered Americans and other foreigners on the edge of the international settlement in Shanghai. Official protests were lodged immediately and the matter was so serious that it was referred to London and Tokyo.

Reports indicate that Japan has lost a part of North China which she had occupied. It was said Mongols and Chinese of Suiyuan had declared the independence of that province and set up a new regime at Kweisui.

F. D. R. on Farm Bill

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT, returning to his Hyde Park home, was giving especial attention to the farm legislation which he wishes passed by congress in the extraordinary session. He sent duplicate letters to Chairman Ellison D. Smith of the senate agriculture committee and Chairman Marvin Jones of the house committee urging them to speed up the legislation, but warning that it must be kept within budgetary limits unless congress was prepared to impose new taxes.

"The new national farm act should safeguard farmers' income as well as their soil fertility," the President wrote. "It should provide for storage of reserve food supplies in an ever normal granary, so that if severe and widespread drouth recurs consumers will be assured of more adequate supplies with less drastic increases in price than otherwise would be the case.

"It should provide for control of surpluses when and if necessary but at the same time it should preserve the export markets that still are open to our farmers.

"It should protect both farmers and consumers against extreme ups and downs in prices of farm products. It should be financed by sound fiscal methods. Local administration should be kept in the farmers' hands."

Urging sound fiscal relations, Mr. Roosevelt said that it is important not to interfere with the expected balancing of the budget in the fiscal year 1938-'39.

Experts in Washington figure the new farm program may cost as much as $1,000,000,000 in the first year.

Farmers Warned on Loans

EDWARD A. O'NEAL, president of the American Farm Bureau federation, headed a group of farm leaders who called on the President for the purpose of asking loans of 60 cents a bushel on corn to improve prices. It was understood Mr. Roosevelt warned that crop loans should not be pushed so high that the drain on federal revenues would become too heavy; and that he intimated that the budget would not permit great extension of loans at this time.

However, Secretary of Agriculture Wallace subsequently told a press conference a government loan on this year's large corn crop "should be exceedingly desirable."

Steiwer to Retire

TWENTY years of public service is enough for Senator Frederick Steiwer of Oregon, Republican. He has announced that he will not seek re-election next year, but will return to the practice of law. Steiwer was the keynoter of the Republican national convention of 1936.

Credit System Praised

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT, speaking at the opening of the new Federal Reserve building in Washington, gave full praise to the federal reserve system as a most important part of the government's plans for economic stability and security. He said disastrous depressions and booms could be avoided only by the development of the credit and monetary machinery of the nation.

That machinery, he continued, "must be steadily perfected and coordinated with all other instruments of government to promote the most productive utilization of our human and material resources. Only in that way can we hope to achieve and maintain an enduring prosperity, free from the disastrous extremes of booms and depressions. Only in that way can our economic system and our democratic institutions endure."

Mr. Roosevelt avoided mention of the jittery condition of the stock markets, but before delivering his address he had seen Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau and learned that the market was recovering, due to heavy buying by bargain hunters and perhaps to recovery of confidence by investors.

Among the many notable persons on the platform with the President was Senator Carter Glass of Virginia, who fathered the federal reserve system during the Wilson administration. The veteran senator was loudly cheered.

John Roosevelt to Wed

MRS. FRANCES HAVEN CLARK of Boston announced that her daughter, Anne Lindsay Clark, and John Roosevelt, youngest son of the President, will be married in Nahant, Mass., next June, shortly after Mr. Roosevelt is graduated from Harvard.

Mrs. Elizabeth Donner Roosevelt, former wife of Elliott Roosevelt, second son of the President, and Curtin Winsor of Ardmore, Pa., were married in Philadelphia. Mrs. Winsor and Elliott Roosevelt were divorced in July, 1933.

Landon Calls on G. O. P.

ALF M. LANDON came to the surface in a radio address to 17,000,000 Americans who voted for him in the last election, and especially to the Republican party as a whole. He said he had called this "radio meeting" to suggest ways and means by which "we, the minority party," can be of outstanding service to the country.

Alf M. Landon

The Kansan declared President Roosevelt had failed as an administrator, had failed to follow the Constitution, and now was demanding increased power.

"What he really needs is less power," Mr. Landon asserted, "a position that will force him to take the advice and counsel of other men of both parties—men whose hearts also are in the right place, but men who have had more experience and who know more about the practical application of government than he does."

It is up to the Republicans, he said, to curb Mr. Roosevelt in his demands. He also discussed the war talk prevalent after the President's Chicago speech and said: "We are faced with a situation where he may make a mistake that would indeed be tragic, that might lead to war. Close observers have increasing doubt if he thought his recent declaration through to its logical conclusion."

In conclusion Mr. Landon said:

"We have had a New Deal. Now what we most need in America is a new yardstick—a yardstick to measure the ability and the accomplishments, as well as the good intentions, of public officials.

"It is time to put a solid foundation of workable legislation under the air castles which the President forever is blowing.

"It is time to realize that we must apply the resources of the mind if we are to make the wishes of the heart come true."

Woman in Record Flight

JEAN BATTEN of New Zealand, twenty-six years old, set a new record for a flight from Australia to England. She made the 8,615 miles from Port Darwin to Croyden airport in 5 days, 18 hours and 15 minutes, reducing the record by more than 14 hours.

Noted Editor Dead

DEATH chose a shining mark when it removed George Horace Lorimer, retired editor of the Saturday Evening Post. He succumbed to pneumonia at his home in Wyncote, Pa. Honorary pallbearers at his funeral included former President Herbert Hoover and other men distinguished in public life. Mr. Lorimer became editor in chief of the Saturday Evening Post in 1899 and developed it from an obscure weekly to its high position in its field.

IF ALL the reasons for quilted chair pads were lined up in order of their importance the most intangible reason of all might head the list. Yes, it is quite likely that any decorator, amateur or professional would place atmosphere at the top. But then it is also possible that first rating might be given to the reason that the pressure of slats across the backs of chairs is softened by quilted pads. Then, though it might not be mentioned, it is a known fact that worn out cane seats are sometimes replaced with inexpensive composition seats which may be disguised by gay quilted pads.

Chintz, calico or gingham chair pads are in fact one of the simplest and most inexpensive ways of adding color and charm as well as comfort to a room. Such pads are often used on the backs of chairs and not on the seats, and especially for side chairs, the seat pads used without any back covering. In making such small things as these it is quite easy to do the quilting on the machine. Or, if you wish to take the other point of view about it, the work of quilting them by hand would not consume an unreasonable amount of time. There is no doubt that handwork has a certain quaintness that machine work lacks.

The pads shown here are made with one layer of sheet wadding between the two layers of the chintz. The edge bindings and ties are made of bias tape. Cut the three layers of the pad material exactly the size and shape you want them to be when finished. Place the sheet wadding between the two layers of covering material as shown here at A. Either pin or baste in this position, and then quilt as shown here at B. Make the ties by stitching the lengthwise edges of the bias tape together, and then tack them to the corners of the pad as at C before it is bound. Now, bind the edges, sewing the ties right in with the binding as shown here at D.

Building Furnace Fire Is Easy Operation When You Follow Few Simple Rules

IT'S really no trick to build a good furnace fire quickly and easily.

Leave a layer of ashes about two inches deep spread on the grates. Spread about two inches of coal over this layer of ashes. Over the coal, place a generous amount of kindling—newspapers and light, dry wood.

The turn damper in the smoke pipe and the ashpit damper should be open wide. If the ashpit damper on your furnace is in back, open it and also the ashpit door in front. This assures maximum draft and quick ignition.

When the kindling is burning well, add fresh coal gradually. In this way you get a deep fire in little time—the kindling burning the coal beneath it, and the fire, in turn, igniting the coal above it. From time to time, add additional fuel until you have a solid, deep fire. When this is done, check your dampers and close the ashpit door.

Should the kindling while igniting smoke a bit through the furnace door crevices, it is due to the chimney being cold and not providing enough draft to carry off the smoke. This is easily overcome by wadding a bit of newspaper, lighting it, and inserting it into the check damper.

-FOR I KNEW THAT ACID-INDIGESTION WAS DISTRESSING TO ME AND OFFENSIVE TO OTHERS

BUT NOW-I JUST ALKALIZE THE EASY PHILLIPS' WAY

The quick way to alkalize is this: Take two teaspoons of Phillips' Milk of Magnesia 30 minutes after eating and drinking. Or, when among others — take two Phillips' Tablets that come in a small flat tin you carry in purse or vest pocket. — You do it unnoticed.

Relief is almost immediate. "Gas," nausea, acid breath and other offensive symptoms leave.—That "stuffed" feeling and pains from "acid indigestion" cease to annoy. You feel great.

This is the way, we believe, more doctors use than any other when alkalizing upset stomach.

THE REASON HEADACHES ARE RELIEVED SO FAST

THE REASON BAYER ASPIRIN WORKS SO FAST
Drop a Bayer Aspirin tablet into a tumbler of water.
By the time it hits the bottom of the glass it is disintegrating.
This speed of disintegration enables genuine BAYER Aspirin tablets to start "taking hold" of headache and similar pain a few minutes after taking.

All people who suffer occasionally from headaches ought to know this way to quick relief.

At the first sign of such pain, take two Bayer Aspirin tablets with a half glass of water. Sometimes if the pain is more severe, another dose is necessary later, according to directions.

If headaches keep coming back we advise you to see your own physician. He will look for the cause in order to correct it.

The price now is only 15¢ for twelve tablets or two full dozen for 25 cents — virtually, only a cent apiece.

WHO'S NEWS THIS WEEK...

By Lemuel F. Parton

Smart Girls Help Spur U. S. Trade

NEW YORK.—Career diplomacy is closed to women. Brilliant girls, just out of college, keep on knocking at the door, but it doesn't open. In the Department of Commerce, things are different. Trade commissioners or assistant commissioners in seven countries are women. They have been singularly successful, working as Uncle Sam's saleswomen, finding out what people of other nations want, employing tact and discernment in their work, supplying the department with all sorts of keenly observed data about preference, taste and sales possibilities. They are proving themselves excellent trade envoys.

The National League of Women Voters, publishing its "survey of women in public office," notes especially the success of Miss A. Viola Smith at Shanghai and Miss Elizabeth Humes at Rome.

Miss Smith has been with the Department of Commerce in China since 1920. A native of Los Angeles, she was graduated in law at George Washington university. She was at Peiping two years before being transferred to Shanghai.

She has been president of the American Women's Club of Shanghai, vice-chairman of the International Committee of Women's organizations, and has been active in many fields of social and civic life in China.

Italy Goes for Scanty Swim Suits

Miss Humes, assistant trade commissioner in Rome in 1925, and commissioner thereafter, showed typical resourcefulness in inducing Italian women to wear backless bathing suits. This, with a successful cosmetics campaign, opened new avenues for American trade in Italy.

She travels a great deal around Italy and keeps the department minutely informed on trade conditions and opportunities. She was reared in Louisiana and educated in Italy and Switzerland. In the war, she was with the Red Cross and later was attached to the American embassy in Rome.

Miss Gudrun Carlson has made a similar success at Oslo, Norway. Other nations in which America is represented by women in trade posts are Brazil, Guatemala, Chile and Venezuela.

All reports are that chic, intelligent women are highly esteemed in foreign capitals and it would appear that more good jobs for bright girls are coming along in the Department of Commerce, as clerks or commercial attaches, if not as commissioners.

Six Wheels Etched on Bald Skull

AS THE Buddhists have it, "The turn of the wheel is the whole of the law," so Ignatius Timothy Trebitsch Lincoln has six wheels etched on his bald skull with hot irons, and becomes Chao Kung, a Buddhist monk. In Manchukuo, he opines that "Japan will bring about more peaceful conditions on earth than the Christians have done."

An internationalist, he was chased and caught by a Brooklyn policeman, landed in an English jail, circulated during the war, pretending to be a German spy, helped in the Kapp putsch in Germany, was chased out and went to the Orient. He was born in Hungary and reared in the slums of London. He became a Presbyterian missionary, then a vicar in the Anglican church, and, in 1910, a member of parliament.

When the Brooklyn police nailed him it was supposed to be a spy case, but it was later disclosed that England wanted him for forgery. That was in 1915. Thereafter he staged himself in a great deal of European spy melodrama, all of it supposedly imaginary.

Out of prison, he was engaged in arms traffic in Germany and built an impressive estate in Ceylon. Then he became a Buddhist abbot, in coarse robe and sandals.

Peace Army Lifts Up a Loud Voice

FOR the first time, the forty or more peace societies seem to be making themselves heard at Washington. One hears talk of their possible influence in changes, enforcement or negation of the neutrality law.

Mrs. Estelle Sternberger, executive secretary of World Peaceways, is a blue-eyed, brown-haired grandmother who has swiftly risen to leadership in the peace army during the last few years.

She sharply challenges the President's stand. "In his Chicago speech," says her organization, "the President points the American people down the road that led to the World war." Her gospel is simply that war is horrible and we've got to keep out of it.

She was Estelle Miller, reared in Cincinnati, an alumna of the University of Cincinnati. Much of her life has been given to philanthropy and civic enterprise.

Nobleness

'Tis more noble to forgive, and more manly to despise, than to revenge an injury. — Benjamin Franklin.

YOU CAN THROW CARDS IN HIS FACE ONCE TOO OFTEN

WHEN you have those awful cramps; when your nerves are all on edge—don't take it out on the man you love.

Your husband can't possibly know how you feel for the simple reason that he is a man.

A three-quarter wife may be no wife at all if she nags her husband seven days out of every month.

For three generations one woman has told another how to go "smiling through" with Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. It helps Nature tone up the system, thus lessening the discomforts from the functional disorders which women must endure in the three ordeals of life: 1. Turning from girlhood to womanhood. 2. Preparing for motherhood. 3. Approaching "middle age."

Don't be a three-quarter wife, take LYDIA E. PINKHAM'S VEGETABLE COMPOUND and Go "Smiling Through."

So the Man

The typical boy becomes the typical man.

Safe Pleasant Way To Lose Fat

How would you like to lose 15 pounds of fat in a month and at the same time increase your energy and improve your health?

How would you like to lose your double chin and your too prominent hips and at the same time make your skin so clean and clear that it will compel admiration?

How would you like to get your weight down to normal and at the same time develop that urge for activity that makes work a pleasure and also gain in ambition and keenness of mind?

Get on the scales today and see how much you weigh—then get a bottle of Kruschen Salts which will last you for 4 weeks and costs but a trifle. Take one-half teaspoonful every morning—modify your diet—get a little regular gentle exercise—and when you have finished the contents of this first bottle weigh yourself again.

Now you will know the pleasant way to lose unsightly fat and you'll also know that the 6 salts of Kruschen have presented you with glorious health.

But be sure for your health's sake that you ask for and get Kruschen Salts. Get them at any drugstore in the world and if the results one bottle brings do not delight you—do not joyfully satisfy you—why money back.

HOLT WEEKLY NEWS

Issued Weekly From The Home Of The Biggest Co-operative Creamery In Marshall County

Verner Nelson, Publisher; Mrs. Mabel Hanson, Editor & Bus. Mgr. Holt, Marshall County, Minnesota, Friday, Nov. 12, 1937. Volume 26, Number 28

Warden Force Strenghtened

In a concerted effort to cut down to a minimum illegal shining of deer and illicit trapping operations, Herman C. Wenzel, Commissioner of Conservation, has directed the transfer of a number of wardens from the southern and central parts of the state to northern Minnesota. "We are determined to forestall as much as possible the taking of deer and then holding them for sale during the big game season that is in the offing," Commissioner Wenzel said. "This practice on the part of unscrupulous persons has developed into a racket that must be stopped.

"To adequately safeguard furbearers that are now on the protected list, illegal trapping operations must be curbed. For this purpose we are concentrating game wardens in the better trapping areas."

Harry E. Speakes, Director of the Division of Game and Fish, reported that already 15 game wardens have moved north for special duty and that others will follow as they are selected.

Olaf Dahl, Mud Lake farmer, had the misfortune to have the fingers on both hands mangled some when he had them pinched under the overload springs on a large truck as he was helping move a big granery off the old Gabrialson farm. He had to have one finger amputated

The infant daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Wegge was baptised last Sunday at her parental home. She was given the name Carole Yvonne. She was born on Sept 8. Her sponsors were Mr. and Mrs. John Benitt, Miss Sylvia Wegge and Mrs. T. C. L. Hanson. The sponsors and Mrs. L. Wegge were guests at the Wegge home on that day.

Naz. Luth. Ladies Aid Sale

The annual Ladies Aid Auction Sale will be held in the Nazareth Lutheran church on Thursday evening November 18th. The date was changed from Friday in order to give several men a chance to attend who plan to leave on Friday for deer hunting.

The sale this year will be bigger than ever before. There will be six woolen quilts sold. Special mention should be made of a linen table cloth, all hand embroidered, large size, with napkins. Among other things there is an embroidered bed spread, several rugs, dish towel sets, pillows, and aprons.

CAPITAL NEWS REVIEW

Human beings are strange things, after all. The republicans of this state for years having been shouting "economy" at the liberals (although they themselves did not know the meaning of the word while in office) and now that Governor Benson is consolidating positions and abolishing others and calling in automobiles which he feels are needless expense, they are shouting "politics."

Nevertheless, the Governor's reorganization program already has resulted in a savings to the state of some 740,000 yearly and further economies in the administration of the state government are expected shortly. Perhaps what the republicans mean when they shout "politics" at Governor Benson's efforts to achieve greater efficiency and economy is that efficiency and economy are the best forms of politics. If so, we have no quarrel with them.

Regional Farm Conference

Farmers of this congressional district will attend a Regional Farm Conference to be held at Crookston, Saturday Nov. 13th. according to a news release issued today by John Nelson, farmer of Brookston, Minnesota. who is chairman of Minnesota Farm Conference Board. The meeting, which is scheduled to start at one o'clock in the afternoon, has been called for the purpose of reporting back to the farmers of Minnesota, the results of the State Farm Conference held in St. Paul, October, 4th, and discussing ways of furthering the program throughout the Northwest.

High School

On Monday morning Mr. Karvonen showed some very educational films to the high school students and upper grades. These films were on conservation of fish and birds.

They showed the method by which fish are produced in hatcheries as well as partridges, quails, etc., which have been released in different localities.

Many students enjoyed Halloween until they were requested to wash windows.

A second set of report cards was handed out last week. These report cards check the various traits of the students. Some of these are: ambition, posture, dependibility, effort and initive.

Grades 1 and 2

Last Friday Manning and Shirley had 100 in Spelling.

In second grade language class we are studying Indians. We have memorized the poem "Indian Children" by Annette Wynne.

We have been studying clothing and where we obtain the wool, cotton, silk, linen, and leather from which our clothing is made.

"Courtesy" has been our topic in citizenship class.

Grades 3, 4, and 5

Allen Larson visited our room last Friday afternoon.

We have changed our Halloween decorations now to Thanksgiving. We have made Turkeys, Puritan boys and Puritan girls.

Our plants are growing very well. We keep them on top of the bookcase and they help to make our room more attractive.

Grades 6, 7, 8.

The sixth grade history class has been studying the work of the Greeks in early times.

In social science class the eighth graders have been studying the Constitution of the United States.

PETITION REQUEST NO CHANGE IN DEER SEASON

A number of petitions containing hundreds of signatures have been received by Herman C. Wenzel Commissioner of Conservation, asking that no change be made in the executive order establishing a six-day deer hunting season this month.

The order sets the deer season from November 20 to 25. Twelve counties and portions of four others will be open.

In the petitions is cited that "deer are plentiful and that a short season is in the interest of good conservation and protection to the foundation brood stock."

Commissioner Wenzel recommended the short season following a survey conducted by the Game and Fish Division.

SAW BEARS NEAR GATZKE

Donald and Ray, sons of Mr. and Mrs. Harold McMillan saw a large bear and two cubs three miles southeast of Gatzke Friday November 5th, while out looking over trapping prospects. The lads were not sure at first as to whether they were bears or not but the Mother Bruin sat up on her haunches and the little ones did likewise.

Mr. and Mrs. R. A. Holmgren and son Arthur of Glyndon visited relatives here Sunday.

Hunters reported that there were few ducks around here on Sunday, the closing day of the season for this year.

CCC Camp Quotas Complete

Nearly 2400 boys were accepted for enrollment in 27 Minnesota CCC camps for the next six month period, according to Conservation Commissioner Herman C. Wenzel.

The new enrollments bring the total number of boys in Minnesota camps to more than 5000, with an average enrollment of more than 200 boys per camp.

Enrollments for the period were to close October 31, but quotas for the camps were already filled several weeks ago. Many applicants had to be rejected.

RETAINING TAGS NEEDED IN ORDER TO KEEP GAME

Persons having wild ducks in their possession should consume them before November 17, Harry E. Speakes, director of the Division of Game and Fish, warned.

With the season for the legal taking of wild ducks ending Sunday, Federal regulations stipulate that wild waterfowl may only be retained 10 days after the close of the season.

All game must bear retaining tags issued by the director or state game warden if held more than five days after the season's close.

It is legal to hold pheasants and quail until January 10 when tagged properly. The season on quail also closed Sunday.

With the deer hunting season scheduled to open November 20, hunters were advised that venison when tagged may be retained in their possession until February 28.

Inspector Makes Fine Report

Mr. Theodore Utne, state director of high schools, visited our school recently. On leaving, he left the following report:

"I found the school well kept, the instructional material well maintained, a good pupil and teacher attitude, and a promising corps of teachers. I was pleased to find that a new motor had been provided for the fan and angle jets for the drinking fountains as recommended by Mr. Bering last year. I was glad to learn that mechanical ventilation will be provided for the classrooms in the old part of the building. I also found that the finances had been somewhat improved, the building debt reduced, showing intelligent administration."

The Men's Club was well attended at its monthly meeting on Monday evening. Moving pictures sent out by the State Game and Fish Commission were shown and explained by Mr. Karvonen.

O. T. Ness has made a deal with the Northern Seed and Grain Co. in which he became owner of the local elevator here. Mr. Ness will take over the institution on his own management next spring.

A very large crowd attended the surprise social at the Sunnyside school on Saturday evening.

Succotash Chowder.

3 slices bacon
2 onions
2 potatoes
3 carrots
1 No. 2 can succotash
Salt and pepper
2 cups medium white sauce
Chopped parsley

Cut the bacon into small pieces and fry until crisp. Chop the onion, dice the potatoes and carrots and add to the bacon fat, and fry until the onion is a light brown. Add the succotash and about a cupful of water. Cover the pan and simmer until the potatoes and carrots are tender. Season with salt and pepper. Meantime, make the medium white sauce and add it to the cooked vegetable mixture. Allow the mixture to heat through thoroughly to blend the flavors. Serve hot with a sprinkling of chopped parsley over the top. This is hearty. If you prefer a thinner chowder, add extra milk.

Serve the chowder with toasted hard rolls, and finish the meal with a salad made from a can of mixed salad fruits combined with lettuce and French dressing.

Yes, Constipation Is Serious But It Can't Poison You!
Say Doctors

Modern doctors now say that the old idea of poisons getting into your blood from constipation is BUNK. They claim that constipation swells up the bowels causing pressure on nerves in the digestive tract. This nerve pressure is what causes frequent bilious spells, dizziness, headaches, upset stomach, dull, tired-out feeling, sleepless nights, coated tongue, bad taste and loss of appetite.

Don't suffer hours or even days longer than necessary. You must GET THAT PRESSURE OFF THE NERVES TO GET RELIEF. Flush the intestinal system. When offending wastes are gone the bowels return to normal size and nerve pressure STOPS. Almost at once you feel marvelously refreshed, blues vanish, and life looks bright again.

That is why so many doctors are now insisting on gentle but QUICK ACTION. That is why YOU should insist on Adlerika. This efficient intestinal evacuant contains SEVEN carminative and cathartic ingredients. Adlerika acts on the stomach as well as the entire intestinal tract. Adlerika relieves stomach GAS at once and often removes bowel congestion in half an hour. No violent action, no after effects, just QUICK results. Recommended by many doctors and druggists for 35 years.

LION'S TAIL TWISTED

British Soldiers Are Killed by Japanese . . . English Ship Is Sunk by an Italian Bombing Plane

Friends of the duke of Windsor when he was prince of Wales and Edward VIII, Mr. and Mrs. Harold Sims will be hosts of the duke and his duchess during their forthcoming visit to Washington. Mr. Sims is an attache of the British embassy.

© Western Newspaper Union.

British Are Enraged

JAPAN and Italy have been vigorously twisting the tail of the British lion, and if they keep it up, that mighty beast may be stirred to action. Within a few days five British soldiers were killed and a number wounded by Japanese shells in the fighting at Shanghai. The English there charged the killings were deliberate, in retaliation for the aid the British gave a "suicide battalion" of Chinese in escaping from a warehouse in Chapei, the native quarter, to the international settlement. The British and Japanese admirals had a hot dispute over the right of the former to prevent the passage of Japanese launches up Soochow creek.

Soon after the Japanese began shelling the residential area of the settlement and an outpost where English soldiers were quartered was destroyed. Continuous shelling of Shanghai by the invaders endangered the British and American lines on the border of the international settlement and shells fell close to the American warship Augusta, Admiral Yarnell's flagship.

Japan is angry over the alleged help Britain is giving China in the warfare and there is a movement in Tokio to break diplomatic relations with London. This is urged by the "council on the current situation," an unofficial body composed of high army officers, political leaders and other influential persons. The council adopted a resolution warning that unless Britain "reconsiders its improper attitude" Japan may be forced to take certain steps of "grave determination" against Britain, despite the "deep friendship existing between the two countries for the last sixty years.

Japanese troops invaded a part of the international settlement guarded by American marines and seized a Chinese junk loaded with rice. General Beaumont, commandant of marines, immediately entered a protest and the Japanese apologized but the marines did not consider the incident closed because the Japs didn't return the junk.

The British government was not expected to take any action that would further anger Japan lest it should endanger the success of the parley in Brussels. But wise observers do not believe the nine-power treaty conference will have any definite results.

Morocco Uprisings

NATIONALIST uprisings in French Morocco, which have been giving the French government a lot of trouble, are blamed on agents of "a foreign totalitarian power," meaning Italy. The disorders, mainly in Casablanca, Fez and Medina, were quelled by troops, mostly Senegalese legionnaires, and hundreds of arrests were made.

Authorities said investigation showed many of the natives had been paid from 10 to 20 francs to take part in the demonstrations.

The nationalists plotted to set up an independent Arab state with Moulay Allal El Fassi as king.

More "Piracy"

ITALY'S latest twist of the lion's tail came in the form of the bombing and sinking of the British steamer Jean Weems in the Mediterranean by a "pirate" airplane.

The London Daily Herald's Barcelona correspondent reported that the Spanish loyalist government asserted that the plane bore markings showing that it was piloted by Bruno Mussolini, son of the Italian premier. The pilot gave the freighter's crew only five minutes to take to lifeboats and then sank the Weems with bombs.

The British battle cruiser Hood was sent at full speed from Palma, Majorca, to Barcelona to investigate the attack.

In parliament the critics of the government, led by David Lloyd George, demanded a stronger British Mediterranean policy. Lloyd George flayed the government for bolstering up the international committee on nonintervention in Spain, whose history after 14 months he denounced as "discreditable and dishonorable."

Budget Conference

WHILE members of congress were beginning to move toward Washington for the extraordinary session, President Roosevelt in his Hyde Park home was busy planning means of carrying on the government program. Especially was he interested in the budget, and related financial matters, and to advise on this he called in Marriner S. Eccles, head of the federal reserve system. Treasury Secretary Morgenthau and Budget Director Bell already were there, and all listened closely to Mr. Eccles' talk concerning current business conditions and the stock market situation.

M. S. Eccles

An immediate problem before the President and his budget advisers was financing a proposed loan on corn, to help farmers hold their corn past the present period of low prices. Morgenthau and Agriculture Secretary Wallace have been studying possible means of financing that government aid program, without increasing the treasury deficit beyond the last estimate of $695,000,000.

It was decided by the President that the Commodity Credit corporation should provide $85,000,000 for the corn loans, obtaining the money from the RFC and repaying the latter agency when congress makes the necessary appropriations. Secretary Wallace said the corn loans would be about 46 cents a bushel.

Wallace Plan Attacked

SECRETARY WALLACE'S "ever normal granary" plan is "politically inexpedient, economically unsound, and fundamentally unworkable," according to the Cash Grain association of Chicago which submitted a brief to a senate subcommittee at a hearing in Springfield, Ill.

"The application of artificial means to solve this national problem cannot but prove disastrous to the producer, consumer, and to all lines of commerce and industry," the brief said.

Miss Roche Quits Treasury

MISS JOSEPHINE ROCHE, first woman to be an assistant secretary of the treasury, has resigned that post and returns to the presidency of the Rocky Mountain Fuel company of Denver. The position will be left unfilled, for the administration hopes she will resume it later. She was appointed by President Roosevelt three years ago.

WHO'S NEWS THIS WEEK...

By Lemuel F. Parton

NEW YORK.—Gen. Sadao Araki, a gentle little man, who recites poetry and arranges flowers beautifully and treasures delicate cloisonne and jade, thinks Japan should polish off Russia, as well as China, while she's in the mood to branch out. The former minister of war, on the sidelines for the last year, is again in the power line-up, close to Premier Konoye and a member of his new advisory council.

War Lord Is Partial to Cloisonne

He is an ascetic, abstemious in all things, living on a birdseed diet, and, since directing the Manchurian outreach in 1932, has counselled decorum and seemly behavior in the expropriation of China. When he found it expedient to defy the League of Nations in 1932, he did it in a nice way.

He seems to want capitalism without any capitalists. A great many industrialists were killed in his conquest of Manchuria. His peasant origin accounts for that. The army is largely recruited from the peasant classes—including its officers—and it has a romantic feudal hangover which makes it suspect and dislike industrialists.

Pan-Asia is the general's main idea, and from many sources there has come evidence that it is also the principal objective in Japan's drive. Shrewd observers of the Far East have told this writer that all Japan's major policies are directed to this end and that certain Chinese generals, dealing under the table with Japan, also have this in mind.

Gen. Araki's Big Idea Is Pan-Asia

"Hodo" and "bushido" are the general's two favorite conjure words —signifying "the way of the emperor," and "the way of the warrior." Arranging his flowers, or presiding at the tea ceremonial, he deplores war and bloodshed and conquest. They are all dreadful and the world would be so much better if everyone would behave nicely, but, as long as they don't, Japan has to go all the way through.

The general is angry when he is called a fascist or militarist. He follows rigid discipline in his life in his little cottage on the outskirts of Tokyo, and wears a plain khaki uniform with almost no medals or decorations.

Graduating from the military college, he wanted to go into the navy, but was diverted to the army by the Russo-Japanese war. He likes to do everything in a nice way. They say that once, when he had to drown a batch of kittens, he warmed the water so they wouldn't experience a cold shock.

SIX years ago, the British government benched Sir Charles Augustus Tegart, after he had been dealing misery to terrorists in Belgan for 30 years. Now they send him in again against the rampant and riotous Arabs, who are messing up not only Palestine, but certainly delicately balanced equations of foreign policy, at a time when Brittania is extremely touchy about such disturbances.

Expert Goes to Tame Tough Arabs

Sir Charles is a parson's son and he married a parson's daughter. A quiet man, soft-spoken and deliberate, never ferocious, he carried through one of the toughest police jobs in the world. He joined the Indian police force in 1901.

He was as ruthless as an installment collector in running down his man. Those were years of plots and conspiracies, and as he rose in office his function took on broader aspects of allaying or overcoming social disturbance and he disclosed sagacity and skill in this wider reach to police power. All this brought him the king's police medal in 1911, and he has received many other decorations and honors.

He was knighted in 1926 and since 1932 has been a member of the council of India. He was educated at the Portora Royal school at Enniskillen and Trinity college, Dublin. The latter awarded him an honorary LL.D. in 1933.

Knighthood Was Reward to Tegart

Sending Sir Charles to Palestine is taken as an indication that Britain is warming up a more aggressive policy in the Near East, after quite a spell of stalling and shadow-boxing. He is especially skilled in rooting out conspiracies. The word from Palestine is that the Arabs are not altogether self-starters in the present outbreak of terrorism and it is indicated that a thorough job of sleuthing will precede the necessary renovating and the later political adjustments. William G. A. Ormsby-Gore, secretary of state for the colonies, promises "to take the most vigorous measures to combat terrorism."

Old Masters

The question arises as to what percentage of the paintings called "old masters" are fakes. No compilation of statistics is available. By way of illustration, however, of the volume of the business done in spurious "old masters" it is said that 2,000 paintings attributed to Van Dyck have been sold to art collectors and galleries, whereas the artist actually produced only 70 paintings during his lifetime.

30 MINUTES AFTER Eating-Drinking ALKALIZE

The fastest way to "alkalize" is to carry your alkalizer with you. That's what thousands do now that genuine Phillips' comes in tiny, peppermint flavored tablets — in a flat tin for pocket or purse. Then you are always ready.

Use it this way. Take 2 Phillips' tablets — equal in "alkalizing" effect to 2 teaspoonfuls of liquid Phillips' from the bottle. At once you feel "gas," nausea, "overcrowding" from hyper-acidity begin to ease. "Acid headaches," "acid breath," over-acid stomach are corrected at the source. This is the quick way to ease your own distress — avoid offense to others.

Your kidneys are constantly filtering waste matter from the blood stream. But kidneys sometimes lag in their work—do not act as Nature intended—fail to remove impurities that, if retained, may poison the system and upset the whole body machinery.

Symptoms may be nagging backache, persistent headache, attacks of dizziness, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes—a feeling of nervous anxiety and loss of pep and strength.

Other signs of kidney or bladder disorder may be burning, scanty or too frequent urination.

Home Heating Hints

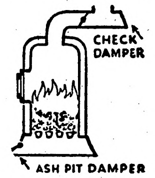
By John Barclay
Heating Expert

Let Ashpit Damper Regulate Daily Speed At Which You Want Fire To Burn.

IMPROPER adjustment of the turn (or smoke pipe) damper in your furnace results in "chimney" loss of heat. Leave this damper closed as nearly as possible without retarding free burning of fuel or causing gas to escape into the basement.

Once you have found the ideal adjustment for it, be sure you leave it in that position throughout the heating season. Do not attempt to use it from day to day to regulate your fire. It was never meant for that purpose. The only time you need move the Turn Damper is at the start of the very cold season and again at the start of the very mild season. These two times are necessary to meet the extreme changes in outdoor temperature.



Use only the Ashpit Damper and Check Damper for regulating the fire daily—to speed up or slow down the rate at which you want the fire to burn. Rely wholly on these two dampers, and you'll get the proper fire regulation. I repeat—do not change the position of the Turn Damper inside the smoke pipe. Otherwise you'll waste a lot of very valuable fuel and heat.

Obstacles Temporary

When you get into a tight place and everything goes against you, till it seems as though you could not hold on a minute longer, never give up then, for that is just the place and time that the tide will turn.—Harriet Beecher Stowe.

WOMEN WHO HOLD THEIR MEN NEVER LET THEM KNOW

NO matter how much your back aches and your nerves scream, your husband, because he is only a man, can never understand why you are so hard to live with one week in every month.

Too often the honeymoon express is wrecked by the nagging tongue of a three-quarter wife. The wise woman never lets her husband know by outward sign that she is a victim of periodic pain.

For three generations one woman has told another how to go "smiling through" with Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. It helps Nature tone up the system, thus lessening the discomforts from the functional disorders which women must endure in the three ordeals of life: 1. Turning from girlhood to womanhood. 2. Preparing for motherhood. 3. Approaching "middle age."

Don't be a three-quarter wife, take LYDIA E. PINKHAM'S VEGETABLE COMPOUND and Go "Smiling Through."

Aerial Preacher Spreads Gospel From Sky

"Sky pilot," a term sometimes used flippantly to describe a minister, is employed in a literal and serious sense when Rev. Al Waer of Whittier, Calif., takes to the air to preach the Four Square Gospel to congregations 1,500 feet beneath him. Waer preaches to throngs on the earth through a loud speaker system installed in the plane. He will also use the plane for gospel sky writing.

Fashion's Triple-Threat

HERE'S something new in the way of triple-threats, Milady: This trio of smart contestants in the thrilling game of Sew-Your-Own! With all three in your wardrobe you'll know stadium style, classroom coquetry, and sorority chic. Best of all, you won't spend a king's ransom nor a "long stretch" in their making, thanks to the economy and simplicity of these modern Sew-Your-Owns!

Sorority Chic.

Sorority chic begins and ends in the boudoirs on the third floor. This highly tasteful smock (above left) is a sorority requirement of the first order. You may choose either the short length to work in or the long length to be lazy in. Use percale, gingham or silk print.

Classroom Coquetry.

What if your knowledge of bugs or battles, or what have you, is limited? You can count on a certain coquettish smile and a certain smooth-lined frock (above center) to take you through any inquisition. Try your version in dull crepe or sheer wool.

Stadium Style.

Big moments come fast and furious when you're rooting for dear old Alma Mater, but you have to look the part to be one with that glamour and fun. Sew-Your-Own suggests its newest spectator dress just for this purpose—that you may look the part, feel the part and be on the winning side, no matter when or where the competition takes place.

The Patterns.

Pattern 1997 is designed in sizes 14 to 20; 32 to 44 bust. Size 16 requires 3⅝ yards of 35-inch material. In full length 3½ yards (short sleeves).

Pattern 1353 is designed in sizes 36 to 52. Size 38 requires 4⅜ yards of 39-inch material.

Pattern 1357 is designed for sizes 12 to 20 (30 to 40 bust). Size 14 requires 2½ yards of 54-inch material.

Send your order to The Sewing Circle Pattern Dept., Room 1020, 211 W. Wacker Dr., Chicago, Ill. Price of patterns, 15 cents (in coins) each.

New Pattern Book.

Send 15 cents for the Barbara Bell Fall and Winter Pattern Book. Make yourself attractive, practical and becoming clothes, selecting designs from Barbara Bell well-planned, easy-to-make patterns.

WHEREAS The Board of County Commissioners of Marshall County feels that those who must be given relief during the coming winter should also be given an opportunity to work and render service to the County and State for the money that they are to receive, and,

RECREATION HEAD IS NABBED AS FORGER

George Melbye, of Halock, Lodged In County Jail After Attending in Local Meeting

George Melbye, formerly of Ulen but lately of Hallock, was taken into custody by Sheriff Rambeck Friday and has been lodged in the county jail on the charge of forgery. He has been bound over to the district court and has so far failed to furnish bonds for his own release.

Melbye, who has been employed for the past year or more as a recreation official at Hallock about a month ago purchased a suit of cothes from Lieberman's which he paid for by a check, later found to be forged. He used the name Asleson.

While attending the meeting of recreation officers here last week Melbye was identified as the passer of the check and was taken into custody of Sheriff Rambeck.

As it is alleged that this is not the first fracas of this kind for the prisoner he may not be so kindly dealt with. He has a wife and several children.

Harry Engen and H. O. Hanson made a business trip to Bemidji on Wednesday. While there Mr. Engen purchased two 10x12 inch timbers 36 feet long to use for his house moving outfit. Timbers of this size cost about $30.00 apiece laid down at Holt.

Three Cars In Smashup

Several people figured in an automobile accident near Thief River Falls late Saturday afternoon. Ralph Ness from here had stopped his car about two miles north of that city to clear the snow from his windshield when a car driven by Harry Stromland from Strathcona pulled up and stopped behind him as he could not pass on account of oncoming traffic. While these two cars were standing still, Mr. Aase from Gatzke came along and smashed into the Stromland car with such force that it first hit Mr. Ness's car and then went into the ditch.

Mr. Aase had his car damaged quite badly but Mr. Ness reported that his car only got a broken bumper and a hole in the back on the body. The Stromland car was wrecked the most of the three cars in the accident.

Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Hunking and son and daughten of Strathcona were riding with Mr. Stromland and Mrs. Hunking was hurt quite badly as she had a cut in her head and bruises on her face. The other occupants were badly shaken up. Mr. Ness had a close call as he was just stepping out of his car when the Aase car passed him after hitting the Stromland car.

Short Deer Season Opens Saturday

Hundreds of Minnesota nimrods are cleaning their trusty rifles, dusting off their duffle bags, digging their red coats and caps out of moth balls, and in general getting all set for their trek into the north woods for the six short days of deer hunting starting Saturday.

The season opens November 20 and continues to and including November 25, from sunrise to sunset each day, in twelve northern Minnesota counties, and parts of four others.

Open counties are Cook, Lake, St. Louis, Carlton, Pine, Aitkin, Koochinging, Hubbard, Clearwater, Beltrami, Lake of the Woods, and Roseau.

These parts of Kittson and Marshall lying east of the Minneapolis, St. Paul and Sault Ste. Marie railroad, as well as that portion af Cass County north of the north border of Crow Wing County and the northern two tiers of townships in Kanabec is open territory.

Itasca County, in the heart of the deer country, is closed, as are all refuges except the Superior Game refuge, which is open within five miles of all regularly maintained highways, county and township roads.

Harry E. Speakes, Director of Game and Fish, stresses the fact that hunters themselves are responsible for the location of boundary lines. Additional game wardens have been placed in the deer country, to enforce hunting regulations.

A new requirement in the regulations this year is that all deer taken must be removed from the point where taken and brought to their final destination within two days after the close of the season.

Neither is there a confusing fawn regulation this year. The experience last year proved that this regulation resulted in many fawns being killed and left in the woods and mature deer taken in place of them.

Hunters going to the Superior Game refuge open territory to hunt, are warned that all game refuge regulations apply there at all times except during the six days of the season within the area specified. Hence guns must be kept in cases until opening day, and must be encased immediately upon the closing of the season.

Evenson-McMurray Wedding

Built New Skating Rink

G. W. Karvonen, Supt. of the local high school, has supervised the work of having a new skating rink built on the north side of the school house. It was deemed more suitable to have the rink there than near the city power house because of snow. The grove northwest of the school grounds will protect the new rink from blocking up as quick as the old one did.

Mr. Karvonen is also negotiating with Paul Steen at Warren to have a couple of young men here certified under the National Youth Administration to take care of the rink this winter.

Sold Two School Houses

A very large crowd of bidders attended the auction sales on Saturday of the two school houses in the Mud Lake area. The Wilson school house was sold for $85.00 to Sleten Olson of Warren. The equipment of the two schools was sold to other school districts of the county.

Nels M. Engen, county superintendent of schools, conducted the sales and H. O. Hanson attended to the clerking.

Highlights of F. R. Message

Congress covened at Washington on Monday in special session to rush legislation to halt Industrial Decline, Crop Control and Wage-Hour regulations.

Following are highlights of the Roosevelts message sent to the Congress:

Since your adjournment in August there has been a marked recession in industrial production and industrial purchases following a fairly steady advance for more than four years.

If the people are as willing as government to use the economic knowledge gained in recent years, this recession need go no further.

We should give special consideration to lightening inequitable burdens of the enterprise of the small businessmen of the nation.

We need legislation which will not only prevent the farm surpluses from causing new collapse in farm prices, but which will also safeguard farmers and consumers against the hazards of crop failure.

I believe that the courts themselves are coming to have increasing regard for the true nature of the constitution as a broad charter of Democratic government which can function under the conditions of today.

Men Who Do

When I look at history I see it as man's attempt to solve the practical problem of living. The men who did most to solve it were not those who thought about it or talked about it or impressed their contemporaries, but those who silently and efficiently got on with their work.—J. B. S. Haldane.

HOW OFTEN CAN YOU KISS AND MAKE UP?

FEW husbands can understand why a wife should turn from a pleasant companion into a shrew for one whole week in every month.

You can say "I'm sorry" and kiss and make up easier before marriage than after. If you're wise and if you want to hold your husband, you won't be a three-quarter wife.

For three generations one woman has told another how to go "smiling through" with Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. It helps Nature tone up the system, thus lessening the discomforts from the functional disorders which women must endure in the three ordeals of life: 1. Turning from girlhood to womanhood. 2. Preparing for motherhood. 3. Approaching "middle age."

Don't be a three-quarter wife, take LYDIA E. PINKHAM'S VEGETABLE COMPOUND and Go "Smiling Through."

Sentinels of Health

Don't Neglect Them!

Nature designed the kidneys to do a marvelous job. Their task is to keep the flowing blood stream free of an excess of toxic impurities. The act of living—life itself—is constantly producing waste matter the kidneys must remove from the blood if good health is to endure.

When the kidneys fail to function as Nature intended, there is retention of waste that may cause body-wide distress. One may suffer nagging backache, persistent headache, attacks of dizziness, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes—feel tired, nervous, all worn out.

Frequent, scanty or burning passages may be further evidence of kidney or bladder disturbance.

The recognized and proper treatment is a diuretic medicine to help the kidneys get rid of excess poisonous body waste. Use Doan's Pills. They have had more than forty years of public approval. Are endorsed the country over. Insist on Doan's. Sold at all drug stores.

CROP CONTROL MEASURE

Features of the New Bill Prepared for Congress . . . Italy Adheres to Anti-Red Agreement

Edward W. Pickard

SUMMARIZES THE WORLD'S WEEK

© Western Newspaper Union.

"LITTLE FLOWER" WINS

Fiorello La Guardia, who licked Tammany and was re-elected mayor of New York, in a striking pose as he addressed voters.

Farm Measure Ready

VOLUNTARY crop control for wheat, corn, rice and cotton; and compulsory limitation of tobacco production, are provided for in the new farm measure drafted by the house committee on agriculture for action in the extraordinary session of congress.

Secretary Wallace's "ever normal granary" plan is included in the bill. The measure also provides for "tariff equalizing taxes" which would be actually a revival of the processing taxes which the Supreme court declared unconstitutional. These taxes would be applied only to wheat, cotton and rice—3 cents a pound on cotton, 20 cents a bushel on wheat and ½ cent a pound on rice.

The policy of congress is declared to be to maintain "so far as practicable both parity of prices paid to farmers for all agricultural commodities marketed by them for domestic consumption and export and parity income for farmers marketing such commodities."

Benefit payments would be made only to producers taking part in the general program, and would be based on (1) the use of land, (2) changes in the use of land, and (3) the percentage of normal production going into domestic consumption. Also no benefit payment in excess of $10,000 would be paid any one producer.

For the protection of consumers the bill provides that when prices of the respective commodities exceed parity by 10 per cent the secretary of agriculture shall call outstanding commodity loans, thus releasing stored commodities and in this way preventing excessive prices.

Italy Joins Anti-Reds

Joachim VonRibbentrop

MUSSOLINI has given the democratic governments of Europe something else to worry about, for Italy has joined Germany and Japan in their agreement to combat communism, and no one knows how far this alliance will go or just what are its intentions. The three "charter members" of the pact—that status was given Italy—hope that all other fascist minded nations, including Poland, Portugal, Hungary and some of the South American republics, will adhere to the agreement.

Political observers saw the prospect of a world divided into three camps — fascist, communist and democratic.

Emerging as one of the probable chief leaders of this united front is Joachim von Ribbentrop, German ambassador to Great Britain. Hitler sent him to Rome to sign the new pact, and it is expected that the headquarters of the alliance will be in Berlin.

Officials in Rome stated the pact was not directed against any country and said Russia might have all the communism it wants so long as she keeps it at home. But they intimated the military forces of the signatories were ready to back up the agreement. Virginio Gayda, authoritative commentator, said that 2,000,000 tons of warships and 200,000,000 persons are now at the disposal of the anti-communist front.

In Berlin the mouthpiece of the foreign office asserted the pact has the backing of 200,000,000 people "who are not prepared for any political reasons to allow the primary necessity for fighting bolshevism to drop into the background."

There was a belief in European capitals that there were secret military clauses in the agreement, and this suspicion was intensified by the fact that German warships joined Italian warships in target practice off the Italian naval base of Gaeta.

One of the possible implications of the pact which bothers Great Britain is that the three allied nations may make a great clamor for restoration to Germany of her lost colonies.

Hitler, Mussolini and Premier Konoye of Japan exchanged felicitations on the signing of the agreement.

Duke May Come in February

MAYBE the duke and duchess of Windsor will come to the United States after all. It was said in Paris by one of their associates they had decided tentatively to make the trip in February, believing that by that time they could carry out their plan without criticism.

The sudden cancellation of the trip was primarily due to the harsh criticism of organized labor because it was to be managed by Charles E. Bedaux, whose speed-up system is abhorrent to labor. That gentleman promptly withdrew from the tour arrangements and President Green of the A. F. of L. thereupon said American labor would "extend a sincere and cordial welcome to the duke and duchess and co-operate in their proposed investigations."

Should Edward and Wally come over in February, perhaps Mrs. Roosevelt will find it possible to arrange her lecture dates so as to be present at the luncheon the President will give for the visitors.

Our Navy Grows Rapidly

Sec. Swanson

SECRETARY OF THE NAVY CLAUDE A. SWANSON reported to the President that the navy is stronger than at any time since war days and is moving steadily up to the full strength permitted by the treaties abrogated by Japan. It will not go beyond the limitations in those pacts unless other nations do so.

Under its big replacement program the department has under construction two new battleships and has appropriations for 85 other warships. These include three aircraft carriers, one heavy cruiser, nine light cruisers, fifty-five destroyers and seventeen submarines.

Five years ago the total number of under age vessels was 101 of 728,050 tons, with twenty-three vessels of 122,500 tons under construction. Today the navy has 113 vessels of 869,230 tons under age, and eighty-seven vessels of 335,565 tons under construction.

Shanghai Falls to Japs

STUBBORN defense of Shanghai by the Chinese came to an end when the Japanese troops made their way across Soochow creek and occupied the entire city. The defenders retired westward and prepared to block the way of the invaders toward Nanking.

China Won't Negotiate

GEN. CHIANG KAI-SHEK, dictator of China, issued a formal statement opposing direct negotiations with Japan for settlement of the Far Eastern conflict.

He reaffirmed China's determination to continue the struggle until "justice is re-established in this part of the world," and expressed optimism concerning the military situation.

Success of the Brussels conference was endangered by the presence there of Soviet Russia. Japanese circles said they believed Japan was ready to exchange information concerning the conflict in China with signatories of the nine power treaty of 1922, but not with nonsignatories like Russia.

President's Birthday

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT has authorized the use of his fifty-fifth birthday, January 30, for the promotion of the nation-wide fight on infantile paralysis. As in previous years, the day will be celebrated in many cities with balls. This time the funds raised thus will not be handed over to local agencies but will all go to the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis which was created recently by Mr. Roosevelt. The President has approved the appointment of a committee headed by Keith Morgan of New York to arrange for the celebrations.

New Attack on Black

ALBERT LEVITT made a new effort to obtain Justice Hugo L. Black's removal from the Supreme court, shortly before the court itself had opportunity to decide whether to hear another test of Black's eligibility.

Levitt asked President Roosevelt to start quo warranto proceedings against Black. This in effect would require Black to show by what right he held the position.

What Irvin S. Cobb Thinks about

Growing Cannon Fodder.

SANTA MONICA, CALIF.—To produce this crop takes time and planning.

First your veterans must grow past fighting age because those who survive the horrors of one war never willingly enlist for another. Meanwhile be sure the women have been bearing children, since children are the seed corn of your future sowing.

Irvin S. Cobb

As the newer generation grows up dose it on the old reliable P. P. P. formula — parades, pomp, propaganda. Bands and guns and flag-wavings, murderous preachments and manufactured patriotism; they all help to fertilize against the ultimate harvesting.

Befuddle the first-born on dreams of drunken glory. Teach him the neighbor over the way is an enemy who must some day be crushed without mercy. Make him believe his country's destiny demands revenge for old hurts, reprisals for old losses, widened boundaries writ in blood.

And then, in about 20 years, you have a nation ripened for ruin, a race of mothers ready to offer their sons to the slaughter. It's a slow crop, but a sure one, and highly gratifying to professional sword-rattlers and power-mad dictators, to profiteers and financial hijackers.

Let's see, come 1938, it'll be just about 20 years since the last time the world cut its own throat.

Two-Faced Politicians.

SOMEBODY says the type of politician who swaps worthless promises before election for the public's confidence—and its votes—reminds him of Janus. Janus was a god with two faces, and the ancients finally got so they couldn't trust either one of them. But it took them a long time to catch on.

Might I be pardoned for thinking of a homelier simile? I'm thinking of the pack-rat of this western country. The thrifty pack-rat slips with stealthy tread into your camp whilst you slumber and carries off something of value. But he doesn't steal it—nothing like that. He merely exchanges with you, you being asleep at the time. He leaves a dry twig behind and totes off a side of meat. He confiscates one of your boots, but, in return, confers on you a couple of dead cactus stalks. His intentions may be honest, but there is no record showing where a pack-rat ever got the worst of a trade. I figure he's part Scotch.

And the profits resulting from his professional dealings certainly may be likened to the career of many a chronic officeholder now flourishing in our midst.

This Man Dewey.

WHEN the Republicans get out the hound-dawgs to run down their 1940 nominee, they might search in the tall timbers of Manhattan island.

There's a young fellow there, the name being Dewey, and he being kin to the great admiral whose deeds crackled at Manila one May day morning like the lightnings on Mount Sinai. He comes of old Yankee stock. He hails from a debatable state, Michigan; lives in a pivotal state, New York. Still in his mid-thirties, he smashed the foulest, securest nests of labor racketeers and vice racketeers in America.

He married a sweet Texas girl, as southern as they make 'em. Her grand-uncle was Jeff Davis. My daddy was Jeff Davis' relative, too.

And this young Dewey trained for grand opera. Speaking of this charm thing, think of a President who'd wind up his fireside radio chats singing "Home on the Range."

Yes, sir, the G. O. P. might go farther and fare worse.

Nordic Supremacy.

RECENT events bring to mind a little story of some years back when night-riding patriots in an Arkansas county felt called on, as a sacred duty imposed upon all true Caucasians, to put the Black brother in his place; said place, in at least one instance, being a colored cemetery.

Also, there had been a flood of notices to vacate sent through the mail to members of the African race, followed by unpleasant surprise parties did the recipients fail to heed the gentle warning.

So the community was getting more Nordic by the hour and the sound of the Anglo-saxophone was heard oft in the stilly night. That's the scene and the plot. Now for the sketch:

Pelagria Perkins meets Hookworm Hostetter on Main street:

"Hooky," says Pelagria, "effen you wuz to git a letter frum dese here w'ite shirts, whut would you do?"

"Me!" says Hookworm. "Boy, I'd finish readin' it on the train."

Sew-Your-Own always has had a soft spot in its heart for the Lady of the Fireside, she who cooks and bakes and sews and keeps everything right. Today's house frock for her (above left) is as neat and sweet as anyone could wish. The collar in contrast and match, make that difference between this dress and run-of-the-mill. Of course, it's easy to run-match. Of course, it's easy to run-up and practically no trouble at all to launder. Better make two!

A Doll—a Dress.

The little lady in the center, above, knows her heart's in the right place because Mommy put it there. Dolly Dimples is her swell little playmate and her heart's in the right place, too. Ask your Mommy to send for Pattern 1203 and you'll have a great big surprise in store. Yes siree!

Her Heart Unattached.

The Patterns.

Extra! Noah's Ark Found!

BACK in the days of the Klondike gold rush, the few publishers in Alaska, especially those who issued dailies, had great difficulty in getting enough news to fill their papers. At one time the telegraph lines into Dawson were down for two months and the roads were so filled with snow that no mail arrived by dog team for 35 days.

During this period one Dawson publisher called his reporter to him. "Look here, we've simply got to have more news," he said. "Subscriptions are falling off and if you want to stay on my payroll, you'd better get out and grab off a story that will be talked about from the Aurora Borealis to the Southern Cross."

Casey Antonio Moran was the reporter's name and the imagination which he displayed in adding "Antonio" to his name because he "liked the sound of it" extended to his reportorial ability. So the next morning a headline clear across the front page of his boss' paper proclaimed, "Ruins of Noah's Ark Found on Mt. Koyukuk in Yukon Country."

Under that headline was an "exclusive interview" with an Indian chief who told of having been lost in the "Haunted Country" of the Koyukuk and finding on top of a mountain "a house as big as a white man's town built in a big canoe" which had turned to stone. When the reporter took him to a minister's home and showed him a picture of Noah's Ark, the chief declared that it was exactly like the house in the big canoe on the mountain top.

The story caused a sensation when the paper was distributed in Dawson. Although the other two dailies tried to discredit the yarn, many people were enough impressed by the affidavit, furnished by the chief, which was given a prominent place on the front page, to believe it. It was also believed by many people back in the "States" when press association wires carried it to newspapers who printed it and to this day one can hear an occasional reference to the fact that "they discovered Noah's Ark up in Alaska several years ago."

The Camelce

AMONG the correspondents who accompanied the Newton-Jenney exploring expedition in the Black Hills of South Dakota in 1875 was R. B. Davenport of the New York Herald. Davenport was a typical "tenderfoot" and a tireless seeker after information—which some of the packers and guides for the expedition were only too willing to supply!

One day he discovered the skeleton of a huge bull elk and excitedly asked California Joe, the famous scout, what it was. "Well, sir," replied Joe, "I reckon that there must be the bones of one of them camelces I've heerd so much about. You see, a good many year ago the guv'ment decided to use camels for packin' supplies down in the deserts of Arizony. Some of the females escaped and, feelin' sorta lonely, they joined up with a elk herd. It wasn't long before they was matin' with the bull elks and the result was somethin' that was half-camel and half-elk. Dog-gonedest animal I ever seed—well, come to think of it, I never did see one myself but a lot uv fellows I knowed did."

So California Joe went on at great length, giving a minute description of the camelce, as he called it, and within a short time the New York Herald printed an extended account of this new marvel in the animal world which had been discovered out in the Black Hills!

Lirpa Loof

BACK in 1910, a story in the London (Ohio) Times announced that a coffee operator from Brazil, named Senor Lirpa Loof, was a visitor in that city. Moreover it printed a long interview with the distinguished foreigner on the subject of coffee cultivation.

Within a few days rival papers were printing even longer interviews on that subject and one of them told of a company that was being organized by the Brazilian with many local merchants as stockholders. One paper even borrowed a cut, used originally in the Times, to illustrate its story.

While public interest in this subject was at its height, the editor of the Times, H. F. Harrington, later director of the Medill school of journalism at Northwestern university, published a story which caused some of his rival editors considerable embarrassment. He suggested that they reverse the spelling of the name of the distinguished Brazilian. When they—and the public—did so, there it was: "April Fool!"

The London editor had been annoyed by the practice of "news pirating" by his rivals and he took this method of teaching them a much-needed lesson in newspaper ethics.

Famous Hymn

The recent sale of the original manuscript of "Onward, Christian Soldiers," recalls the manner in which that stirring religious hymn came into being.

Some Yorkshire (Eng.) Pupils, years ago, planned to make a Whitsuntide procession to a neighboring church. They asked their young curate, Rev. Sabine Baring Gould, to write them a marching song. He sat down, composed the hymn in a few minutes.

Originally sung to a tune by Joseph Haydn, its music now is that of Sir Arthur Sullivan. He composed the music as the result of a sudden inspiration.—Washington Post.

GROUND GRIP TIRES

WIN First Honors AT TROY · BIG ROCK · LILY LAKE · WHEATLAND PLOWING CONTESTS

Using Firestone Ground Grip Tires, Paul Stiefboldt made the highest score for any one meet, with 92½ points out of 100. He also had the largest number of points for the four contests, 356½ out of a possible 400.

Carl Sboger had the highest average score per contest with 90 out of 100 possible points, using Firestone Ground Grip Tires.

Clarence Sboger won first place in the Young Men's Class in each of the four contests on Firestone Ground Grip Tires.

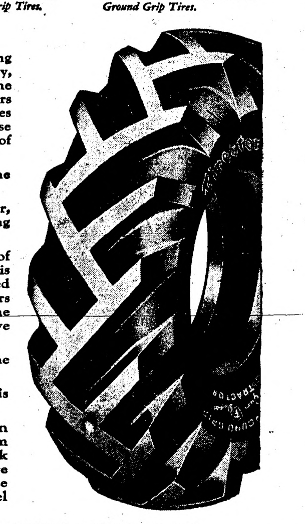
FIRESTONE Ground Grip Tires won sweeping victories this year in the plowing contests at Troy, Lily Lake, Big Rock and Wheatland, Illinois. In the plowing contests, as on the farms, more tractors were equipped with Firestone Ground Grip Tires than all other makes of tires combined. And these all-purpose tractor tires scored 3500¼ points out of a possible total of 4100 for the four contests.



Why do plowing champions choose Firestone Ground Grip Tires? The answer is:

GREATER TRACTION — Takes a deeper, broader bite into the soil. Has positive self-cleaning action.

GREATER STRENGTH — Resists the strain of heavy pulling because every fiber of every cord is saturated with liquid rubber by the patented Firestone Gum-Dipping process. Two extra layers of Gum-Dipped cords under the tread bind the tread and cord body so solidly together that we guarantee they will not separate.

GREATER SAVINGS — Saves 25% in time and up to 50% in fuel over steel-lugged wheels.

GREATER DRAWBAR PULL enables this tire to do more work in a given time.

Specify Firestone Ground Grip Tires when buying a new tractor or any wheeled farm implement. And, for your present equipment, ask your nearest Firestone Implement Dealer, Tire Dealer or Firestone Auto Supply & Service Store about the economical Firestone Cut-Down Wheel Program.

An electric hasn't the romance of a puffing Iron Horse, but there's plenty of horse-power in those shown in this picture. They're used by the Great Northern to cross the Cascade Mountains. These are pulling 5,000 tons of weight—107 loaded cars.

You Get More Than Transportation

Diversification today is accepted as sound farm practice. One of the first to advocate conserving the fertility of the soil, rotation of crops, and raising of more and better livestock was James J. Hill, founder of the Great Northern Railway.

But in those days these ideas weren't so popular. In fact, there was a resolution introduced in the Minnesota Legislature condemning Mr. Hill for preaching a doctrine that would be ruinous to the Northwest.

The Great Northern Railway has never regarded railroading as merely a matter of building railroads and running trains.

From the very beginning one of its most important departments has been the Agricultural Development Department.

This Department, during recent years, has been concerned with such matters as—

- Soil conservation—strip farming in certain parts of the railroad's territory—crop rotation—weed eradication.
- The fight on grasshoppers.
- Rehabilitation of the drought-stricken area—drought relief rates—preserving basic livestock resources—restoring herds of cattle and flocks of sheep.
- Irrigation—fullest utilization of the water resources.
- Finding markets for products grown in the railroad's territory—development of new uses for such products.
- Assisting in experiments with new crops which will increase the Farmers' profits.
- Market roads—bridges.
- Seeking new industries—pay rolls.
- Seeking and locating good settlers on low-priced lands that offer real opportunities.

Furnishing your transportation is only one of the many ways the Great Northern Railway works for you.

Safetygrams

By Fred W. Braun
The Safety Man

In checking a few statistics the other day I learned that fully three-fourths of all motor vehicle fatalities among children occur while the youngsters, for the time being, are innocent little pedestrians.

It seems so little to ask of men that they try just a little bit harder to protect the lives of our little folks; they should make it a rule to drive at all times as if they were expecting a little tot to dart out into the street.

Suppose your own child should dart out suddenly from the sidewald, yard, or playground. If you thought for one minute that he would, you would exert undue safe practices to be sure that your child would not be injured.

It seems to be the unquestionable birth right of every child to be free from accidental injuries. Aren't they worth it?

Two Young Women Died

Mrs. Steve Chwialkowski, bride of a day who was injured when a car carrying the wedding party crashed into a ditch near Strandquist, died in a Warren hospital early Tuesday.

Thus the death toll in the wedding tragedy that involved six persons, has taken two lives. Monday night Ersla Budezwoski the bridesmaid, died. The five others, including the bride, were brought to Warren where the bride died Monday.

Three of the others sustained serious injuries but doctors had hopes on Wednesday that they would recover.

Steve Chwialkowski, the groom suffered a brain concussion. Mrs. Walter Grochowski suffered one broken collarbone, a fracture of the other, several broken ribs and back injuries. Her husband sustained torn neck ligaments. Frank Chwialkowski, best man at the wedding, suffered only slight injuries.

The party was picked up and brought to Warren by A. Bordenkircher and his son Frank of Argyle and Adolph Johnson and Hans Hanson, deer hunters, who were traveling in that district in two cars.

The accident occurred four miles southwest of Strandquist, when the group was nearing the home of the bride's parents. The wedding was solemnized only a short time before at the Catholic church at Florian, a small inland town located east Stephen.

Lucy Wegge of Thief River Falls, Esther Sorum, Mrs. Sam Lorentson, Mrs. George Fricker and children called on Mrs. L. Wegge Friday afternoon.

Farmers Attend Conference

Farmers of the ninth congressional district on Saturday, November 13, discussed the program which their delegates outlined in St. Paul October 4 at a statewide conference called by Governor Elmer A. Benson. The meeting, which was the second in a schedule of seven such meetings held in as many Congressional districts throughout the state, was held in the City Hall at Crookston.

Presenting the program were Commissioner of Agriculture, Charles Ommodt, and M. W. Thatcher, regional manager of the Farmers National Grain Corporation.

Ommodt outlined the general agricultural situation, pointing out the seriousness of the recent break in farm prices and recalling the prediction of the U. S. Department of Agriculture that farm income will be lower in 1938, while Thatcher went into detail concerning the program which the farmers drafted in St. Paul.

Main point in the program is fixing of basic prices on farm commodities, which Thatcher pointed out would give farmers a price they can depend on while delivering a tremendous blow at speculation. "While this program is far advanced over anything tried yet, it is sound and will work", Thatcher said.

Other important points are a surplus pool from which food and fibre would be distributed to the needy, an ever-normal granary and crop insurance, soil conservation, a cut in price spreads, a farm tenancy program refinancing of farm debts, aid to the cooperative movement, aid to catastrophe victims, and cooperation between the farmer, worker and small business man.

Other meetings on the schedule were held at Little Falls, Grand Rapids, Cambridge, Rochester, Mankato and Granite Falls.

RED CROSS OBSERVES NURSING ANNIVERSARY

1937 Marks 25th Year Of Public Health Nursing In Rural Areas

"Prior to inauguration of the Red Cross Town and Country nursing service in 1912, no national effort was made to bring nursing skill to the rural sickbed," James L. Fieser, vice chairman in charge of domestic operations for the American Red Cross, said today in commenting on the silver anniversary of Red Cross public health nursing.

In a plea for an increased membership during the coming Red Cross annual Roll Call held from November 11 to the 25th, Mr. Fieser pointed out that Red Cross rural nursing rounds out 25 years of continuous service this year. "It is essential activities such as this which the American people support through membership," he said.

In 1910 Lillian Wald, then head resident of the Henry Street Settlement in New York City, proposed that the American Red Cross pioneer in the field of rural nursing. Public health nurses were active in urban districts but no similar provision had been made to guard the health of the rural dweller. Miss Wald felt that the Red Cross was best qualified for the undertaking through its long experience in converting humanitarian ideals into practical accomplishment.

Two years later the first Red Cross rural nurse set forth upon her rounds in a county in Massachusetts. Jacob Schiff, member of the Red Cross Board of Incorporators, and Mrs. Whitelaw Reid each contributed funds to start the project. Special courses of training for nurses resulted in young women who thoroughly knew the mechanics of this new job.

By 1918 there were 100 rural nursing services conducted by Red Cross chapters; and 18 months later the number of services had skyrocketed to 2,000, as the signing of the Armistice released a flood of War nurses for peace-time duty.

"Reorganization and consolidation eventually cut the number of public health nurses serving under the Red Cross flag," Mr. Fieser stated. "But as a group their efficiency increased."

Mr. Fieser called attention to a study of Red Cross public health nursing accomplishments since the service was begun. "Statistics show that in all nearly 3,000 services were established by the Red Cross," he said. "During the past 15 years 6,800 public health nurses were assigned to chapters, and a total of 18,000,000 visits were made to or in behalf of patients.

"Each year during the past 11, more than 440,000 rural school children have been found to have physical defects. Each year 189,000 of these children were helped through treatment."

At the present time there are 666 Red Cross public health nurses engaged in health work in rural communities, and last year more than 1,000,000 visits were made on behalf of the sick.

"It has been our purpose from the first," Mr. Fieser emphasized, "to demonstrate that rural nursing was needed and could be organized. In many instances we have turned established community nursing services over to local health authorities. When this was done, we turned our effort toward opening up additional virgin territory."

Other Red Cross services supported by Roll Call memberships are life saving; first aid; disaster relief and the work of organized Red Cross volunteers.

Many Red Cross chapters carry on extensive civilian relief work. During the past year 120,000 needy families received this type of Red Cross help.

A third of a century ago the price of the cheapest automobile was about $5,000. Today a much better car can be bought for around $700. Advertising created demand, demand created mass production, with many times the number of jobs, and mass production improved the quality and reduced the price.

Brazil Quits Crop Control

Washington.—Word comes from Rio de Janeiro that the government of Brazil has decided at long last to place its coffee business again on a competitive basis. That is to say, Brazilian coffee once more will be sold in world market conditions. It was 14 years ago that crop control was started, and now it has flopped finally after costing the growers losses accountable in millions and after virtually wrecking some portions of Brazil's foreign trade.

I think it might be said also that the fallacy of the coffee control policy was among the real causes which eventuated in the dictatorship that established itself in Brazil recently. President Getulio Vargas succeeded in placing himself at the head of the nation "indefinitely" and he did so, he said, because of "unrest among the peoples" of the provinces. The first dictatorship in the Western hemisphere, therefore, is a fact.

But to get to the coffee question: It was the determination of the Brazilian leaders that a policy of scarcity would force coffee prices higher in the world market. The state of Sao Paulo initiated the scheme. It failed to work, and its sponsors said the reason was its scope was limited. Thus, it was expanded until the whole nation was embraced. Still, coffee prices did not go high enough and it was then that actual destruction of coffee began. Millions of tons were dumped into the Atlantic ocean and other millions were burned—even as we in this country burned surplus wheat and corn and killed 6,000,000 pigs.

As the destruction continued and the growers found themselves tied tighter with regulations and decrees, there were some increases in prices. But the promised great profits proved to be as illusory as a mirage on the desert.

The whole thing was a boomerang. Not only were the producers in Brazil disillusioned by failure to gain the record returns they had been led to expect, but they found another sad and wholly disadvantageous result staring them in the face. There was some increase in the price—just enough, indeed, to reduce consumption to some extent—for the growers, but with Brazil reducing available supplies others got into the producing business.

Among these new coffee growing areas, Colombia sprang into prominence. Maybe Colombia coffee was not as good as Brazil's, in quality. Maybe it was not quite as acceptable otherwise. But it was cheaper, and it was profitable for Colombia planters to produce. They found a ready sale.

That, however, was not the worst. When other coffee-using nations bought coffee from Colombia and other growing areas, Colombia was able to buy other commodities from the nations buying her coffee. New trade agreements suddenly showed up; new relationships were established, and some of Brazil's former business connections throughout the world are gone with the wind. They may never be re-established.

We, in the United States, ought to give quite a bit of thought to Brazil's coffee experiment for we have had, and are threatening to have more, experiments of a kindred nature. Lessons in crop control are right expensive, and more important is the fact that sooner or later all through history, they have had to be abandoned. And when I refer to crop control, I include all kinds of production control whether agricultural or industrial. Somebody always has to pay dearly for it and usually the cost has been extended. It is reflected in other commodities and in taxes until the actual loss from the experiment is multiplied many times over.

Political Move

Speaking of congress, the way it has started off makes me think that the extra session was purely a political move. I am quite sure it is going to accomplish some great good like amending the neutrality act. Of course, I suppose I should not be selfish. I ought to consider that the representatives and senators must have time to make speeches for this or that or the other so that their constituencies back home will be duly impressed with their importance. Maybe so! But I repeat that the prospect of anything worth while in either the special session or in the regular session to follow in January is decidedly dull.

Politically, there are several things to watch for in the time that congress will be heave-ho-ing. One of these definitely now visible is the maneuvering among the Democrats to find out whether President Roosevelt really wants to be a candidate for a third term.

I think I am violating no confidence when I say that a good many of the President's real friends at the Capitol would like to know, and know now, whether he is going after a third term. He hasn't told them in a way that is convincing. He made a speech at the "victory dinner" last March 4 in which he said he had an ambition to leave the President's chair and desk with "the nation intact, a nation at peace, a nation prosperous," etc. He said he planned to do that in January, 1941.

That would seem to be clear enough. Yet, it is amazing how many members of the President's party at the Capitol contend that those remarks did not constitute a final withdrawal. They point as well to the fact that other Presidents, after being re-elected for a second term, have come out flat-footed with their announcements and have told their party, in effect, "Go out and get yourselves a new candidate."

How About Third Term?

So, I am making a small prediction. There will be plenty of odd maneuvers, unusual situations, that will appear to "just happen" that way. Their purpose will be to bring about a circumstance wherein President Roosevelt can appropriately tell all of those who have so faithfully stood by him that he is, or is not, a candidate for a third term.

The other phase of congressional activity that will prove interesting links in somewhat with the third term question. It involves the personal political fortunes of the representatives and senators who will seek re-election in 1938. It is easy to see how many Democrats, if they know definitely that President Roosevelt will seek a third term, will want to ride again on the New Deal wagon. It is equally easy to understand how some of them, desirous of observing the tradition that no man shall serve more than two terms as President, may want to take a stand opposing the course if President Roosevelt decides that way.

This condition leads far afield. I am informed, for instance that some senators and representatives who have been back home in conservative sections of the country want to dodge further support of the New Deal. This class obviously is biding its time for something to happen to justify a jump. Announcement by Mr. Roosevelt of intention to be a candidate for the third time would provide the reason. The converse is true, as well, for there are those in the house and senate who have found the President's personal popularity at home as great as ever and they are looking for an excuse to sound off that they believe in the Roosevelt policies 100 per cent and want him to have a third term.

The election results in various parts of the country will have some influence on the attitude of representatives and senators as the session continues. Take the vote in Arkansas, for example. Representative Miller won the senatorship in succession to the late Senator Joe Robinson. His victory was over Governor Bailey, who announced that the New Deal was for him and that his defeat would be a slap at President Roosevelt. It is a fact that New Dealers were pulling for him—but Representative Miller was elected.

That is just a sample. The senators and representatives are going to interpret such elections in the light of sentiment in their own bailiwicks. Undoubtedly, some are going to show more spunk in behalf of the New Deal while others have come back determined to foster their ideas of Democratic principles rather than those of New Deal.

Tribute to Halsey

This date being what it is, I want to record a tribute in these columns, a tribute to a grand public servant who never has sought publicity for himself nor claimed the credit that is due him. For, it was 40 years ago this week that Col. Edwin A. Halsey, of Tye River, Va., entered the employ of the senate. Now, he occupies the post of secretary of the senate, the highest available outside of senate membership.

The senate never convenes but that I am again impressed with the smoothness of the senate organization under "Eddie" Halsey's direction. I truly believe him to be the best informed man at the Capitol on legislative procedure. As his colored messenger once said to me: "Yessah! De cunnel he suah do know his stuff."

And that goes for Colonel Halsey's political acumen, too. He has performed the chores of the Democratic side of the senate to everybody's satisfaction. I suppose some of the senators who like to be regarded as big shots won't care for this exposure, but I have seen them saved from unnumbered mistakes that would have made them the laughing stock of their constituencies. Day after day, in season and out, "Eddie" Halsey has done more for the Democratic senators than they can ever repay. He ought to be called "the Sage of Tye River," as his counsel warrants that description. The state of Virginia could do itself a good turn if it kept "Eddie" Halsey in mind for something higher.

HOW TO SEW

by Ruth Wyeth Spears

Silk Shades Give a Soft Glow

THERE is subtility in the light that glows through a silk shade, and many decorators are using them for the room that needs the softness of plaited folds and the mellowness obtained by placing two tones of fabric one over the other.

Two tones of China silk, one to be used for a plain lining and the other for a gathered outside covering will make an attractive shade. Try samples in daytime and over artificial light. You will also need a roll of silk binding tape matching the top color of the shade. This tape is to wrap the wire frame. And fancy braid either in gold, silver or a harmonizing tone of silk is used to bind the top and bottom of the shade. Use cotton thread to match the outside tone of the silk.

Slip the binding tape off the roll and wrap a rubber band around it as shown here at A. Working from the inside end of the tape wrap the frame as shown at B. The outside layer of silk is put on next. This is gathered both top and bottom and pinned to the wire covering as at C and D so that it is stretched quite tight. Joinings in the outside covering need not be sewed but may be hidden under the folds. This material is sewed in place as at E.

Next, cut a straight strip for the lining and fit it around the outside of the frame as shown here at F. Trim the joining allowing a seam as shown at G. Sew to the frame at the bottom as at H. Trim quite close at the bottom. Turn lining to inside as at I. Slip stitch the joining. Turn in raw edges at top and whip around top of frame. Pin the binding around and then sew it with stitches buried in the mesh of the braid.

TAX REVISION IS COMING

President's Message Outlines Program Designed to Assist Small Business

Looking as if he had just bitten into a sour, very sour, pickle, Norman H. Davis, chief of the American delegation to the nine-power conference in Brussels, is pictured chatting with British foreign minister Anthony Eden (left) and French foreign minister Yvon Delbos (right). The conference has accomplished nothing towards solving the Sino-Japanese tangle.

Edward W. Pickard SUMMARIZES THE WORLD'S WEEK

© Western Newspaper Union.

Extra Session Opens

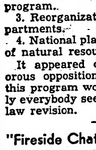
WITH the evident intention of doing what it can to aid business, congress began its extraordinary session. Its first business was to listen to a rather long message from Mr. Roosevelt in which the Chief Executive committed himself to limited tax law revision for the purpose of removing admitted injustices suffered especially by small business and non-speculative investors.



President Roosevelt

Mr. Roosevelt proposed tax "modifications adequate to encourage productive enterprise," but explained that he sought primarily to aid at the expense of individual or partnership undertaking.

The President said exercise of "ordinary prudence" would protect the nation against prolonged business recession.

He reiterated his intention to balance the next fiscal year budget, and demanded that congress find and provide new revenue for any added expenditures authorized now.

The President asked congress to provide:

1. Wages and hours legislation.
2. An "all-weather" crop control program.
3. Reorganization of executive departments.
4. National planning for better use of natural resources.

It appeared certain that a vigorous opposition to all or part of this program would arise, but nearly everybody seemed in favor of tax law revision.

"Fireside Chat"

CALLING on the nation for full co-operation in the taking of the voluntary census of the unemployed, taken by the Post Office department, President Roosevelt in a "fireside chat" by radio said that permanent cure of the unemployment problem lies in finding jobs in industry and agriculture. Nevertheless, he said, it is still the policy of the administration that no one shall starve through lack of government aid.

He gave assurance that the government will try to stimulate private industry enough to enable it to re-absorb the jobless; and after the results of the census are tabulated, a long-range program will be launched. This program, he said, will apply to employers as well as to workers, and in this was perceived a note of encouragement to business.

The President said prosperity of the nation depended upon national purchasing power, and added:

"Our far-sighted industrial leaders now recognize that a very substantial share of corporate earnings must be paid out in wages, or the soil from which these industries grow will soon become impoverished. Our farmers recognize that their largest customers are the workers for wages, and that farm markets cannot be maintained except through widespread purchasing power."

Mr. Roosevelt emphasized that America will not try to solve the employment problem by a huge armament program, as other nations are doing.

Here's Wallace's Program

SECRETARY WALLACE offered a program which he said would "promote security for both farmers and consumers" in his annual report to the President. To finance it he recommended a moderate processing tax on cotton only. Crop control when necessary, and the "ever normal granary" are parts of his plan.

These are the six points of the program which Wallace said would harmonize with the general welfare:

1. Farmers should have a share in the national income to re-establish the prewar ratio of the average farmer's purchasing power to that of the average non-farmer.
2. The people who live on the land must have security of tenure, either as owners of land or renters on a long-time basis.
3. The soil must be used properly and conserved for future farmers and future city dwellers.
4. Farmers through sound co-operatives must come into control of those marketing, processing, purchasing and service functions which they can manage efficiently.
5. Family sized farms should be favored by federal programs, benefit payments and other such aids to rural income.
6. Federal and state funds should continue to be spent to promote agricultural research and farm efficiency.

Leaving It Up to Uncle Sam

UNLESS congress changes the neutrality act, it is probable the nations that signed and adhered to the nine-power Pacific treaty will take no positive action against Japan for violating that pact. The delegates to the Brussels conference, with the exception of Italy, voted to censure the Japanese for making war on China, and then adjourned to get further instructions from their governments.

N. H. Davis

Great Britain and France agreed to join in any effort "short of war" which the United States may decide should be made, this meaning economic sanctions against Japan. But the isolationist policy of this country would have to be abandoned if such sanctions were to be of any avail.

A long document was submitted to the conference by China asking that the war be ended by the infliction of penalties against Japan. The memorandum gave statistical tables that showed economic sanctions could halt Japan because of that nation's dependence on foreign markets and foreign sources of supply.

Norman H. Davis, chief American delegate, in addressing the conference, was rather conciliatory toward Japan, but he said:

"The question in its final analysis, is whether international relations shall be determined by arbitrary force or by law and respect for international treaties. In fact, that seems to be the greatest issue facing the world today, and one of the most momentous problems that mankind has been called on to solve."

Plot to Kill Stalin?

FROM foreign diplomats stationed in Moscow came reports that a plot by German agents to assassinate Dictator Stalin of Russia had been uncovered, and that it might compromise Maxim Litvinov, foreign commissar, who left the Brussels conference suddenly and apparently seriously worried. Investigations by the G. P. U. already have resulted in the recall or disappearance of many leading Russian diplomats. The German consul general in Leningrad was ordered to leave the country immediately. It is believed two German agents arrested some weeks ago confessed the conspiracy to murder Stalin and involve the country in a civil war.

Constipated? Don't Let Gas, Nerve Pressure Keep You Miserable

When you are constipated two things happen. FIRST: Wastes swell up the bowels and press on nerves in the digestive tract. This nerve pressure causes headaches, a dull, lazy feeling, bilious spells, loss of appetite and dizziness. SECOND: Partly digested food starts to decay forming GAS, bringing on sour stomach (acid indigestion), and heartburn, bloating you up until you sometimes gasp for breath.

Then you spend many miserable days. You can't eat. You can't sleep. Your stomach is sour. You feel tired out, grouchy and miserable.

To get the complete relief you seek you must do TWO things. 1. You must relieve the GAS. 2. You must clear the bowels and GET THAT PRESSURE OFF THE NERVES. As soon as offending wastes are washed out you feel marvelously refreshed, blues vanish, the world looks bright again.

There is only one product on the market that gives you the DOUBLE ACTION you need. It is ADLERIKA. This efficient carminative cathartic relieves that awful GAS at once. It often removes bowel congestion in half an hour. No waiting for overnight relief. Adlerika acts on the stomach and both bowels. Ordinary laxatives act on the lower bowel only.

Adlerika has been recommended by many doctors and druggists for 35 years. No griping, no after effects. Just QUICK results. Try Adlerika today. You'll say you have never used such an efficient intestinal cleanser.

Burning, scanty or too frequent urination may be a warning of some kidney or bladder disturbance.

You may suffer nagging backache, persistent headache, attacks of dizziness, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes—feel weak, nervous, all played out.

In such cases it is better to rely on a medicine that has won country-wide acclaim than on something less favorably known. Use Doan's Pills. A multitude of grateful people recommend Doan's. Ask your neighbor!

What Irvin S. Cobb Thinks about

The Law's Injustice.

SANTA MONICA, CALIF.—Had it happened in another country, we'd say, "What curious ideas foreigners have of law enforcement."

A footpad with an evil record held up a victim. A bystander saw the crime, identified the thief.

Irvin S. Cobb

The ruffian was held under indictment. But he could give bond. The spectator was "detained" as a material witness—a gentle way of saying he was locked up, exactly as though he had been the criminal. Well, he was guilty of being poor.

Six months later came the trial. The defendant, having been out all that time on bail, looked hale and hearty. The prosecution's witness was produced under guard, pale and sickly from close confinement. It didn't help his health any when the crook's attorney browbeat him, yelled at him, practically accused him of perjury.

The citizen sued the state for false imprisonment, for loss of wages, for separation from his family, for all he'd suffered. Under the statutes he had no standing. They threw his case out.

Meanwhile, the convicted crook had been released by the parole board and was free as a bird.

Aquatic Novelties.

INTERESTING discoveries were made in Hawaiian waters by government ichthyologists. For fear the similarity of sound may lead to wrong impressions, let me state that this department has nothing to do with Secretary Ickes, although, since ichthyology pertains to fish, Mme. Secretary Perkins might possibly have a contrary view on this point. Because they do say there are moments in the cabinet when all is not sweetness and accord.

However, the point is that Uncle Sam's piscatorial sharps dredged up a fish that is most delectable for six months of the year, but poisonous the other six months. So at least they've found a creature emblematic of the California climate.

Let this be regarded around here as treason, I will state that I'm as loyal a native stepson as any that ever came out of Iowa, having been here long enough now to join in passing resolutions endorsing the scenery and at intervals uttering three loud ringing cheers for the sunsets.

Also let envious Florida refrain from gloating. To typify Florida's climate that fish would be good only four months of the year and powerfully hard to put up with the rest of the time.

Lecturing Adventures.

IN ALABAMA is a sect which forbids its converts to laugh or even smile. Now I know who it was bought out the house when I delivered a humorous lecture down there.

The other day a chap asked me why I didn't go back on the lecture platform. I told him I'd appeared in practically ever sizable town in America, and, though it was years ago and probably popular indignation had abated now, still I wasn't taking any chances—I was waiting for some new towns to be built.

Once I tried the experimemt of slipping around to the front door to hear what the crowd said, coming out. That was the night I attempted suicide by gas, but was saved when someone, passing through the hotel corridor, smelled something that smelled even worse than the hotel smelled.

A lecturer's lot is not a happy one. But usually it's the audience that suffers most.

Eating Oysters.

THERE'S a brand-new movement called eat-oysters-in-any-month-you-please movement, or, unless you're working on space rates, it may be called E. O. I. A. M. Y. P. M., for short. Its sponsor says the prejudice against eating oysters in months having an "r" in them is a fallacy dating back 2,000 years when, between hiccoughs, a Roman senator said: "Oysters should be eaten only in certain seasons."

So it appears we've been penalizing ourselves ever since then for the indigestion of a Roman senator, although, so far as eating the California oyster is concerned—he runs around forty to the dozen—I personally could refrain for the whole year without any undue longings. The California oyster looks something like a brass overall button suffering from vertigris.

Still, maybe it's all for the best. Because during May, June, July and August is when the oyster does practically all his courting. There's little enough romance left in the world—and anyhow, who am I to come between an oyster and his love-life? He doesn't seem to have any too much fun the rest of the time.

Safe Counsel: Use Chains For Bad Weather Driving

SAFE counsel for bad driving weather, according to police officials and safety engineers, is to use tire chains.

This warning was issued today, with winter driving conditions prevailing, after the report of the National Safety council that 28,140 persons died in traffic accidents during the first nine months of 1937, an increase of 9 per cent over the same period last year. With greater driving danger in winter because of ice and snow, police officials and safety engineers warned that tire chains provide the most positive anti-skid and traction yet developed.

The Contest board of the American Automobile association, in official test No. 3143, conclusively proved the greater margin of safety and stopping ability provided by Weed tire chains. Vividly illustrating their imperative necessity on snow or ice, the AAA test showed that chains, on rear wheels only, stopped a car in 45.8 per cent less distance than when no chains were used, and in 66.8 per cent less distance where chains were used on all four wheels!

Overdone Politeness

From early childhood, the Chinese are taught so thoroughly to mind their own business that they rarely render assistance when a person is drowning, a house is burning or a store is being robbed. In fact, purse-snatching in broad daylight is a common occurrence on the streets of Chinese cities because thieves are fairly certain that no one will interfere.—Collier's Weekly.

IT'S GREAT TO BE BACK AT WORK when you've found a way to ease the pains of RHEUMATISM and do it the inexpensive way, too.

You can pay as high as you want for remedies claimed to relieve the pain of Rheumatism, Neuritis, Sciatica, etc. But the medicine so many doctors generally approve—the one used by thousands of families daily — is Bayer Aspirin — 15¢ a dozen tablets — about 1¢ apiece.

Simply take 2 Bayer Aspirin tablets with a half glass of water. Repeat, if necessary, according to directions.

Usually this will ease such pain in a remarkably short time.

For quick relief from such pain which exhausts you and keeps you awake at night — ask for genuine Bayer Aspirin.

IN THE WAKE OF FLOOD

This scene was enacted many times in refugee centers established by the Red Cross during the Ohio-Mississippi Valley flood. Inevitably floods bring the danger of disease as drinking sources become contaminated and large groups of people are thrown together. The medical-health service of the Red Cross serves thousands each year, and is maintained by membership funds contributed to the organization at the time of its annual Roll Call from Armistice Day to Thanksgiving.

You Get More Than Transportation

Diversification today is accepted as sound farm practice. One of the first to advocate conserving the fertility of the soil, rotation of crops, and raising of more and better livestock was James J. Hill, founder of the Great Northern Railway.

But in those days these ideas weren't so popular. In fact, there was a resolution introduced in the Minnesota Legislature condemning Mr. Hill for preaching a doctrine that would be ruinous to the Northwest.

The Great Northern Railway has never regarded railroading as merely a matter of building railroads and running trains.

From the very beginning one of its most important departments has been the Agricultural Development Department.

This Department, during recent years, has been concerned with such matters as—

- Soil conservation—strip farming in certain parts of the railroad's territory—crop rotation—weed eradication.
- The fight on grasshoppers.
- Rehabilitation of the drought-stricken area—drought relief rates—preserving basic livestock resources—restoring herds of cattle and flocks of sheep.
- Irrigation—fullest utilization of the water resources.
- Finding markets for products grown in the railroad's territory—development of new uses for such products.
- Assisting in experiments with new crops which will increase the Farmers' profits.
- Market roads—bridges.
- Seeking new industries—pay rolls.
- Seeking and locating good settlers on low-priced lands that offer real opportunities.

Furnishing your transportation is only one of the many ways the Great Northern Railway works for you.

Thousand Dollar Check

By BERYL PIERCE PASCHALL

© McClure Newspaper Syndicate. WNU Service.

PAN yanked viciously at the fluffy mass of dresses. Her amethyst chiffon velvet evening gown gave an expensively subdued rip. Because that particular dress was one Peter liked, Pan gave it another, more spiteful yank. . . . Dresses and hangers tumbled into her arms. With fine disregard for order, she shoved several gowns into the huge suitcase, already bursting at the seams.

Pan stretched her aching arms and surveyed the stripped room. Even with the yellow ruffled drapes and spread of heavy taffeta, the place looked ravaged. Pan's heart misgave her. To bolster her courage she took another look at the check she had found in Peter's coat pocket half an hour earlier.

It was a pretty big check even for Peter to write. It was, moreover, made out to the one woman who could cause Pan to forget she had a sense of humor. When a man six foot two like Peter, and has an engaging grin topped by brown curly hair—women were always mussing Peter's hair. They would even poke their pink tipped fingers into the deep dimples in his cheeks. As long as these advances bored Peter, he and Pan would laugh at them together. But when Lisa Andrews draped herself above the baby grand where Peter was practicing new numbers for his next broadcast, Peter refused to laugh.

Pan had said, "Peter, wasn't she a scream? When she watched you so soulfully while you sang, honestly, I just wished for a hatpin," and Peter had answered, with offended dignity, "Must you make fun of some one who understands and appreciates my music?"

Pan had been puzzled. Could this be her merry frollicking Peter—husband of eleven months and four days?

She looked again at Peter's big, bold writing. ONE THOUSAND DOLLARS. Lisa had endorsed it in her thin spidery script. So it was as bad as that.

"Oh, it's you, Peter." Pan continued to study the check. "You see, I happened to find this. No—" she held up a silencing hand—"Don't try to explain it. There's no necessity. I'm leaving, as you can see. I'm going to Mother's for a while, till I get over this terrible affair. Then I'm going to New York. But you can't marry Lisa Andrews, Peter, because I won't divorce you. And you can't divorce me for quite a while on desertion grounds. Of course you might trump up other grounds. But I'll fight them—not that I love you any more, Peter, but I won't let that red-headed bean-pole have you too easily."

Pan finished her oration with her nose in the air. It was really too bad Peter didn't see that snub-nosed insult. But the next minute new worries assailed her. Suppose she couldn't get a job in New York? Suppose she had to go back to her folks after all, back to Winterset, with its stodgy entertainments?

* * * * * * * *

The wife of an artist like Peter, thought Pan suddenly, should really overlook a lot of things, even (although she choked) a thousand-dollar check to an attractive divorcee. Pan's nobleness almost overwhelmed her for a moment. She must put the check back. Then she remembered. She had sent the suit to the cleaners. She had been emptying the pockets when she had found the check. Well, she could destroy the check, shut her eyes to the whole affair, and perhaps after a while Peter would regain his senses.

Resolutely she opened her handbag, extracted the silver cigarette lighter which Peter had given her when she had tried to be sophisticated and learn to smoke. The flame spurted to a blue point—and the door burst open. It was Peter.

"Caught you that time, lady love," laughed Peter, whirling her till she was dizzy and breathless. And then he saw the check.

"Oh," said Peter blankly, "so now you know."

"Yes," Pan agreed starkly. "Now I know. . . ." Tears blinded her. She couldn'a stay with Peter now that he knew she had discovered his dereliction.

Peter said wryly, "Might know I couldn't keep a secret from you. Well, how soon can you be ready to move?"

So he, too, realized that she must go. "Right away." The words came haltingly, muffled by the lump in her throat. She moved from the circle of Peter's arms, slammed the suitcase lid. Peter caught her in a bearlike embrace. "Don't you think it's a grand place to bring up a family?"

Pan squirmed unsuccessfully. "What place?"

"Why," Peter's voice was puzzled, "Lisa's place. You've wanted it so long. Now that I've made the down payment on it, how soon can we be ready to hold a housewarming? Lisa is getting out immediately, going to Denver to re-marry her ex."

For the firsts time Peter noticed the packed bag, the bare room.

"Why, Pan," he faltered, "you didn't think—Pan!"

"Heavens, no," laughed Pan. "Don't be melodramatic. I was merely going to run up to mother's for a week. But I think I'll stay home, now, and get ready for that housewarming."

CHRISTMAS TREES HARVEST MILLION DOLLAR INDUSTRY

Two and a half million Minnesota Christmas trees will carry the holiday festive spirit to homes in every state in the nation and several foreign countries as well. This is the approximate annual harvest in the state's million dollar industry that includes over a thousand operators, large and small, from the settler selling a few dozen trees, to the large operators handling tens of thousands.

One Duluth operator alone shipped trees last year to 46 states, as well as to several foreign countries. Cold storage and processing plants have been in operation since mid-September, while small operators waited for cold weather before cutting trees. This activity continues until the holidays.

All trees sold in Minnesota, whether they originate in the state or not, must carry the Conservation Department tag. Any trees sold without this tag are "bootleg" and the seller is liable to arrest and prosecution under the state Christmas tree law. The money derived from the sale of these two cent tags is used to supervise cutting operations according to good forestry practice, and serves to prevent a flooded market, with the resultant waste.

One requirement of the law is that the legal description of the land on which trees are cut must be reported to the Conservation Department, thereby protecting both the state and private lands against the raids of tree thieves and bootleg cutters. The report must show that the cutter has the owner's permission to cut trees, and that the land is not tax delinquent.

Permits to cut trees on state and tax delinquent lands are handled by the Forestry Division of the Conservation Department in the same manner as regular timber sales.

The March Of Minnesota

One of the most unusual program ideas in the history of radio will be launched next Sunday, December 5, in a new series of programs, "The March of Minnesota".

In the interests of developing a better understanding and through that understanding a better well-being of the people of Minnesota, the state's business and industries are cooperating in presenting the story of Minnesota to its citizens.

With radio talent rivaling that of the largest network programs "The March of Minnesota" will be inaugurated next Sunday. In a series of 26 broadcasts, the interest stories of Minnesota's early days will be dramatized. The musical portion of the programs will feature eighty-five members of the Minneapolis Symphony under the direction of Daniele Amfitheatrof.

Presented over WCCO, Minneapolis; KDAL, Duluth; WMFG, Hibbing; WHIB, Virginia; and KROC, Rochester, "The March of Minnesota" will be heard from 6:30 to 7:30 each Sunday Sunday evening.

Special musical backgrounds are being arranged for the dramatic presentations as well as a new march, composed by Amfitheatrof, which has the same title as the broadcasts, "The March of Minnesota"

During each program, a special radio hookup will be made at some Minnesota city and several people from different localities will be interviewed by Cedric Adams. During the interviews citizens of Minnesota in all walks of life will discuss their part in making the state a pleasant place in which to live.

"The March of Minnesota" broadcasts in preseling the Cavalcade of the state, will point out how all business and all people, whether farmers, factory workers, miners, railroad men, clerks, or housewives, are dependent upon each other for the future success of Minnesota.

CAPITAL NEWS REVIEW

The Minnesota railroad and warehouse commission is protesting any further increase in freight rates on farm products such as grain, flax seed, hay and other stock feeds, and all livestock and dairy products at a hearing of the Interstate Commerce Commission that opened November 29 in Washington, D. C.

Harold Atwood, state railroad and warehouse commissioner; Harry Oehler, assistant attorney general; and Otto A. Radke, commission rate expert, are presenting the case for the state before the ICC. The railroads of the United States on October 19 had been granted rate increases of approximately $50,000,000. That rate became effective November 15 on interstate traffic. On October 29 the Minnesota lines applied to the state railroad and warehouse commission for similar increases within the state of Minnesota. The state commission had a hearing on their application November 22 and now has the case under advisement.

Then the railroads again nationally petitioned the ICC on November 5 for further rate increases of approximatelly 15 per cent, and it is on this petition that the present hearing is concerned. The state body is opposing the increase as far as agricultural is concerned because "records of the Minnesota commission show that compared with other classes of traffic, the rates on farm products are too high," according to Commissioner Atwood.

Mr. and Mrs. Willie Larson returned last week from a weeks visit with relatives forty miles north of Fort Francis, Ontario, Canada. Mr. Larson reported that the country up there was not in the best of financial condition.

NATIONAL PRESS BLDG. WASHINGTON, D. C.

Congress Is Balky

Washington.—"The best laid plans of mice and men" will go off at a tangent, it seems, even when one political party is numerically in supreme control of the national government. President Roosevelt called congress into extra session with very definite objectives outlined, and he repeated them in his regular message on the state of the Union. He wanted crop control legislation for relief of agriculture and he wanted wages and hours controlled by federal statute for the relief of labor. But congress, or a part of it, has turned out to be a balky mule. It has one foot out of the traces already and the driver is having a lot of trouble to keep the animal hitched.

The above is by way of saying that scores of Democratic members of the house and many senators with seats on the majority side have come back from a summer on the hustings quite convinced that it is not popular with the voters to be a rubber stamp. I do not mean by that statement that the President has lost control of his party machinery, or that he can not crack the whip and get things done; I mean that instead of having a few recalcitrants within his own party to deal with, he now has many, and members of congress are about like coyotes — their courage increases as their number increases.

It might be mentioned in passing that at least half a dozen Democratic members of the house have come back from home with plans to run for their party's nomination to the senate next year. The reason given by those with whom I have talked is almost the same in each instance. The incumbent senator who is up for re-election has been too much of a New Dealer. "Our people are calling for something besides rubber stamps." These potential senatorial candidates have records showing opposition to the President in some vitally important New Deal policies while supporting him whole-heartedly in other phases of his program.

No one can say how far this movement will get, but anyone who has observed congresses perform in other cases where the President was in his second term can not dismiss the circumstance as without significance. It is the usual practice for sitting members of the house and senate to stick close to the President, as party leader, in his first term—because they must seek re-election with his support. But now many of them regard President Roosevelt as through and they are starting early to make their record look good to the voters whom they will canvass next year.

These few paragraphs above must serve to introduce evidence of a much deeper fact. In many important places and among many powerful or influential men in congress one hears frequent references and observations to this effect: If Mr. Roosevelt is going to retain his control of the party and carry through on the propositions which he will make from time to time, he must cast aside a part, at least, of his radical advisers and the schemes they concoct.

Different Now

As I related, the President outlined his objectives for the special session. Two or three years ago, they would have been received by the representatives and senators with loud acclaim, with ballyhoo. But in the first few weeks of the extra session, there has been just as much condemnation as there has been approval.

Nor can we overlook another phase of the situation. Not only have many of the men at the capitol declined to affirm the President's propositions; they have gone in the other direction. They have offered programs of their own. They are prepared to battle for them. In politics, that sort of a thing often has proved fatal to the plans of the man who then occupied the White House. It may not turn out that way this time but there are many observers are sure the President is going to be forced into accepting some things he did not want or does not want just now.

Take the question of taxes, for instance. Rightly or wrongly, the President is being blamed for the current business depression and criticism of this sort is rolling up like a snowball going down hill. It is being said that two tax levies which were forced through congress are largely responsible. The tax on undivided profits of corporations and the capital gains tax are used as horrible examples of these unsound policies fostered by Mr. Roosevelt. Well, the President is responsible to the extent that he approved of them. They were the product, however, of some of the dozen or so peek-a-boo artists to whom the President frequently has listened as advisors.

I think it has been generally demonstrated that the two taxes in question have been ruinous, especially to the small business. It is equally true, I believe, that business must be given some consideration if it ever is to get on a sound basis again and that it ought to share attention of legislators with labor leaders even though business has fewer votes. In any event, the burdens which the New Deal admittedly has placed on business are serving as the springboard for a part of the Democratic majority. They can properly fight for these things—and easily be too busy to push the President's program through.

So the President's plans have gone astray. They may remain that way, or they may go even further, depending upon how long the backward slide of business continues. Of one thing, you may be sure. Partly through his own fault and partly through the fault of the type of advisors with which he has surrounded himself, Mr. Roosevelt does not have the confidence of as many members of the legislative branch as he formerly held.

Looking Forward

It is a little early to attempt a report on prospects for the regular session of congress that convenes in January. Yet, since it is quite evident there will be nothing in the current extra session beyond crop control legislation—if even that—I believe we might look forward a bit. One of the things now evident is the position congress will take on relief for destitute and unemployed. I believe I see a battle coming in that direction.

It has been apparent during the last two years that congress was dissatisfied with the relief system built up by Secretary Ickes and the professional reliever, Harry Hopkins, works progress administrator. The requirements, especially for the Hopkins machine, have been met with what has come to be called "blank check" appropriations. That is, congress has passed a bill appropriating two billions or three billions or whatever was thought necessary by Mr. Hopkins. It was just as simple as that. Congress had no strings on the money, seldom was told a great deal of the details. It was money to feed and clothe the destitute.

Now, however, some observers think they detect a change. They believe they see signs that congress will put an end to the "blank check" method of handling relief. As far as anyone knows now, the President again will ask for a huge sum to be distributed for relief through Mr. Hopkins—and that is when the battle lines will form.

Money for Relief

Congress, therefore, will be faced again with appropriation demands to provide food and clothing and likely the request for the funds will come from Mr. Roosevelt as heretofore—for a lump sum. If the number favoring the dole grows to any considerable extent, there may be a reversal of policy whether the President wants it that way or not. You see, in an election year (and all house members and 30-odd senators face election canvasses again next year) it is nice to be able to say to the voters that they are receiving something at the hands of their representative or their senator. The candidates can justify a break with the President easily, and with business sliding backward as is the case now, there will be plenty of relief needed for unemployed again. The voters can be told that they are being given charge of these relief expenditures and that they no longer will have to watch Washington bureaucrats waste the taxpayers money. On the horizon, therefore, it is possible to see the line of cleavage between the New Deal and the old line Democrats leading to elimination of the dangerous lump-sum appropriation and a restoration of relief ministration into the hands of local authorities.

There is one further consideration in the general relief situation that attracts attention. I think it is reasonable to assume that the far-flung relief machine which Mr. Hopkins has built up is permeated to the core with political appointments. It is only the usual political procedure and is not confied to the present national administration. Assuming, therefore, that there is such a political machine, it is hardly open to question that it is a Roosevelt machine. The picture then becomes clear: since numerous members of the house and senate want to control their own political destinies, they want control of the organizations for relief in their own jurisdictions. Further, if Mr. Roosevelt should want to seek a third term nomination, those Democrats who want to oppose him would be quite powerless if they had to sit idly by and witness Roosevelt delegates picked from their own stronghold.

Christmas at the Homestead

by Agnes Myers

"THE doorbell, Amanda! It may be the man with the hobby-horse," cried Natalie Parker, as she gathered up a confused heap of Christmas ribbons and gay colored wrappings strewn about the sitting room.

There was a sound of quick stamping and crunching of boots on the scraper. The old servant opened the front door and a man set an enormous package in the hall, said something about the blustering snowstorm and was gone.

As the woman carried the package in to Natalie, a chirpy sound of funny little tinkling music issued from the bulky bundle. Her black eyes snapped with delight as she cut the heavy cords.

Out tumbled a hobbyhorse, a handsome fellow with a leather bridle; a white, woolly lamb with button eyes and a bell on his neck; a long-eared rabbit with a perky tail; and a queer little whimsical top that seemed to laugh with merry music every time it was moved. There was a wispy angora cap, just big enough for a baby, and a tiny white muff, oh, so little, of real fur with a tippet to match.

Amanda gasped! "All 'em Chrismas gifs! No one cep'in you, Mis Natly, would ever think of sech things! I jes hopes 'em Harlow chillun 'preciates the—the—" but her voice wavered. The sleeve of her alpaca frock brushed across tear dimmed eyes as she picked up the crumpled brown wrappings and fled from the room.

Early next morning Natalie settled back in a train for a five-hour ride, her heart brimming with happiness.

Many changes had come over the young girl's life. Edith, her older sister, married Arnold Harlow and lived in Hillsboro. Her house adjoined the lovely old rambling stone homestead where Benjamin Parker, a widower, lived with his daughter Natalie and the faithful Amanda. When Mr. Parker passed away Natalie closed the house and went to teach kindergarten in Boston. Amanda went with her.

"Why, Natalie Parker!" Exclaimed the Dumfounded Youth.

The train dashed along through a whirling snowstorm. Deep in the tender mood of reminiscent reverie, Natalie fell asleep.

"Hillsboro!—Hillsboro!"

She awakened with a bound. Clutching her grip, a box of barley candy, and almost dragging the cumbersome and unwieldy pack, Natalie, still half asleep, stepped out at the very end of a long frosty platform.

A tall young man in a big fur coat was waving good-by to someone on the train as it pulled out. In his excitement he took a long, free stride backwards on the platform and crashed into Natalie.

The two went down in the drifted snow in a heap. The cord broke on the big bundle. Helter-skelter the multitude of Christmas gifts scattered in every direction.

They looked at each other in blank astonishment—then amazed recognition.

"Why, Natalie Parker!" gasped the dumbfounded youth.

"Bruce Draper!"—exclaimed the bewildered girl, actually spellbound.

From somewhere in the snow came the sound of queer little rippling music. They looked at each other again with wide open eyes, then burst into rollicking laughter.

They gathered up the wayward toys and Bruce loaded them into his car. With the girl beside him, a triumphant smile played over his face, and they talked excitedly as the motor raced over the hills.

"Mother and Aunt Em just left for grandfather's farm and I'm going up tomorrow, but now tell me about yourself, Natalie."

"Bruce, surprises are so much fun. Edith doesn't know I'm coming."

Natalie got a real surprise, however, in a few moments, for no one was home at her sister's house. After repeated ringing and pounding, she looked at Bruce in dismay. Her eyes wandered toward the Parker home.

"Oh, Bruce! I have the keys of the stone house! Let's go over and build a fire; we can at least keep warm until they come."

With logs from Harlow's woodpile Bruce soon had a roaring fire romping on the hearth. They stood before the flames, the girl's blond hair like an aureole of gold framing her face; the man, tall and bronzed, alert and capable.

Bruce Soon Had a Roaring Fire Romping on the Hearth.

"Let's look through the house," suggested Natalie, leading the way.

At the turn on the stairs there was a wonderful beehive window on the landing, and a friendly window-seat. They lifted the lid. Many things were stored in the seat.

"What's this box? Candles!—Christmas candles!" called out Bruce. "Let's light up the windows!"

Back down stairs they dashed and soon the rambling stone house was a glitter of lights. Bruce went over to Harlow's to get some more logs, and returned with the wood and a package.

"Natalie, somebody delivered these holly wreaths at Edith's; I found them at the back door. We'll put them in the windows. Ho, ho!—What's this? Mistletoe, too!"

"Here's a footstool, Bruce; tack it on the hall arch."

With a flutter of ecstacy Natalie looked up smiling, but the firm face of Bruce Draper wore an expression of grave appeal. With a combination of strength and tenderness he took her in his arms.

"Dear Natalie, this mistletoe is a symbol of the plighting of love's troth." His voice trembled.

There was a moment of silence, a moment of mutual confidence and understanding which had been almost instantaneous. Her blond head rested in the hollow of his shoulder. Through the half-closed eyes warm tears gathered—his words clung to her senses like a benediction.

The heavy front door swung open suddenly. There stood Edith, Arnold, little Phillip and Peter—and tiny Marjorie, looking in wonder, as Natalie and Bruce awkwardly stammered and blushed in confusion.

"Well, well," chuckled Arnold, "we saw the lights—we—we thought—er—," and crossing the hall he gripped Bruce firmly with a friendly hand, while Edith kissed her happy-hearted sister.

"Look here, Bruce," said Arnold, "let's make this the reopening of the old homestead and send for Amanda."

What Irvin S. Cobb Thinks about

Sports Broadcasters.

SANTA MONICA, CALIF.—Somebody said that there were always two big sporting events—the one Graham McNamee saw and the one that actually took place.

But, alongside the present sports broadcasters, Graham's wildest flight would sound like the dulcet twitters of a timid love bird as compared with the last ravings of John McCullough.

Irvin S. Cobb

Coaches brag of the lowered percentage of serious football accidents this fall. But oh, think of the radio descriptionists who'll wind up the season suffering from nervous exhaustion, wrecked vocal chords, violent rush of loud words to the mouth, complete collapse, even madness.

You'll be passing the rest cure sanitarium, and, as the windows burst outward, you'll hear pouring forth something like this:

"Oh boy, boy! with one tremendous burst, Irish Goldberg is jamming his way from the red back line right through the black interference! Nothing can stop him!"

But don't get worked up. What you hear is merely a convalescent microphone orator mentioning a checker game between two fellow-inmates and reverting to form.

Virtues in Snakes.

SOMETHING I said recently about the folly of killing every snake on sight, without investigating the snake's character, brought a flock of letters from readers who don't like snakes.

Even a so-called venomous snake may have his better side. In Kansas, in the old local option days, you could get a drink only on a doctor's prescription, excepting in case of dire emergency, such as a snake bite. So every properly run drug store kept a rattlesnake on the premises to serve the citizenry. And the only time a drug store rattler ever refused to bite a thirsty stranger was when he was all worn out from accommodating the regular local trade.

And what though it was a snake that led Eve astray in the garden of Eden? He may have brought sin into the world, but wouldn't we have missed a lot of spicy reading matter in newspapers if he hadn't?

Yep, I plead guilty to thinking an occasional charitable thought for any decimated and vanishing group. I feel that way about old line Republicans and mustache cups and red woolen pulse-warmers.

Political Predictions.

WE TAKE the opportunity to announce that the Literary Digest, or rather its journalistic successor, will not conduct a poll on next year's congressional and state elections. The burnt child dreads the poll.

Let others go around taking straw votes, but, the way the Digest folks feel now and, in fact, have felt ever since last November, they wouldn't start a canvass to prove that two and two make four. Because, look here—what if it should turn out that two and two merely make some more Marx brothers or a double set of Siamese twins?

Anyhow, the business of basing cocksure predictions on half-cocked estimates doesn't seem to be flourishing these days. Figures don't lie, but the citizens who furnish the figures may do so, either unintentionally or just for the sake of a laugh. The rise of candid camerasationalizing—say, we just thought up that word—proves that a photograph of things as they are is mightier than a lot of loose statistics predicated on what the voters may or may not do—and probably won't, when the time comes.

Forgotten Stars.

ONCE interviewers clamored for a hearing and her face was on half the magazine covers and her name in letters of flaming light above all the marquees. Once impressive tycoons catered to her temperamental whims; press agents waited upon her, courtiers attending a queen. Autograph seekers besieged her then, while now only bill collectors desire her signature—and they'd like to have it on a check. Speak of her to the newer generation, and somebody will say, "Who? Spell it, please."

She is all through, all washed up. But, like the deaf husband whose wife has slipped, will be the last person in town to hear the news. Having traveled a road which issues mighty few round-trip tickets, she still dreams of a come-back.

She is the most tragic and the most pitiable figure—and one of the commonest—to be found in this place called Hollywood. She is any one of the host, men and women, who, ten years ago, or even five, were glittering stars in movieland.

U. S.-BRITISH TRADE PACT

Treaty Planned That May Affect International Relations . . . Insistent Demand for Modification of Tax Laws

Trade Treaty with Britain

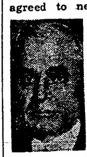
IN WASHINGTON and London it was officially announced that the United States and Great Britain had agreed to negotiate a reciprocal trade treaty, which has been sought by Secretary of State Hull ever since he started his reciprocal program in 1934. The negotiations are expected to begin before the close of the year.



Secretary Hull

American administration officials believe such a pact may lead to a commercial union of all English-speaking peoples and will be a powerful influence in preserving world peace.

London looks upon it as an instrument to form a front which all nations may enter later on conditions of most-favored-nations reciprocity, and therefore as an indirect reply to the new German-Italian-Japanese alliance.

Principles said to be already agreed upon provide that Great Britain would receive reduced American tariffs on textiles and coal.

In return she would grant the United States lower tariffs on foodstuffs, certain raw materials, iron and steel and other essentials of a rearmament program.

Immediate opposition to the proposed pact developed among the statesmen in Washington. Senator James Hamilton Lewis of Illinois, Democratic whip, protested against any British accord until the English pay off their defaulted war debt to the United States. He called the proposed pact "trade treason."

Senator Henry Cabot Lodge, Massachusetts Republican, served notice he would sponsor a resolution halting negotiation of all new trade treaties until congress can determine whether they are responsible for the current business recession.

Representative Allen Treadway, Massachusetts Republican, denounced the proposed treaty as certain to prove disastrous to American business. He warned it would throw "more Americans out of their jobs."

Governors Ask Tax Repeal

GOVERNORS of the six New England states, in conference in Boston, adopted resolutions severely criticizing the tax and tariff policies of the administration. They demanded repeal of the capital gains tax and the tax on undistributed corporate profits, and denounced the pending reciprocal trade agreement with Czechoslovakia as imperiling the jobs of thousands of American citizens.

The governors who took this action were Lewis O. Barrows, Republican, Maine; F. P. Murphy, Republican, New Hampshire; George D. Aiken, Republican, Vermont; Charles F. Hurley, Democrat, Massachusetts; Wilbur L. Cross, Democrat, Connecticut, and Robert E. Quinn, Democrat, Rhode Island.

Plotters Alarm France

FRANCE was in a great dither over an alleged plot of the Cagoulards or "hooded ones," and other rightist groups to overthrow the republican government. The secret police have been making many arrests and have uncovered secret arsenals and depots of the conspirators. Among the men they seized was Jean de la Meuse, wealthy textile manufacturer of Paris. In their pursuit of the plotters the police went as far as Switzerland, persuading the government of that country to oust the count of Paris, who would be heir apparent of the throne of France if there were any longer such an institution. He had been holding conferences with royalists.

After Labor Racketeers

FOR four months Eliot Ness, the young safety director of Cleveland, Ohio, has been investigating labor racketeering in Cleveland, especially in the building trades, and then he made a report of his findings that resulted in a special session of the Cuyahoga county grand jury to hear the stories of scores of business men who allegedly have been terrorized by labor union officials. Ness said these men were prompted to volunteer their information because of the security offered them and the knowledge that many others were prepared to testify.

Eliot Ness

In addition to protests from business men that they were being shaken down, Ness also had numerous complaints from rank and file union men that their leaders had obtained dictatorial control of the unions and had used it for racketeering purposes.

This resulted in hundreds of men being thrown out of work, impeded legitimate business, and kept hundreds of thousands of dollars in new industries out of the city, the Ness report was said to have stated.

At a meeting of the Cleveland Federation of Labor, Don A. Campbell, president of the Painters' District council, who had been mentioned in connection with the investigation, called the entire case "a lot of newspaper propaganda which has been passed around since the labor movement began," and added that "it's high time this stuff was stopped."

Harrison Backs Water

PREVENTED from considering the pending government reorganization measure by a filibuster against the anti-lynching bill, the senate engaged in a lot of talk about tax revision. Pat Harrison, chairman of the senate finance committee, after conferring with Secretary Morgenthau, declared that additional revenue to compensate for modification of the undistributed profits tax could be raised only by broadening the income tax base or by a general manufacturers' sales tax.

Senator Harrison

Mention of a sales tax aroused Senator Borah and others, and the Idahoan prodded Harrison until he backed down and said he did not quite mean what he had said.

"If, in the revision of the tax laws, we should lose some revenue, I do not believe, with the spending program that is now going on, that we would help business," Harrison told the senate. "I think the goal should be to try to balance the budget at the first opportunity. I believe the wise way to do it is to curtail some of the emergency expenditures."

Harrison proposed a return to the old normal income tax on corporations and, if necessary, to increase the rate to 18 or 20 per cent instead of the former maximum of 15½ per cent.

Bullet Kills Howard Coffin

HOWARD E. COFFIN, who was chairman of the World war aircraft production board and sponsored the development of the Liberty airplane engine, was found shot to death at his winter home in Sea Island, Ga. Beside his body was a hunting rifle from which one shot had been fired. It was assumed his death was accidental.

HOW TO SEW

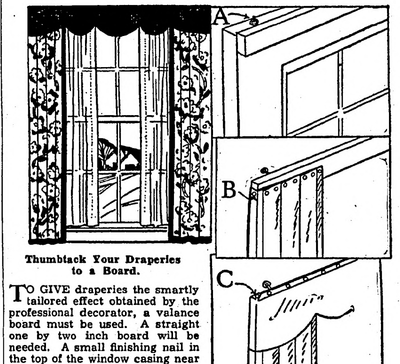
by Ruth Wyeth Spears



Thumbtack Your Draperies to a Board.

TO GIVE draperies the smartly tailored effect obtained by the professional decorator, a valance board must be used. A straight one by two inch board will be needed. A small finishing nail in the top of the window casing near each end and screw eyes placed near the top of the back of the valance board will hold it in place as shown at A. Both side drapes and valance may be thumbtacked to the board and then be quickly hung all at once by hooking the screw eyes over the finishing nails. Think of the advantage on cleaning day! Just lift board and all off the nails and take outside for dusting.

Tack the side drapes to the board first as at B, arranging fullness in flat pleats. In making the valance, allow enough material to fold around the ends of the board as at C; then tack it along the top, stretching it just enough so that it is perfectly smooth.

The valance shown here is made of glazed chintz and matches the glazed chintz border that faces the edges of the side drapes. The glass curtains may be hung just inside the window frame or to the bottom of the valance board.

Every Homemaker should have a copy of Mrs. Spears' new book, SEWING. Forty-eight pages of step-by-step directions for making slipcovers and dressing tables; restoring and upholstering chairs, couches; making curtains for every type of room and purpose. Making lampshades, rugs, ottomans and other useful articles for the home. Readers wishing a copy should send name and address, enclosing 25 cents, to Mrs. Spears, 210 South Desplaines St., Chicago, Illinois.

A DESSERT that looks very pretty, that tastes better than those grandmother used to make, that's made all in a jiffy—that's a milk pudding. Besides all this, if it's a milk dessert it's bound to be good for the whole family, too.

Apple Custard Pudding.

|---|---|
| 8 medium-sized apples | 1½ cups sugar |
| 5 eggs | 1 teaspoon nutmeg |
| 3 cups milk | 1 teaspoon vanilla |
| | ½ teaspoon salt |

Peel and core whole apples and place in a buttered casserole. Save the whites of two eggs for meringue and beat remaining eggs together lightly. Combine with milk and flavorings. Pour over and around apples. The apples must not rise above the top of the liquid. (It may be necessary to place a smaller pan on top of the apples to hold them down into the liquid.) Bake in a pan of hot water about 1 hour at 300 degrees Fahrenheit. When custard is set, cover with meringue made of 2 egg whites, 4 tablespoons of sugar, and 1 teaspoon of vanilla. Brown at 350 degrees Fahrenheit.

January Floods Reveal Strength of Red Cross

Aid Given 1,062,000 Persons Through Set-Up by Agency

The elasticity and scope of Red Cross disaster work is shown in a recent report on Red Cross relief measures during the unparalleled Ohio-Mississippi Valley flood of this year.

At the height of the emergency Red Cross relief offices were established in 182 inundated counties and in 146 counties where refugees were cared for, the report stated. Eight regional headquarters offices controlled the 328 county offices, and were in turn supervised by the National Red Cross in Washington, D. C.

A statistical summary of persons aided by the organization indicates that the floods constituted the greatest peace-time emergency ever faced by the nation. The Red Cross gave some form of assistance to 1,062,000 men, women and children. From January to August hundreds of trained workers helped by thousands of volunteers administered to the sufferers.

A Red Cross rescue fleet of 5400 boats was organized, according to the report. Emergency hospitals established totaled 300 and 3600 nurses were assigned to flood duty. In more than 1,000 refugee centers the victims of the flood were sheltered, clothed and fed. Through the Red Cross medical-health program and the work of public health agencies sickness was kept to normal for the time of year in all inundated areas.

Because of its disaster experience the Red Cross was directed by the President of the United States, who is also president of the Red Cross, to coordinato the effort of all federal flood relief groups. Government and Red Cross officials met daily at the Red Cross headquarters building in Washington to plan relief measures and prevent duplication of effort.

"We were fortunate in having 56 years of disaster relief experience to call upon in meeting the emergency," Admiral Gary T. Grayson, chairman of the Red Cross, said.

It was found that 97,000 families composed of 436,000 persons had to have their resources supplemented or an entirely new start provided by the Red Cross, the report stated. Red Cross emergency and rehabilitation assistance was as follows: rescue, transportation and shelter for 62,000 families; food, clothing and other maintenance for 193,000 families; building and repair for 27,000 families; household goods for 90,000 families; medical, nursing and sanitation help for 15,000 families; agricultural rehabilitation for 10,000 families; other occupational aid for 3,000 families and other types of relief for 4,000 families.

"Credit for this largest peace-time relief operation in the history of the nation must go to the American people who contributed a Red Cross relief fund of more than $25,000,000," Admiral Grayson said.

During the year the Red Cross gave aid to the victims of 105 other disasters in 36 states, Alaska and the District of Columbia. The Red Cross financed the majority of these relief operations from money contributed through memberships during the annual Roll Call last November, since it is only in case of large scale disasters that a national drive for relief funds is made.

This year the Roll Call is from November 11th to the 25th. The Red Cross seeks a greater membership to meet its disaster relief and other service obligations during 1938.

Last year Red Cross Chapters gave vital help to 120,000 needy families.

Labor's advocacy of the Red Cross program is attested by recent statements from William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor and John L. Lewis, president of the United Mine Workers of America.

"Red Cross aims and purposes are highly commendable and deserving of the support of all classes of people," said Mr. Green.

"The activities and service of the American Red Cross satisfy a great need of the people, and I strongly urge that it receive the unqualified support of all during its annual Roll Call for members," Mr. Lewis said.

Round Up Range Horses

The bureau of animal industry says that there are 11 states of the Union known as western range states which round up range horses—namely, Arizona, New Mexico, Colorado, Nevada, Wyoming, Oregon, California, Washington, Montana, Idaho and Utah. These horses are sold at auction under state laws.

Red Cross Replaces Farm Family Losses

The Red Cross gave agricultural rehabilitation to 10,116 farm families following the severe eastern floods of last winter. Types of aid included feed, seed, livestock, farm tools and machinery and other items essential to agricultural productivity. More than $599,000 was expended by the organization to meet these requirements.

In addition to occupational assistance, rural families hard hit by the flood waters were rescued, clothed, fed and sheltered by the Red Cross. Where it was necessary the Red Cross repaired and rebuilt out-buildings, barns and other structures. Medical and nursing care were provided and homes refurnished.

Red Cross agricultural rehabilitation benefited nearly three times as many families as received all other types of Red Cross occupational rehabilitation combined.

Nations of World Allot Year 1939 To New York Fair

World Exposition Already Growing Up; Seeks Active Participation of State

NEW YORK, (Special).—The New York World's Fair, in which every state in the nation must inevitably take small or prominent part, is out of its infancy.

Preparatory construction goes on night and day at the Flushing Meadow Site of 1216½ acres at the geographical centre of New York City. A steady flow of activities and announcements emanates from the Fair Corporation headquarters on four floors of the Empire State building. Judging from all of these, the Fair is a lusty, growing institution that will reach full maturity—no question about it—by the scheduled opening day, April 30, 1939.

The task of grading the site is about half completed. Battalions of men with trucks have already moved over 3,000,000 cubic yards of dry fill in the process of turning the waste marsh lands of the Flushing River basin into park ground. Other battalions are scooping out "meadow mat" for use as fertile top soil for the made lands, and in so doing excavate the beds for the two large lagoons featured in plans for the Fair.

The first of the 300 structures which, according to estimates, will house the 1939 Fair, has been completed and is ready for occupancy. This is the headquarters building for the field forces of today and the employment department of the exposition period.

Scheduled for early in the new year is the start of actual construction of the $900,000 Administration building. The designs for this structure, let under architectural contract a few weeks ago, are nearing the day of their approval in the Corporation's offices. Upon completion of this building, late in August, 1937, the Fair headquarters, bag, baggage and sales offices, moves to the exposition site.

"The most splendid and significant edifice projected for the 1939 international exposition," the Theme building, as described at Fair headquarters, is also well along in its contractual period. The estimated cost of this great building for the "Thematic Centre" of the exposition is set at $1,200,000. The preliminary designs are to be finished in about eight weeks and the final plans submitted within four weeks thereafter. Construction is scheduled to start immediately the designs are completed.

From this Theme centre will radiate all that is to be the 1939 Fair as conceived by its founders and rendered into concrete terminology and model by the Fair's Board of Design.

"Our job from now on is to give physical expression to the plan and theme

Some drivers of automobiles feel that they must drive a car that has more horsepower than other cars. They feel that they must sit behind the wheel and drive an automobile as though it had 100 wild horses out in front of it running at random.

Under the hood of every automobile are anywhere from 4 to 100 horses - docile and tame in the hands of some drivers, but wild and dangerors to life, limb, and propefty in the hands of others.

"Ride 'em Cowboy may be good cheer at a rodeo but "step on it" is poor advice to the person who takes a car out on a public highway that other people must use.

The large crew of men and their families that have been connected with the job this summer are leaving for their respective homes this week.

Watches Once Small Clocks

Watches originally were small clocks and were worn hung from the girdle because they were too large for the pocket.

This isn't, perhaps, the way you pictured "the top of the Rocky Mountains," but it's the highest point on the main line of the Great Northern Railway—Marias Pass, elevation 5,213 feet. This low and direct route across the Rockies helps to make the Great Northern one of the most economically operated railroads in the country.

More Than a Mere Coincidence....?

You and others who pay the freight bills that provide your railway transportation, paid the Great Northern Railway an average of a little more than one cent for every ton of freight hauled one mile, during the year 1932.

That, of course, was five years ago. This year it will be only about 4/5ths of a cent.

You are likely to wonder how it happens that the Great Northern's average revenue for hauling a ton of freight one mile has dropped off one-fifth, particularly if you happen to be one of those who have not observed any reduction in your freight rates.

The explanation is simple:

- There has been a big increase in shipments of low-value commodities (heavy and bulky), which are hauled at relatively low rates.
- There has not been a corresponding increase in shipments of the higher-value commodities (lighter and less bulky), which are hauled at relatively higher rates. Much of this revenue has been lost to other forms of transportation, which are favored by important advantages in taxation, legislation, regulation, and, more important still, are favored by both direct and hidden subsidies.
- To meet this unequal competition we have been obliged to lower many of our rates.
- Other rates have been reduced voluntarily to protect the markets of producers and industries located in our territory.
- Still other reductions have been required by federal and state regulatory bodies.

If the Great Northern had received the same average revenue this year that it did in 1932 for every ton of freight it hauled one mile, it would have collected $20,000,000 more from shippers than it will this year.

Meanwhile, wages have increased 18 per cent; taxes, 25 per cent; and the cost of fuel, materials and supplies, approximately 40 per cent.

It probably is more than a coincidence that the recent "recession" in business should have followed wide-spread recognition of an impending crisis in the railroad industry—an industry which —Consumes nearly a fourth of all the bituminous coal mined in this country;

—A fifth of all the fuel oil produced;
—A sixth of all the iron and steel produced;
—A fifth of all the timber that is cut;
—Pays about a million dollars a day in taxes;
—Pays out more than five million dollars a day in wages.

Benson Spoke For Mooney

Asking that Tom Mooney, labor leader convicted with a Preparedness Day bomb outrage but since proven innocent "in the eyes of every decent man and woman not only in America but in the entire world" be granted a full pardon, Governor Benson, in an address in San Francisco last Sunday, declared:

"When certain people in powerful positions wanted Mooney in prison—wanted to get rid of him because he was what they termed a labor agitator—it was possible to start the machinery of government working with clock-wise precission to get him there. Now, however, that he has been proven innocent, it has been found impossible to start the machinery of government moving again with equeal speed and precision to make him a free man. . . . .

"The mills of Justice indeed grind slowly. But I want to say quite categorically—and this is indeed a sand commentary not only upon our system of justice but upon some of our public officials—that if those powerful people who sent Mooney to prison passed along the word that they wanted him out, it would not take many days before Tom Mooney would be with us again..

The Governor was the principal speaker at a Mooney mass meeting arranged by San Francisco labor and liberals. . .

On Saturday Governor Benson delivered an address before the annual convention of the Oregon Commonwealth Federation on the subject, "The Farmer-Labor Program for the Crisis." . .

"Our Farmer-Labor view of government," he said, "and of society does not represent a new philosophy. It is merely Abraham Lincoln's philosoyhy of government of the people, for the people, and by the people carried into the conditions of our times. It is simply a renewed expression of the Declaration of Independence. We in the Farmer-Labor party hold that government and the laws exist for the people, and not the people for the government and its laws."

I believe in safety because it is effective. It provides real protection for myself and others.

I believe in safety because it is my patriotic duty to do so. No community can afford to have accidents to its citizens.

I believe in safety because I want to live the full length of my life and enjoy it to the utmost.

I believe in safety because I do not want to depend upon charity.

Halvorson Issued Tax Money

First payments of rural school aid to counties having tax exempt rural credit lands were made last month as State Treasurer C. A. Halvorson issued out checks totaling more that $96,000 to the treasurers of various counties in Minnesota in accorddance with a law passed by the last legislature providing that the state shall pay taxes for school purposes on rural credit lands.

Rural credit lands are exempt from all taxes. This has worked a particular hardship on rural schools, especially in those districts having several pieces of such land, so liberal representatives at the last regular legislative session introduced a bill to aid those rural school districts by providing that the state as a whole pay the taxes for school purposes, and the bill became law.

Marshall county received the most money from payments made so far, getting $21,314.49. Polk county came next with $15,456.66, which went to about half its country schools. Other rural school aid checks were issued by Halvorson to the treasurers of the following counties.

Beltrami, Carlton, Clearwater, Hubbard, Isanti, Kanabec, Kittson, Lincoln, Lyon, Morrison, Nicollet, Norman, Ottertail, Roseau, Scott and Yellow Medecine.

Two Little Dolls In Blue

By ALICE B. PALMER

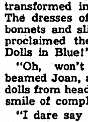
"AREN'T the dolls beautiful?" exclaimed Joan to her mother, as she gazed upon the finished product of the "Two Little Dolls in Blue" which Dorothy May had ordered from Santa Claus.

"They are quite the loveliest I have ever seen," spoke mother. "I do believe that you have put your very heart and soul into their fashioning."

Joan had spent many days and nights, too, stitching a loving holiday thought into each tiny garment. The dainty materials had been transformed into things of beauty. The dresses of pale blue silk with bonnets and slippers to match, had proclaimed them the "Two Little Dolls in Blue!"

"Oh, won't Dot love them!" beamed Joan, as she again eyed the dolls from head to foot with a happy smile of complete satisfaction.

"I dare say this will be her happiest Christmas, one that she will never forget," said mother.



Christmas eve, with its bright lights and cheer, was in full progress and the two little dolls in blue were being fondled by one of the happiest little girls in the world. Rocking in her own tiny chair Dorothy May began singing a lullaby to the dollies, wholly oblivious of the attendant surroundings. It was such an adorable sight that the others had stopped their celebrations and were beaming upon her with transformed emotion.

The spell was broken when Dorothy May suddenly stopped singing and called out, "What shall I name the 'two little dolls in blue'?"

"Well," said Joan, smiling thoughtfully, "since they are dressed in blue and are two very important little ladies, why not call one Alice Blue and the other Elinor Blue?" And so the dolls were named.

On Christmas morning in another house around the corner, Bonny Jean awoke with the joy of the holiday and shouted, "Mother, did Santa come and did he bring me a big baby doll with curls and eyes that open and shut?"

"Yes, dearie, Santa came and brought you a very pretty doll."

Then spying it, seated beneath the tree dressed in scarlet finery, Bonny Jean clasped it to her breast. Upon close inspection she soon learned that it was the same sort of doll she had always received, only with new features.

Just as she was about to burst into protest at her bitter disappointment there came a rap upon the door and a kindly neighbor was saying, "Merry Christmas." Then with a happy smile—

"What is the matter, little girl? Hasn't Santa Claus come yet?"

"Oh, yes, he came, but he brought me the same old rag doll again. I thought sure it would be a real one this year, because I'm nine, you see."

"Oh, I am so sorry," said Dorothy May, with true feeling and thinking of the two beautiful dolls which Santa had left for her. Then with a happy Christmas thought, she whispered something very lovely to her mother.

They all went right over to the big house on the hill nestled under its burden of Christmas snow. Bonny Jean forgot all about the rag doll when she glimpsed the great tree through the holly wreaths in the window. But when she saw the two little dolls in blue sitting beneath it her joy was unbounded. She clapped her hands and danced with glee. "Such darling dolls!" she gasped, breathlessly.

"Their names are Alice Blue and Eleanor Blue," said their little mistress, proudly.

"I want to give you one of them, Bonny Jean; which do you like?"

With unbelievable surprise, her eyes fairly dancing with joy, she clasped the beautiful doll in her arms and asked, "Is—it—really—mine—for—keeps?"

"Really and truly for keeps," said Dot.

Dorothy May explained it all to her mother after the happy little girl had left, that somehow she just did not miss Eleanor Blue very much when she saw how happy she had made Bonny Jean.

In her heart she felt that it was truly "more blessed to give than to receive," and hugging the one little doll closely, she whispered, "Merry Christmas, Alice Blue."

Preserving Patent Leather.—The life of patent leather may be prolonged by rubbing it occasionally with glycerine applied with a clean cloth.

Cross Stitch on Cloth.—An old-fashioned way of working cross-stitch on a cloth or silk background was to cover the piece of material with a piece of canvas slightly larger than the size and work the cross-stitch through both, afterwards drawing the canvas threads out from beneath the embroidery or letter, as the case might be. It was an excellent idea for saving eyesight as well as time, and moreover insured the perfect regularity of stitches which it would have been impossible to preserve by any other method. Charming little handbags in velvet or silk, pincushions, blotting-book covers, etc., lend themselves to this simple treatment.

WOMEN WHO HOLD THEIR MEN NEVER LET THEM KNOW

NO matter how much your back aches and your nerves scream, your husband, because he is only a man, can never understand why you are so hard to live with one week in every month.

Too often the honeymoon express is wrecked by the nagging tongue of a three-quarter wife. The wise woman never lets her husband know by outward sign that she is a victim of periodic pain.

For three generations one woman has told another how to go "smiling through" with Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. It helps Nature tone up the system, thus lessening the discomforts from the functional disorders which women must endure in the three ordeals of life: 1. Turning from girlhood to womanhood. 2. Preparing for motherhood. 3. Approaching "middle age."

Don't be a three-quarter wife, take LYDIA E. PINKHAM'S VEGETABLE COMPOUND and Go "Smiling Through."

STAR DUST

Movie • Radio

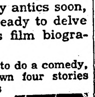
By VIRGINIA VALE

HALF of Hollywood is diligently searching for giddy comedies, the sort that have made Carole Lombard and Irene Dunne outstanding stars. The rest of the film colony figure that the public is going to be fed up on loony antics soon, and are getting ready to delve into very serious film biographies.



Kay Francis

Garbo still wants to do a comedy, but has turned down four stories that the studio has submitted to her. Kay Francis is all set to launch into a laugh epic. Tyrone Power and Loretta Young have started work on "Her Masterpiece," hoping that it will be as entertaining as their current "Second Honeymoon."

In the biographical division, there is the life of Clara Barton in which Irene Dunne will star, the life of Alexander Graham Bell, inventor of the telephone, in which Tyrone Power will be featured, and the life of George Sand, woman novelist, which will star the dainty Annabella.

In the latest radio poll Charlie McCarthy, to no one's surprise, is voted the most popular radio star, and by a wide margin, too. The great hit of the ventriloquist's dummy and the growing appeal of Betty Lou, that imaginary character on the Vallee hour, has set radio sponsors to looking for novelties. And the next one to bid for your approval will be a talking parrot. Sketches are all written for the bird, but the feathery star itself has not been located. It seems that all the tryouts have been a failure.

It takes a long time to score success in radio, motion pictures, and on the stage, so it is a good idea to start at the age of eleven as Joy Hodges did. She is almost twenty-one now and can point with pride to the months when she sang on the radio with Ted Fio Rito's and Ozzie Nelson's orchestras. You will see her on the screen in Universal's "Merry Go Round of 1938" and she is playing the lead with George Cohan in the outstanding Broadway hit of the year, "I'd Rather Be Right," which spoofs the New Deal in amiable fashion. She supported herself all through her four years at Des Moines high school by singing at revival meetings and on the radio.

When you see Carole Lombard in "Nothing Sacred," and Barbara Stanwyck in "Breakfast for Two," you may assume that a course in boxing is a necessary part of every screen actress' training. Barbara puts on gloves and goes after Herbert Marshall for all she is worth, pummeling and swinging until you begin to fear that Marshall will have to play masked bandit roles the rest of his life. Carole doesn't stop for gloves or any such niceties. She just goes into a slap-happy routine with Fredric March with no holds barred.

Milton Berle

The M-G-M radio hour, improving every week, is going to be even better, because it has been decided to concentrate more on comedy. Ted Healy, who hasn't had a chance really to distinguish himself in their pictures, has walked off with all the honors in their radio shows. All inquiries about audience reaction bring a request for more Healy specialties. You will be getting them from now on. Soon R. K. O. will launch a radio hour with Milton Berle as master of ceremonies—probably late at night so that it won't interfere with your going to the theater to see their pictures.

ODDS AND ENDS—Grand National has ambitious plans to star Tex Ritter, Ken Maynard and Ruth Mix in one big super-Western . . . When you hear a dog barking in the radio serial, "Pepper Young's Family," it isn't a sound-effects man at work. It is the well-trained pet of Jean Sothern, regular member of the cast . . . Charlie Farrell, encouraged by the great comeback of his former partner, Janet Gaynor, is going to try a comeback too, with Paramount . . . Eleanor Holm had to swim alongside two alligators in "Tarzan's Revenge." Two rifle marksmen stood by, just in case . . . Latest actor to want Olivia de Havilland to play opposite him in a Broadway stage play is Brian Aherne but she still says "No" . . . Voting will begin soon for best screen performance of the year and Charles Boyer is likely to win for his portrayal of Napoleon in "Conquest" . . . Meanwhile several radio sponsors have voted Nadine Conner, currently subbing for Jeannette MacDonald Sunday nights, the best woman singer on the air.

Favorite Recipe of the Week

Pumpkin Custard a Real Treat.

TREAT the family to a pumpkin custard as a change from the usual pie. Canned pumpkin is suggested because it is already cooked, mashed and ready to use, which saves considerable time and energy. Bake the custard in a basin, not too large or too deep. A good size would be one which holds a quart.

When it comes time to serve the custard, unmold it onto a chop platter and around the custard arrange prunes which have been pitted and stuffed lightly with shredded American cheese. Mounds of whipped cream placed between the prunes would be a good idea. A little prune juice poured over the top of the custard and cream will add flavor and a pleasing appearance. The canned prunes are convenient to use.

Pumpkin Custard.

2 cups canned pumpkin
¾ cup sugar, part brown
1 teaspoon cinnamon
¼ teaspoon cloves
½ teaspoon ginger
¼ teaspoon nutmeg
1 teaspoon salt
3 eggs
2¼ cups milk

Beat pumpkin thoroughly with dry ingredients. Beat eggs slightly, add to milk and combine with pumpkin mixture. Pour into baking pan, set in a pan of water (½ inch deep on pan), and bake for about 45 minutes in a moderate oven (375 degrees). Chill before serving, unmold onto chop platter, and garnish.

Your kidneys are constantly filtering waste matter from the blood stream. But kidneys sometimes lag in their work—do not act as Nature intended—fail to remove impurities that, if retained, may poison the system and upset the whole body machinery.

Symptoms may be nagging backache, persistent headache, attacks of dizziness, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes—a feeling of nervous anxiety and loss of pep and strength.

Other signs of kidney or bladder disorder may be burning, scanty or too frequent urination.

Much Talk, No Action

Washington.—Congress has been doing a deal of talking about helping business to get on its feet, but it has not yet accomplished much. The house ways and means committee, it is true, is making some headway and a number of senators, including the powerful Senator Harrison of Mississippi, are asserting the necessity for a reversal of federal policy. But, again, there is much more talk than action, and in the meantime the country's business is sliding lower and lower.

The difficulty in the present situation and the thing that probably has been more responsible for the business slump than anything else is that business heretofore has been unable to tell what the federal government is going to do. It has become evident already that with a somewhat changed atmosphere in congress, there are many business men who are more hopeful than a month ago. Business men, big and little, are quick to note that there are senators and representatives who think the time has arrived for business to receive some consideration. And it ought to be added that unless business does get some consideration, this current depression is going to be as bad as the last one. The federal government must give attention to the agricultural problem and it must fit that job into some consideration of the other half of American life, namely, the commerce and industry outside of agricultural life.

It will be recalled that during the first two years of President Roosevelt's administration there was a flock of laws passed that were of great value to the country. Many of them were of a temporary character and were enacted on that basis. That would have been fine if the administration had stopped there. But it did not. The roaming herd of so-called thinkers who were scattered far and wide in federal jobs had to have their innings. At least they thought they had to have a turn at bat. All of their pet theories had to be tried out. The result: many laws that were purely experimental, dangerous, damaging and a burden to business.

With many millions of others, I expected at that time to see these queer looking laws shaken down, corrected, or repealed where it was found necessary. That has not happened. Again, the result: the country's business from the smallest general store at a cross roads or a garage or a gasoline station to the greatest corporation, like General Motors or Pennsylvania railroad, has had to suffer under the heavy heel of the national government. The reason that congress is showing signs of a movement that will revise the tax structure is because these smaller businesses out through the country have now got their fill of government red tape, complex reports, visits of investigators, new tax forms and levies, or what have you. Those people are making themselves heard here in Washington.

So if congress takes some action looking to a fair deal for business, just as it is quite determined to do something for agriculture, I entertain no doubt about the response it will get from the business interests. As far as business has made itself felt, it is apparently asking only to be treated equitably with labor. Every one knows that the last three or four sessions of congress have been frightened to death every time a labor leader showed up on Capitol hill. The reward given congress was the C. I. O. sitdown strikes, violence and a general mess. The condition has left a goodly number of senators and representatives a bad taste in their mouths.

Messing in Business

There is plenty of dirty linen in the business closet. It has a hard wash day ahead to restore it to the respect of the bulk of the people. Business has been smug. It has thought too little, in many instances, of its obligations to the public at large. But surely there is a point beyond which federal punishment ought not go since there is a responsibility also in the other direction. Unless business gets a reasonable chance to stand on its own feet, how is it going to re-employ workers and reduce the relief rolls?

Every individual wants to earn some money. He wants a return for his labor. He dreams some day of a retirement, a lay off when he can watch the world go by. I can see no reason why the federal government should not encourage, rather than discourage, such a thing. It is the conviction of a very great many, an increasing number of people that the federal government is messing too much into business.

But aside from that phase. There are a number of things happening that are difficult to understand. At a time when business is sliding off like a snowball going down hill, the President steps out and orders an investigation by the federal trade commission into "high prices." The inquiry, of course, is directed at monopoly. I have no doubt at all that there will be a blast from some government official pretty soon in which "big business" again will be told it is crushing the "little fellow" and that the public is suffering from the high prices maintained by a "trust." There may be even a fireside chat because a President's voice penetrates everywhere.

At a time, too, when the prices of bonds and shares of corporation stock are sinking like they have double pneumonia, out bursts Chairman Douglas of the securities and exchange commission with a small cargo of dynamite about crooked dealings underneath in the stock exchanges of the country. Fortunately for the hundreds of thousands of small investors, the stock exchange quotations did not fall much further as a result of Mr. Douglas' learned remarks. The prices already had fallen below the knees. But the Douglas statement certainly gave no confidence to those who were beginning to believe that congress would try to undo some of the wrongs previously done.

Just about the same time and during frequent appeals from the senators and representatives that the tax laws had to be overhauled, the President sent a report to congress. It was a report by the New York Power authority, charging the power interests with some weird misdoings. I happen to know some of the folks on the staff of the power authority and I feel that they know just about as much about the power problem as I do—which is to say they are pretty dumb about the situation. Of course, those alleged economists have brilliant ideas about reforming America, and I am dumb about that, too.

Further: While this power authority report was being emblazoned upon the front pages of newspapers, President Roosevelt was holding long conferences with Wendell Wilkie and Fred Carlisle, who personalize the "power trust," if there be a power trust. Mr. Roosevelt was talking with those men in an effort to get the large power interests to go ahead with construction and expansion programs to provide work for unemployed.

Different Picture

The political strategy of blaming everything on "big business" worked well for a time, just as the old demagoguery about "Wall Street" used to inflame thousands when a politician orated and slapped his legs with widely swinging arms. But the picture is different now. The attack on business has become a mill stone on business and it has crushed little as well as big—and since there are so many more smaller ones than there are trusts and monopolies, members of congress are hearing about it from men whom they went to school with at home.

But what is to be done? Let congress repeal about five hundred laws that force business to pay more for the privilege of doing business than it gets out of its whole volume; reduce or revise the direct taxes and bring the thousand and one items of tax out in the open so the people can see and know what they are paying; cut out forty or fifty of the silly experiments that were worked up by the coterie of individuals who are constantly feeding Mr. Roosevelt half-baked and cockeyed schemes for spending money and thereby reduce the federal expenses—these and many more of honest purpose can be done. If they are done, business again can employ workers and as it employs workers, they come off the relief rolls, and as they get wages, they buy. This means profits and profits mean tax receipts by the treasuries of state and nation.

To show how some of these taxes come about, I am told that Herman Oliphant, general counsel to the secretary of the treasury, promoted the ridiculous tax on undistributed profits of corporations. When it was pushed through congress Mr. Roosevelt said it would force corporations to declare dividends of all of their earnings and he was for it. It did just that. But when the corporations had distributed everything to their shareholders and their volume of business fell off, they had no money left to tide them over until business picked up again. Hence, some of them are on the verge of bankruptcy. I do not know where Mr. Oliphant got the idea, or how he sold it to Mr. Roosevelt. I do not know of any business connection that Mr. Oliphant ever had with any important corporation. It is important, however, to note that Mr. Oliphant has made no move whatsoever to defend this brain child that turned out to be such an unwanted baby. (And while writing about Mr. Oliphant, it may be noted that until Secretary Morgenthau came onto the scene, there was never any need for a general counsel to the secretary of the treasury.)

what Irvin S. Cobb thinks about:

How to Be Fair.

SANTA MONICA, CALIF.—Every time the heirs to an undivided estate start litigating, I think of a decision which had in it more wisdom, more common sense and more fairness than even King Solomon's inspired justice.

Irvin S. Cobb.

I can't remember whether 'twas a ruler upon the throne or a judge upon the bench who handed down this ruling. But two brothers fell out over a proper division of their father's possessions. Accordingly, they carried the dispute to a higher court of the land.

So his majesty, or his worship, or his honor, as the case may have been, said:

"Let the older brother apportion the property into what he regards as two equal shares—and then let the younger brother have first choice of the shares."

But, of course, the lawyers couldn't have favored the plan. It was too beautifully simple to suit any lawyer in any age. The American Bar association would just naturally despise it.

Cemetery Salesmen.

I RECEIVED a letter from one of our plushiest cemeteries. We have some of the plushiest cemeteries on earth; it's a positive pleasure to be dead out here.

I was urged to invest in a highly desirable lot, for only a few thousand smackers; or buy a perfectly lovely crypt—slightly more expensive, but most luxurious.

Through some private whim or pique, I failed to answer this tempting communication. Today I received an appealing follow-up letter. I gather that, if I neglect this splendid opportunity, I'll live to regret it. Or maybe I won't.

Such thoughtful attention merits response. I'm replying as follows: "Dear gents: Space in a graveyard is the last thing I shall require. When that time comes, somebody else will do the shopping. Trusting these few lines may find you the same, yours gratefully."

But if a representative calls in person—as he will—I'm a gone gosling. Those slick talkers always do get me. You just ought to see my collection of oil stocks. Now, there's something that does need burying.

Making Juleps.

SOME disputatious soul seeks to reopen the ancient debate over the proper recipe for mint julep. I decline the invitation. Since the Dred Scot decision nothing has stirred up as much bitter controversy south of the Ohio river.

North of the Ohio river doesn't count. The Yankee conception of a julep is calculated to make a host of sleeping Kentucky brigadiers rise up from their respective Bourbon casks and start giving the rebel hiss.

Naturally, the only perfect julep is the Paducah julep. Just drop in next summer and sample the real product on its native heath—not at a saloon, where the bartender is likely to have heretical ideas, such as using preserved fruits and even putting the sugar syrup in first, which amounts to downright crime—but in the private home.

Western Superiority.

IN BORNEO, tigers slay such an incredible host of natives that the yearly mortality is proportionately almost one-tenth as great as the average number of persons who will be wiped out in traffic fatalities on American highways during any given 12 months.

In India, owing to the refusal of those benighted Hindus to destroy any living creature, 20,000 inhabitants annually are killed by venomous serpents, whereas, in this country, in 1936, we spent only 15 billions for crime, or 18 times as much as we spent on national defense, yet managed to let many poisonous human snakes go free to build up murder statistics.

In Japan, geisha girls are governmentally licensed and protected, which is indeed an affront to the principles of an enlightened people who patronize so-called world's fairs that are dependent on unabashed nudity for popular favor, and shows dependent on foul lines and nasty situations.

500 Women at Science Meet

Not a single man among the 500 scientists at a conference in Moscow, Russia. All the speakers as well as all the members of association were women. One was V. P. Lebedeva, a professor of medicine. Another, Professor M. L. Rokhlina, stated that the number of women students in the universities had grown from 16,700 in 1914 to 183,000. Half the total number of doctors in Russia are women. Most of the women "scientists" are found in medicine, chemistry and biology.

HOW TO SEW

by Ruth Wyeth Spears

Make This Attractive Ottoman.

GET a wooden box from the grocer. It should be about as long as the width of the chair with which the ottoman is to be used. The depth of the sides should be four inches as shown here at A.

The legs should be made of two by two's or you may have a set of nicely turned legs from an old table or other piece of furniture that may be cut down to the right length. Fasten in place with long screws through the corners of the box as shown here at B.

About half a bat of cotton will be needed. Put five or six layers of the cotton on the top, cutting the first layer about four inches smaller all around than the top of the box. Place it in the center. Cut the next layer a little bigger and the others still bigger until the last one is the same size as the top. Now, cut a layer of cotton to go over the top and down over the ends as at C and another to go over the top and down the sides as at D.

Cut a piece of heavy muslin to fasten tightly over the cotton. Cut the corners of the muslin as at E. Sew with heavy thread as at F and then tack as at G.

To make the cover, stretch the top tightly over the muslin and sew it along the sides through the muslin, then make a straight four-inch band to go all around and add the ruffle to it.

Every homemaker should have a copy of Mrs. Spears' new book, SEWING. Forty-eight pages of step-by-step directions for making slipcovers and dressing tables; restoring and upholstering chairs, couches; making curtains for every type of room and purpose. Making lampshades, rugs, ottomans and other useful articles for the home. Readers wishing a copy should send name and address, enclosing 25 cents, to Mrs. Spears, 210 South Desplaines St., Chicago, Illinois.

Will Enlarge Caribou Herd

In an effort to forstall the extinction of the woodland caribou on the Red Lake Wildlife Refuge a herd of ten of this species will be brought to Baudette next year to add to the dwindling band - the only ones remaining in the United States.

W. T. Cox, Regional Forester-Biologist of the U. S. Department of Agriculture, stated this week that satisfactory progress is being made to obtain these animals. He is receiving the cooperation of the Biological Survey and other bureaus, and the active assistance of the Hudson's Bay Company, the province of Saskatchewan and, of course, the state of Minnesota.

The wild animals are to be caught far to the north of Prince Albert in the deep snow during late February or March, and transported by team from the forest and swamp to the railroad. The caribou will be shipped to Baudette, and taken out forty miles to the enclosure being prepared for them, where they will join their companions with the protection that the caribou has long needed and seldom found.

They Deserve Six Feet Of Sod

Within the passing of a few short years much Illinois history, valuable to village, town, and to families will have been lost forever. It will disappear when many of the small, unnoticed rural graveyards have been plowed up for cultivation and their stones discarded, the only record of some pioneer passing with them into oblivion.

Where family Bibles have been destroyed by fire and where the only knowing relatives have moved from a community the information is gone. Before 1870 there were no birth or death records in Illinois, and as early as 1849 bodies were buried in LaHarpe city cemetery as well as in the little plot of ground fenced off as the final resting places of those of a family.

State law declares it illegal to harm a grave or to destroy its markers or the objects that compose the form of its contours, but year by year as time works its ravages farmers find these little graveyards falling helplessly before them. Records have died or departed with the last remaining relatives.

Sarah J. English in "A Plea for Our Burial Grounds" in a Journal of the Illinois State Historical Society begs that communities extend concerted efforts and awake public feeling to the recording of our unknown dead.

Those in other parts whose beloved ancestors lie, their graves unmarked, in LaHarpe cemetery, buried at some time before 1870, or whose forefathers sleep in some uncharted rural plot would be doing themselves and the town which claims the bodies a great service indeed to furnish identificatory information to an an agency through which it could be recorded. We would appreciate such correspondence from any who hold the key to knowledge concerning some unmarked grave.

Benjamin Franklin wisely said, "Show me first the graveyards of a country and I will tell you the true character of the people."
—The Quill, LaHarpe, Ill.

The above editorial applies with equeal force to Minnesota. The Minnesota Historical Society is now making a special effort to get a record of as many as possible of the unregistered or abandoned cemeteries and burial plots on farms in the state.

Any readers of this paper who have knowledge of any such cemeteries or private interments in Marshall County, please communicate with S. D. Lincoln, Stephen, Minn., who will see to it that the information is forwarded to the Minnesota Historical Society at St. Paul, and the Marshall County Historical Society at Warren.

Excel Pioneer Died Monday

Mrs. Sam Lorentson was hostess at a bridal shower given in honor of Mrs. Lynn Miller on Saturday afternoon at the Lorentson home. Many friends and relatives were present. The honor guest was presented with a number of gifts, after which the hostess served a delicious lunch.

Rev. and Mrs. Hanson left Sunday afternoon for Milan to visit Mrs. H. T. Hanson who is sick.

Safetygrams

BY FRED W. BRAUN
The Safety Man

During the next two weeks the streets will be crowded with Christmas shoppers; traffic will be congested. These conditions call for additional care on the part of both the pedestrian and the motorist. Pedestrians, intent on the serious question on What shall I buy Mary? are very likely to dash across intersections heedless of traffic signals. Arms will be loaded with packages, obscuring the shopper's vision. Motorists will have to anticipate any emergency at all times and be alert at all times.

Let us do our part to make this a Merry Christmas. Not one of us would want to be responsible for an accident which would spoil the peace and happiness of anyone during the holiday season. Let us keep the thought of safety uppermost in our minds at all times.

Remember - a safe Christmas is a happy Christmas.

Adventure Is Coming In The American Boy

Readers who like adventure and the lure of far places will find plenty to please them in coming issues of THE AMERICAN BOY Magazine. They'll read, for instance, of seamen and sabotage and San Francisco water-front trouble; of daring adventure in the world of pseudo-science, and of a feud aboard a planging, rolling battleship.

They'll read, too, of excitement aboard a transport plane blaring over jungled Mexican mountains, and of stranger planes that are not bound to earth but swing through the noiselessness of space. Readers can follow a young ex-Mountie as he searches for clues in the wild northlands, and Tierney, the pie-eating detective, on the trail of city criminals.

A new featute in THE AMERICAN BOY is pictue pages that tell stories. Pictures, for instance, that vividly show a day in the life of a coast guardsman, and how an Eskimo husky sled dog does his work. They transmit the thrill of battling a hundred pound, water-churning tarpon. Tips on how it's done are also given--ranging from how to run a broken field to how to be correct in a ballroom.

Subscription prices to The American Boy are $1.50 for one year or $3.00 for three years, foreign subscriptions 50c extra. Send your name, address and remittance to The American Boy, 7430 Second Blvd., Detroit, Mich. On News-stands, 15c a copy.

A delicious lunch was served to all guests present.

The afternoon was spent socially.

A beautifully decorated three tiered wedding cake graced the table.

Ole Larson and Chas. Skoglund have this week completed the jobs of moving their new barns from their old farms in the Mud Lake area to their new farms which they have purchased, Mr. Moe of Thief River Falls did the moving for Larson, and Thompson of Strandquist did the moving for Skoglund. These two farmers had the best and newest barns in Mud Lake area and had a fine job did of putting them on their new farms.

Farm Conference Board Met

Members of the Minnesota Farm Conference Board, which was set up by the Minnesota farm conference October 4 to press for the program mapped out at the meeting, gathered in St. Paul this week to hear a report from M. W. Thatcher, member of the board, who has been to Washington.

While the Minnesota plan—which would set a basic price on major farm products—is getting considerable attention in Washington, board members were told that Congress is still too conservative to enact such a program as Minnesota farmers want.

"Congress may change its tune the way farm prices are going now," John Nelson of Brookston, chairman of the committee, said. Another member, J. O. Bjorklund of Henning, said that "if farm conditions get worse at the rate they have during the last 90 days, Congress is going to get more heat from the farmers of this country than it's looking for."

Meanwhile the farm committee board debated the advisability of sending a larger delegation to Washington in a last-minute effort to liberalize the measure before the national law-making body.

Sentinels of Health

Don't Neglect Them!

Nature designed the kidneys to do a marvelous job. Their task is to keep the flowing blood stream free of an excess of toxic impurities. The act of living—life itself—is constantly producing waste matter the kidneys must remove from the blood if good health is to endure.

When the kidneys fail to function as Nature intended, there is retention of waste that may cause body-wide distress. One may suffer nagging backache, persistent headache, attacks of dizziness, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes—feel tired, nervous, all worn out.

Frequent, scanty or burning passages may be further evidence of kidney or bladder disturbance.

The recognized and proper treatment is a diuretic medicine to help the kidneys get rid of excess poisonous body waste. Use Doan's Pills. They have had more than forty years of public approval. Are endorsed the country over. Insist on Doan's. Sold at all drug stores.

What Irvin S. Cobb Thinks about

Prehistoric Lore.

DEL RIO, TEXAS.—According to the scientists, who have a great way of naming earthly phenomena without inquiring into the wishes of the phenomena, we are now living in a terrestrial era known as the Hollocene period.

This will be news to a lot of people who rather suspected we were living through a stage which might be called Chaos.

Irvin S. Cobb

Still, it's no wonder that the word hasn't got around generally yet, because this present era is quite a young era as eras go. It's merely a few million years old, which, to our true geologist, is the same as yesterday. Mention a few million years to him and he'll say "phew!" and just snap his fingers—like that.

I wonder if the authorities would pardon a suggestion from a poor ignoramus whose acquaintance with geology is largely limited to two of its surface phases, namely: Regular paved roads and those derned detours. When we consider most of the humorous illustrations and the bulk of the humorous text printed in the average smart magazine of today, and the even spicier lines heard in smart modern plays, wouldn't it be more fitting to call it, not the Holocene, but the Obscene period?

The Law's Long Arm.

THE long arm of the law—it's a grand phrase, isn't it? So mouthfilling, so satisfying to the honest citizen's soul!

It conjures up visions of unrelenting warfare against crime, inevitable punishment for the guilty. It's the bunk!

It's the bunk because of crooked lawyers; venal policemen; complacent prosecutors; soft-hearted or corrupted jurors; witnesses, bribed or intimidated; the law's delays; reversals of fair verdicts on foolish technicalities; a false sentimentality which forgets the widow and orphan of the victim and thinks only of the family of the killer; most often of all, abuse of the powers to commute and to pardon and to parole.

These days, when I see a sentenced offender handcuffed to an officer, I find myself saying to myself, "Chances are that fellow, literally or figuratively, is wearing that decoration only temporarily."

The Passing Years.

EVERY newborn year is a rosy prospect just as nearly every dying year is a dun-colored disappointment. But without revived hope what could we look forward to except being measured for a shroud?

It seems only yesterday when 1937 was busting in, a radiant, bouncing baby-child, his arms burdened with promises, bless his little soul! After several false starts, happy days were here again. Nobody was aiming to remodel the Supreme court. Senator Ashurst told us so, and didn't he know? He didn't.

Secretary Wallace, slightly assisted by Divine Providence, would immediately have the crop situation well in hand. Grass would grow only in the street leading to the almshouse. The Wall Street boys were expecting two suckers in every pot. And the song of the Bulbul was heard in the land—ah, the bull-bull!

Within the 12-month the Republican party again would be a going concern. Well, if it's a going concern, the question is, where?

And now, laden with future gifts, comes 1938. How time flies! Why, before you know it, Sistie will be old enough to take a job with the radio and Buzzie will be signing testimonials.

Gambling Houses.

A ONCE famous card-sharp—not reformed, but retired—said to me:

"Show me a professional gambling house where the roulette wheel isn't crooked, where any other mechanical device is on the square, where the operatives from the bosses on down won't skin a customer—call him a sucker, if you want to; the terms are interchangeable—and I'll drop dead from shock, because no such outfit ever existed nor ever will, not so long as games can be tricked, as all of them can, and gamblers are out for the coin, as they naturally are, and the hand is quicker than the eye, which it is."

"But how about the mathematical percentage in favor of the bank—isn't that enough?" I asked.

"How about the mathematical percentage of crooked law-enforcement officers who have to be bribed?" he countered. "There's never enough coming in to satisfy those babies."

Don't Shake Down Low Fire—Give Fresh Coal Good Start Then Shake Grates Gently

THERE'S a little fault with the firing method of quite a few home-owners that I should like to correct. They have a mistaken idea that when a fire is low, all they have to do is to shake the grates vigorously and the fire will flare up again.

Nothing could be further from the fact. A shallow, half-burned-out fire cannot be revived by shaking most of the remaining coals into the ashpit. The simple way to revive it is to add a sprinkling of fresh coal, giving it time to ignite. When it is burning well, shake the grates gently, stopping when the first red glow shows in the ashpit.

Then refuel the fire, remembering to fill the firebox to the level of the bottom of the fire door. This will provide a deep fire, which is considerably more economical than a shallow one, for it burns less coal and lasts a longer period of time. Also, it minimizes the attention you have to give a shallow fire in trying to revive it.

Christmas In The New Home

by BLANCHE TANNER DILLIN

"THE first Christmas in our new home," Janice Wray announced joyously as she stepped across the threshold of Stewart's and her new home.

"Christmas in our new home," Stewart echoed, switching on the light.

"Oh, isn't it just grand!" exclaimed Janice.

"I'll say it is—but slow up—slow up, Janny! I've got about all my arms will hold, without taking you aboard," Stewart warned her as Janice attempted to throw her arms about him.

"Oh, keep quiet! You're just as excited as I am—so why pretend?" Janice answered with a toss of her head.

Stewart put his packages down and then with his arms around her he assured her, "You bet I am, Honey. I think it is wonderful! Stupendous!" And just because they were so happy, they both laughed.

"Come on—let's get busy with the tree," Stewart suggested.

"Righto!" agreed Janice, "just as soon as I change my dress."

The tree must be neither to large nor too small. Some time had been consumed deciding just the proper size for a Christmas tree for two. They were to be alone this Christmas—the first Christmas in their new home; there was no doubt about that, for they had definitely decided that when they purchased the house. And now here they were ready to trim the much-discussed tree.

"Isn't that star lovely?" Janice said as Stewart placed it at the top of the tree.

"Yes. But I thought you had planned on something else," Stewart replied.

"I changed my mind," was all Janice said. She didn't tell him she couldn't think of a Christmas tree without a star at the top. They always had one on the tree "at home."

"Thought you weren't going to get any red balls," she reminded Stewart.

"I changed my mind." Both laughed at Stewart's echo of Janice's answer of a moment before.

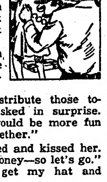
"Mother would love this silver ball." Janice hung the ball where it caught the most light.

"Wouldn't Bess love this blue ball!" Stewart picked up the large blue globe.

"Our dads would enjoy that open fire—and Bill those spruce boughs over the mantel"—Bill, the older brother of Stewart, loved anything from the woods.

And so each thing reminded them of someone's fondness for it, or of some of the happy times of former holidays.

"Well, I guess that's all for now," Stewart said when the decoration of the tree was finished and he and Janice stood admiring it. Janice made no reply to her husband's remark at first.



"All but the presents," she said hesitatingly.

"Oh, we can put those out later," Stewart suggested.

"But I mean the ones for the family," she explained.

"Didn't you distribute those today?" Stewart asked in surprise.

"I thought it would be more fun to take them together."

"Stewart stopped and kissed her. "I think so, too, honey—so let's go."

"Wait until I get my hat and coat."

"And I'll bring the car up to the door."

When Stewart returned to the room Janice was placing packages under the tree.

"Janice, doesn't it seem to you there is something wrong with the tree?" Stewart asked suddenly.

"No." Janice walked all around the tree, looking at it critically. "No," she said the second time—then suddenly—"Yes, Stewart, there is something wrong — something missing—the loving sharing of decorating the tree. Our families would so have enjoyed it. We trimmed it just for ourselves. It does seem selfish."

Then after a moment's silence she cried: "I have it! Suppose we leave the presents here and invite our families here for a good old-fashioned Christmas eve celebration. What do you say?"

"I say—great! Here goes," and Stewart hurried toward the telephone.

Here, for instance, are three swell swing models that will make you modern as tomorrow and put you in the running for the title, "best dressed woman." Right now it's parties you're thinking of, so pick a pair of eligibles from today's trio and you'll be groomed to hobnob with the smart young set.

Will You Dance?

The New Year's Party will be festive and so will you in the model at the left in black moire. This is a very young frock and not a little flattering to the debutante figure. It has a skirt that's built for dancing, and the oh, so slender waist is no drawback (take it from one who knows). Be sure, young lady, to have your version ready to go when the invitation to celebrate comes flashing over the wire.

Spic 'n' Classic.

There's always a "morning after," and that's when you'll be glad to have a spic and classic frock like the one above, center. It is suitable to take back to school to rouse the roommate's envy and, pleasantly enough, it's so easy to cut and stitch, a freshman can't go wrong. Make one version in flat crepe and a carbon copy in sheer wool—it is superb both ways.

Ah, My Friends.

How about a two-piecer of lame and velvet for that rousing family reunion over the holidays? The model above, right, is two pieces, but it's one with chic and figure flattery. You'll have your aunties making ohs and ahs and the bright young cousins calling you "the duchess"! What's more you'll look the part—a stunning compliment to your family as well as to the New Year.

Washington Digest

National Topics Interpreted
By WILLIAM BRUCKART

Washington. — Much has been written and much more has been said concerning the complexities of modern civilization and modern business. Many times have we heard how closely agriculture is related to other industry; how general commerce and industry is interwoven with every phase of our life. There can be no doubt of this condition. No proof is required. Nor is it necessary to argue that when one section or segment of business is on its sickbed, there is a resulting bad reaction upon every other phase of commerce and industry to a greater or less extent.

Railroads Face Crisis

With these fundamentals in mind, it becomes obvious that probably the most important development of a national character in the last few weeks is the appeal of the country's railroads for the right to increase their rates by 15 per cent. The details of their condition, as presented in hearings before the interstate commerce commission, show they are confronted with a crisis. Since they are under the rigid supervision of the federal government, the federal government is the doctor in the case. They will live or die by the command of the interstate commerce commission.

The case they have presented shows, for example, that they have had to cut thousands upon thousands of workers off of the payroll; that they have been unable to buy more than one third of the customary annual purchases from other businesses, and that more than one fourth of all the railroad mileage in the nation is now being operated as bankrupt property—that is, the property is in the hands of court receivers.

So, adverting to the observations of the first paragraph of this discussion: a gigantic industry can not run at a loss without resulting in a bad heart or partial paralysis in other industry. Higher rates are always opposed for the very human reason that none of us enjoys taking any more money out of our pocket than we must. Many lines of business oppose rate increases on the railroads because of the fear that it will reduce their volume of sales. But it occurs to me that in consideration of a question of freight rates and charges which the railroads make, we ought to think of their situation as we do of other lines of business. Our retail grocer is not going to sell at a loss; the druggist can not subsist unless he makes a profit however small it may be, nor is the farmer going to continue to produce unless he gets a reasonable return from his work. The only difference between these and the railroads is that the railroads can not raise their rates unless the interstate commerce commission, a government agency, says they can do so.

Further, there is a tendency on the part of a goodly number of persons throughout the land to question the accuracy of statements made by business. No doubt you have heard, as I have, the remark that "you can't tell whether so-and-so's business is bad off or not. Big corporations can cover up and make black look like white." Indeed, while I was listening to one of the I. C. C. hearings in this case, a man in a neighboring seat made something of the same observation as I have quoted. My answer to him was in substance that none of the railroad officials would dare lie to the commission, even if they were so inclined, because the commission has access to every item of expense and income, even all actions of the management, of the carriers.

It might be added in this connection that officials of the interstate commerce commission understand there is to be a request by the interstate truck operators for an increase in rates if and when the rail lines are allowed higher rates. The trucks are represented as slowly starving to death—but they can't and won't boost rates until their competitors, the railroads, charge more for their services.

I believe there is no better way to set forth the plight of the railroads, as presented to the commission, than to include here some excerpts of the statement made officially in the case by Dr. J. H. Parmelee. He is director of the bureau of economics of the Association of American Railroads and, as such, knows the details.

Plight of Carriers

"Today," Dr. Parmelee said, "the carriers are reducing forces and are curtailing their purchases of equipment, materials and supplies. They are forced to do this because of the financial condition in which they find themselves. This retrenchment has a serious economic effect on employment, on the manufacturers of railway supplies and their employees and on all business activity. Such a policy with its unwholesome economic consequences only partially offsets the rising tide of costs.

"The railroads in 1927 to 1930 installed more than twelve times as many locomotives each year, nearly five times as many freight cars, laid nearly three times as many tons of rails and laid nearly twice as many cross ties as they averaged in the depression years from 1931 to 1936.

"Capital expenditures for 1929 and 1930 averaged $863,164,000 a year. During the depression years from 1931 to 1936, the average of capital expenditures was only $206,813,000.

"Similarly, the trend of railway purchases (of things they must use in operation), of fuel, material and supplies declined sharply during the depression years and never has returned to anything like normal. Railway purchases in 1929 and 1930 amounted to $1,184,017,000 in each of the two years. In the five years from 1931 to 1935, the average per year was about $559,000,000. In 1936, the expenditures in this direction were up to $803,421,000. (Figures for 1937 are incomplete but there has been another decline because of necessary curtailment of buying.)"

Dr. Parmelee turned to the question of railroad receipts for their services. He told the commission that the depression years had left the railroads without any reserves. For seven years, he said, the railroads have been barely getting by, and pointed out that at no time between 1931 and 1937 had they earned more than 2.57 per cent on their investment as it is appraised by the commission. In three of those seven years, the records show, the railroads' receipts did not amount to as much as their fixed charges, a term which includes interest on their debts, taxes and required amounts for paying off parts of their debts. In other words, all they earned in those years was just enough to pay the people who work for them and buy the necessary fuel and operating supplies.

Rising Costs

The argument to the commission is predicated, therefore, upon rising costs, general expenses, and the dozen or so railway presidents who testified before the commission stressed the fact that these expenses are out of control by the railroad authorities. Dr. Parmelee figured that these higher costs of fuel, supplies, wages and taxes had laid a burden on the railroads that is greater this year by $664,789,000 than it was in 1933. The companies hope to get $567,287,000 of this sum from the 15 per cent increase in freight rates, and the railroads of the East are asking that passenger fares be increased from 2 cents to 2½ cents a mile, which they think will bring in an additional $47,500,000. From this it is seen that the carriers still will fall short of the full amount needed, but their argument, as I understand it, proceeds on the theory that they should not seek more of an increase than is sufficient to keep them from going broke. If the new depression conditions subside, there will be a larger volume of freight next year. That will enable them to make a profit. That is, a greater volume of business with the new rates will provide a profit unless there are new government taxes and other burdens laid upon them. In this connection, I looked up the effect of the social security and carriers' taxing act. Commission records show the rail lines are paying $111,000,000 in taxes annually under these two levies alone, a burden the companies did not have two or three years ago.

So it is evident that the rail lines are in a bad fix. They are confronted on the one hand with mounting costs of operation and on the other by declining receipts from the smaller volume of business. At the same time, it seems to me, the country has more than a passing interest in their plight. This is so because during the last two months, for example, close to 60,000 railroad employees have been laid off—out of work, in the rail industry alone. With the decline of purchasing of supplies by the rail lines, other industry has suffered, has laid off men.

Looking at the thing another way, one might call attention to federal appropriations for relief which have been in excess of three billions a year during the last several years. The figures given above show that the railway purchases just one industry—have fallen off more than 500 millions, or about one-sixth of the relief appropriations. If the appropriations to aid all unemployed are only six times as large as the drop in railway expenditures, it is easy to see what an influence is wielded and why I have taken the position that it is necessary to consider the railways' petition from the standpoint of the country as a whole. We, as citizens, have a burden to carry whether it is done through the railways or through some other avenue. None of those rail workers wants to be without a job, I am sure.

HOW TO SEW

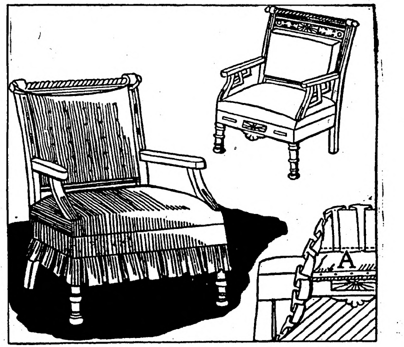
by Ruth Wyeth Spears



Making Over a Chair of the Ginger-Bread Era.

TO modernize the old walnut chair at the right the pieces under the arms were removed and most of the carving covered up. The padding at the back was removed entirely and replaced by a fiber board which was covered by a loose cotton filled cushion tufted like an old fashioned bed comfort except that the tied thread ends of the tufting were left on the wrong side.

This back cushion was fastened in place with tapes that slipped over the knobs at the ends of the upper carving. If the knobs to hold the cushion had been lacking it could have been tacked in place along the top on the under side by using a strip of heavy cardboard to keep the tacks from pulling through the fabric as shown here for tacking the box pleated ruffle around the seat as at A. A plain rust colored heavy cotton upholstery material was used for the covering.

Every Homemaker should have a copy of Mrs. Spears' new book, SEWING. Forty-eight pages of step-by-step directions for making slipcovers and dressing tables; restoring and upholstering chairs, couches; making curtains for every type of room and purpose. Making lampshades, rugs, ottomans and other useful articles for the home. # Merry Christmas Dinner Is Served

EVERGREEN is the theme of this smart setting for your Christmas dinner, and ever green will its memories be, if you plan it so that it is chuck full of pleasant fun, as well as pleasant food.

The good old Dutch burghers brought us much that is jolly about Christmas — the evergreen gaily bedecked, gifts that are surprises and feasting that is well seasoned with merry-making. We have to look still further back, however, for the real origin of the Christmas tree. It is believed to have been once the palm tree, used in the worship of the Egyptian goddess Isis. In northern climates, this association of the palm tree with the celebration of December 25th had to be modified by substituting the hardy fir tree.

A Gay Table

Let us use it plentifully for our Christmas dinner decoration. A decorative centerpiece may be made by filling a low red bowl with sprigs of evergreen and the large cones from the pine. Place a sprig of evergreen in each gift package that you tie with festive ribbons and put at each place. Tie each package differently, using red and silver and white as the main colors to contrast with your mass of green. If you don't wish to go to the expense of a gift for each one at the table, use funny toys, amusing puzzles or what you will, so long as it comes in a Christmas package.

Make your menu a symphony of red and green foods which are gay with Christmas flavor. Here is a suggestion for it, the recipes serving eight persons:

CHRISTMAS DINNER MENU

Stuffed Olives Spiced Crabapples
Hot Tomato Juice
Roast Turkey or Chicken with Mushroom Stuffing
Mashed Potatoes Giblet Gravy
Brussels Sprouts with Drawn Butter
Cranberry Sauce
Holly Berry Salad
Mince-Meat Ice Cream
Cordial Drops Coffee Nuts

Hot Tomato Juice: Combine the following ingredients and bring to boiling: contents of two 15-ounce cans of tomato juice, two bouillon cubes, one and one-half cups water, salt and pepper to taste and a few drops of Worcestershire sauce. Serve in cups with a sprinkling of minced parsley on top.

Mushroom Stuffing: Saute for a few minutes in four tablespoons butter four tablespoons chopped onion and mushrooms from one 4-ounce can of mushrooms which have been chopped up. Add to one and one-half quarts of dry bread. Then add two teaspoons salt, one-half teaspoon pepper, two teaspoons sage and one teaspoon thyme. Moisten with the mushroom liquor and as much water as is needed. This is enough to stuff a four to five pound chicken, and the ingredients should be doubled for stuffing a large turkey.

Holly Berry Salad: Drain beets from a No. 2 can of whole or rosebud beets, and scoop out the centers. Cover with French dressing and let stand several hours in the refrigerator. Meanwhile chop two hard-cooked eggs, season with salt and pepper and moisten with mayonnaise. Drain the beets, stuff with egg filling and arrange three or four in a wreath of watercress which has been dipped in French dressing.

Mince-Meat Ice Cream: Beat two egg yolks slightly, add one tablespoon flour which has been mixed with one-third cup sugar, then add the contents of one 6-ounce can of evaporated milk which has been scalded with one-half cup of water. Return to the double boiler and cook until it coats the spoon, stirring all the time. Cool. Freeze to a mush in refrigerator trays, stirring now and then. Add one and one-half cups of cream which has been beaten and one cup of canned mince-meat. Freeze again, stirring several times. Or the mixture may be frozen in an ice cream freezer with salt and ice.*

SUPPLEMENT TO HOLT WEEKLY NEWS, HOLT, MINNESOTA

OFFICIAL PROCEEDINGS

OF THE BOARD OF COUNTY COMMISSIONERS OF MARSHALL COUNTY, MINNESOTA

Adjourned meeting held December 7th and 8th, 1937.

Meeting was called to order by the Chairman at Ten o'clock A. M. All members were present.

Minutes of November 2nd and 3rd, 1937 were read and approved.

A delegation representing the Eastern Marshall County Protective League appeared before the Board and requested the passage of resolution which follows:

Commissioner O. J. Johnson offered the following resolution and moved its adoption:

WHEREAS, In 1896 that large portion of eastern Marshall County lying in the water sheds of Thief River and Moose River and east of the channel of Thief River was opened for homestead entry and thereafter settled in part by farmers who have established excellent, improved farms and have promoted a successful agriculture specialzing in the growing of oats, barley rye, flax, alfalfa, sweet clover and their seeds and other tame grasses and the breeding of sheep and dairy cattle and have developed highways, drainage systems, schools and churches, the thriving centers of Gatzke and Grygla where are successful cooperative creameries and market places, and,

WHEREAS, The drainage of this vast area and adjoining areas to the east was accomplished by the natural water courses and public drainage systems emptying into Thief Lake or Thief River by way of Mud Lake and southerly routes and costing approximately a million dollars; but the full benefits of such drainage did not materialize as fast as the bonds and assesments became due and the financial and agricultural depression following 1921 accelerated tax delinquency and a threat of default by Marshall County in the payment of its drainage bonds, and,

WHEREAS, Following precedents established in other counties in similar cases, the State of Minnesota assumed the payment of such drainage bonds as they became due and the control of this vast area, subject however to limitations imposed by the Federal and State constitutions and laws, particular reference being made to Section 3 of Chapter 402, Session Laws of 1933 and thereafter the State of Minnesota did establish the Thief Lake Hunting and Shooting Grounds in the basin of Thief Lake and lower Moose River valley and later acquired, for use by the United States, by eminent domain, over 62,000 acres in the Mud Lake area of Thief River valley, both of such projects lying in the natural and artificial water courses of the area which have been and are now being obstructed by dams for the impounding of such drainage waters, and,

WHEREAS, The greater part of such area is underlaid by a hardpan formed by chemical action of humous acid upon the rich deposits of lime and iron in the soil, the overlaying soil being a fertile marl, and the lands being very level and impounding of waters or obstruction to the natural and artificial drainage systems results in a permanent and injurious rise in the watertable under private lands as well and also increases the flood hazard in times of heavy rain fall or the melting of the winter's snows, and,

HEREAS, During the past season it was clearly proved that these government projects together wih the federal project in the upper reaches of the drainage systems extending into Beltrami County has resulted in extensive flooding of lands and public highways, filling of basements, destroying of thousands of acres of valuable crops and creating of an insect pestilence, making life for man and beast miserable indeed, and the State of Minnesota is put to great expense in providing the necessary relief of those in distress, and,

WHEREAS, A large number of small dams have been constructed throughout the drainage system lying to the east of Thief Lake and Mud Lake which have caused the water to be diverted from their natural channels and from the drainage ditches across the farm areas, destroying crops and flooding hay lands;

NOW, THEREFORE, BE IT RESOLVED, By the Board of County Commissioners of Marshall County, Minnesota, in session this 7th day of December, A. D. 1937:

1. That we join with the owners and settlers in the area effected in protest against any and every invasion of their constitutional and legal rights.
2. That we recommend that dams, spillways or their flood control devises be constructed so as to maintain impounded waters within the basin of Thief Lake proper and Mud Lake proper and the channel of Moose River proper, and that we object to the flooding of areas adjacent thereto.
3. That we object to the construction and maintenance of a series of small dams throughout the drainage system of eastern Marshall County and western Beltrami County without proper flood control gates.
4. That we recommend the State Land Use Committee classify as agricultural lands all public and private lands in such area suitable for such use and encourage the development and use of the same as such.
5. That we believe reservoirs for conservation of water supply for communities down the Red Lake River and Red River can be better established in those narrow and deep vallies adjacent to the ceners of population than in the flat areas in eastern Marshall County:
6. That a copy of this resolution be sent to Governor Elmer A. Benson, Commissioner of Conservation Herman C. Wenzel, the Chief of U. S. Biological Survey, our Senators and Representatives in Congress and to the members of the State Legislature representing this aera.

Commissioner J. J. Pagnac seconded the motion and the same being put, was duly carried.

Commissioner O. J. Johnson offered the following resolution and moved its adopton:

Be it resolved that the Summary Statements, filing Number, No. 5 for the expenditures of Flood Relief be hereby approved and the Superintendent of Highways is hereby authorized to issue time checks in the following amount: $1,238.70.

MERRY CHRISTMAS

WHAT two words on human tongue are more heart-warming than those! They not only represent a friendly greeting, but in them are summed up the whole spirit of the Yuletide—brightness and laughter, joy of living and joy of giving, health and happiness, peace on earth and good will to all men.

It is a greeting which we will hear often in this community of ours during these happy days of the Christmas season. We will hear it on our streets, in our stores, along our country roads and in our homes. For ours is a friendly community and nowhere is that friendly greeting more sincere. It is not possible, however, for each of us to say "Merry Christmas!" to everyone and thus complete the happy circle of Yuletide good cheer.

But there is one who has that rare privilege, one who has been a welcome visitor at the firesides of the homes in this community throughout the year and who now claims the right to be the first to wish you joy at this joyous time. That one is your Home Paper.

So your Home Paper carries from you to all the community and from all the community to you, this friendly greeting:

MERRY CHRISTMAS!

—THE PUBLISHERS

The Life Of Carl Larson

The last sad rites for Carl Larson, who died Monday, Dec. 13, were conducted at the Nazareth Lutheran Church on Saturday afternoon.

Carl Larson was born in Modum, Norway on June 22, 1854 and at the time of his death had reached the age of 83 years, 5 months and 21 days.

He emigrated to United States via Port Huron, Canada in June 1869, coming to Chippewa County, Wisconsin. On Dec. 22, 1883, he was married to Miss Eline Saastad. After residing in Eau Claire' Wisconsin for a time they moved to Marshall county and settled on their homestead east of Holt where he lived for 51 years until his death. To this happy union, seven children were born; Olga, who died in 1919; Clarence, residing on the old homestead at whose home he died; Ludvig, Bernard and Arthur, all of Holt; Mrs. Tharaldson of Goodridge and Mrs. E. Tollefson of Silvertson, Oregon. Mrs. Larson preceded him in death on Dec. 22, 1921. There are also 18 grandchildren to mourn his passing. He was a life long member of the Nazareth Lutheran Church.

Don't Ruin A Merry Christmas

"Don't ruin a Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year for yourself, your family or your neighbor by a needless automobile accident during the holidays."

So counsels N. W. Elsberg, state highway commissioner, in a public reminder that in later December and early January in Minnesota icy surfaces and poorer vision are generally encountered.

"Consider that during the Christmas season almost every motorist you meet on the highway has a family and friends awaiting his arrival at home," Commissioner Elsberg said, "and consider, too, that this means heavy travel by holiday-bound traffic at a time when roads and weather are far from their best. Extra caution is needed as regardless of Christmas or New Years, death and injury take no holiday and a time of family reunion and general festivity can be turned into tragedy and sorrow by one heedless moment at the wheel of your car."

In the past, Commissioner Elsberg pointed out, the holiday season has been marked by increased traffiic fatalities. In 1935 27 persons were killed and in 1936, 22 died as the result of accidents. Excessive speed, driving on the wrong side of the road, driving while drunk and illegal passing accounted for 61 per cent of the holiday season traffic deaths in the last two years, highway records revealed.

Commissioner Elsberg also said that he was gratified at the sharp decrease this year in requests for the placement of Christmas trees and other festive decorations on trunk highways. He said it indicated that safety consciousness is growing and that the public is becoming aware that obstructions such as Christmas trees at intersections only make for accidents by creating hazards and by attracting children to dangerous scenes.

Annual Church Meeting

The Annual Meeting of the Evangelical Free Church in Holt will be held Monday Dec. 27th at 2 o'clock p. m.

T. B. Folden, Sec'y.

Club Held Court Of Honor

On Monday evening of last week a court of honor was held for the local boy scout troop at the Men's club meeting at the Nazareth Lutheran church. W. H. Holbrook of Warrer, a member of the scout troop committee there came over and gave a fine talk at the meeting. He gave the local troop a lot of credit for what they had accomplished an stated that they were the only troop in the district which was fully uniformed. This he also gave the local scoutmaster, Hartley Peterson, a lot of credit for.

It was decided at this meeting to discontinue Men's club meetings during the winter months and the first meeting will be next April.

Circles Hold Christmas Party

The members of Ladies Aid circles 5 and 6 of the Nazareth Lutheran church held a joint meeting of their circles and a Christmas party at the church parlors on Monday evening. At the business meeting they reorganized the two circles into three circles of about ten members each. The new circle will be No. 7 of the Ladies Aid.

Mrs. Geo. Fricker and children left Sunday for the home of her parents at Chisholm to spend the holidays.

Buses Must Show Signs

That some school buses are operating without the required "school bus" signs in front and rear has been brought to attention of officers of the Highway patrol of the Minnesota Highway department and patrolmen in all districts are being instructed to see that all school buses are safely and properly posted.

Under the rules and regulations promulgated by N. W. Elsberg, state highway commissioner, and the State Board of Education, school buses are required to carry "school bus" signs both front and rear with lettering at least six inches high, seven-eights of an inch wide and painted in black on an orange back-ground. In the case of privately owned buses, however, under the school bus code, the letters should be removaele or of the type that can be covered when the vehicle is being used for purposes other than transport of school children.

The public is alo reminded by the Highway patrol that under the uniform traffic act, any vehicle meeting or overtaking a school bus which has stopped to take on or discharge pupils shall pass such a bus at a speed not over 10 miles an hour. This provision, obviously is to protect school children on the highways.

Favorite Recipe of the Week

Fruit Cobblers Suited to Cold Weather.

FRUIT cobblers combine fruit and a simple cake batter to make a de luxe dessert which is especially suited to cold weather when hearty foods touch the hungry spot and when it is a real joy to have the oven going.

Of the many canned fruits that might be used start with the favorite of the family, whether it be apricots, peaches, loganberries, cherries or what have you. The syrup from the fruit can be used as the sauce for the cobbler just as it is, or it can be thickened and extra seasonings added, such as a bit of cinnamon, lemon or nutmeg. The sauce may be hot or cold, but it really tastes better hot.

If you do not have a recipe for the batter part, try this one:

1 egg
½ cup sugar
1 cup flour
1 tsp. baking powder
¼ cup milk
1 tsp. vanilla
¼ cup melted shortening (not hot)
2 cups drained canned fruit

Cover the bottom of a greased baking pan with the drained canned fruit. Beat the egg well, and beat in the sugar. Sift flour with the baking powder and add alternately to egg mixture with the milk. Add vanilla, melted fat (butter will give excellent flavor, but any fat can be used), and beat thoroughly. Pour over the fruit and bake in a moderate oven (350 degrees) for about 30-40 minutes. Serve warm with the hot syrup from the fruit as suggested, or any sauce preferred. Serves 6.

HOW TO SEW

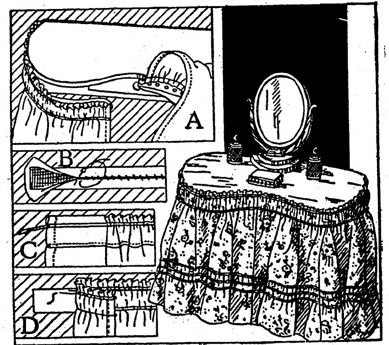
by Ruth Wyeth Spears



A Dressing Table Skirt With Corded Shirrings

THIS dressing table has a curved front and hinged arms on which to mount the skirt so that it can be opened to permit access to the drawer. To mount the skirt it must first be sewed to a band of covered buckram. Cut the buckram in a strip 2½ inches wide. Cover it with a straight piece of material as shown here at B.

Make the heading at the top of the skirt just the depth of the thickness of the table edge so that it will cover the edge of the table when the arms are closed. Use ¼-inch cable cord for the shirring. This is sewed to a safety pin and run through tucks stitched in the material as shown here at C.

The top of the ruffle is also shirred with cords. When the shirrings are all finished, sew the top of the skirt to the covered buckram strip as shown at D and then thumb tack it in place as at A.

Every Homemaker should have a copy of Mrs. Spears' new book, SEWING. Forty-eight pages of step-by-step directions for making slipcovers and dressing tables; restoring and upholstering chairs, couches; making curtains for every type of room and purpose. Making lampshades, rugs, ottomans and other useful articles for the home. Readers wishing a copy should send name and address, enclosing 25 cents, to Mrs. Spears, 210 South Desplaines St., Chicago, Illinois.

Poking Fire Bed From Above Forms Clinkers, Smothers Fire, Wastes Fuel

WHILE a poker frequently is a handy implement to use on a furnace, let me caution you against using it for the purpose of agitating the fire-bed from above! That results in a lot of trouble for you and for your furnace.

Stirring the fire through the furnace door opening only mixes ashes with the live coals, creating clinkers. As you know, clinkers choke a fire and prevent the coal from burning freely and completely. Also, they clog the grates, making it difficult to shake the fire properly.

Owing to the odd size and shape of lumps of coal at the point that is poked from above, the fuel-bed becomes packed, and this packing prevents the free passage of air, thus forming clinkers. Clinkers formed this way, however, cause less trouble, for ordinarily they can be broken up and dropped into the ashpit by gently shaking the grates.

HOUSEHOLD QUESTIONS

Salt and Pepper Shaker.—A large shaker containing six parts salt to one part pepper and kept on the stove will save steps when seasoning cooking foods.

• • •

Home-Made Flower Holder.—If you cannot buy a flower-holding frog (the stand with holes pierced in it to steady flowers in a vase) to fit an oblong vase, a block of paraffin will serve the purpose very well. Holes may be made with a heated ice pick or some other round instrument.

Watch Your Step.—Painting the bottom step of the cellar stairs white makes it more conspicuous and often helps to prevent accidents.

Lining a Coat.—When lining a coat, put the coat on inside out. Have the lining all ready stitched up, and slip it over the coat. It will fall into position naturally. Pin it in place, and finish in the usual way.

• • •

Preventing Rust in Oven.—After using the oven, leave the oven door wide open, to allow it to cool down thoroughly. This allows all moisture to escape and prevents rust.

Telling St. Nick

Their Lucky Christmas

by Luella B. Lyons

JACK and Ellen Dyson couldn't find a thing for which they could be thankful and merry this Christmas—Jack out of work and Ellen with so little in the house left for meals. But to make matters worse, shortly after Jack left, Ellen missed the emerald setting out of her ring. She hadn't worn it for a long time but it had been her greatest consolation—if the "worst came to worst"—it could be sold. And with it gone!

Jack and Ellen Joined Hands and Danced About in Their Joy.

"Five presents here and they aren't from the five and ten, either, Jack! I know, you took my emerald to buy these, didn't you?" Ellen cried out, something she would't have said had her nerves and patience not been frayed to the thin edge.

"You honestly think that of me, Ellen? If that's the way you feel, all right, think what you please!"

Neither of them realized that they were hardly accountable for their mutual lack of understanding. Tears fairly blinded Ellen as she went out to bring in the little red hen, the last member of their little flock. She kept thinking that at least this, her last offering to the holiday dinner, was honest.

Then suddenly she caught sight of the familiar emerald—there in the little red hen's insides was hidden the gem she had thought poor Jack had taken. It took but a moment or two to wash up, snatch up the emerald and dash into the workroom where she went to her knees before her husband.

"Forgive? Why, Ellen dear, it certainly did look bad for me, no wonder. If I'd not been a stubborn fool I'd have gone on and explained myself. You see, darling, on the street today I found a packet of bonds and when I returned them to their owner, he gave me twenty dollars as a reward and after he found out I was unemployed, he offered me a beginner's job in his office!"

Even an old grouch would have had to grin had he seen Jack and Ellen then join hands and dance about in their joy for a merry, lucky Christmas!

Custom of Burning Yule Log From Scandinavians

THE Christmas custom of burning the Yule log originated among the ancient Scandinavians. During the period of winter solstice, they kindled great bonfires honoring the god Thor. This was at the feast of Juul. The Saxons and the Goths also celebrated a winter festival which they called Jul, and so we derive our expression of "Yuletide," for the Christmas season.

In the time of the feudal lords, the cutting down and bringing in of the huge Yule log, or "clog" as it was then called, was a ceremony of great importance. One old writer tells us that the Yule clog "was to be lighted with a brand of the last year's log, which had been carefully laid aside for the purpose, and music was to be played during the ceremony of lighting."

CHRISTMAS AND HOW

A Carol for Santa

A Christmas Reconciliation

by Helen Waterman

MARY and John had quarreled—just before Christmas, too. The Christmas candy had burned, and then, in the excitement, each had blamed the other, making cruel retorts, until Mary fled to her bedroom in tears and John stalked off in the snowy night.

The Christmas candle beamed a welcome from the window as John started around the block again. He was cold, and sorry, but he mustn't go in too soon.

The tree, the holly, their little girl asleep in her crib and dreaming of Santa Claus—all were a mockery. Mary went into the living room and snapped on the radio, looking for a jazz band and forgetfulness. Instead there came the strains of "Silent Night"—"peace on earth, good will to men,"—"God bless us, every one"—"may nothing you dismay." Wasn't there anything on except Christmas programs? A click brought back the silence.

She opened the front door. Next time she would ask John to come in. Tell him she was sorry. Now that she stopped to think, she knew that he was sorry, too. Why let a few excited words that neither of them meant spoil their Christmas?

But John did not come. It was too cold to stand at the door any longer, but she sat at the window, with the curtain drawn aside, watching for him. An hour went by.

When at last she saw him coming the relief almost choked her. He was striding rapidly, carrying something in his arms. She opened the door for him and he handed his burden to her.

"Here, Mary, hold him. Careful, now. His leg's hurt. I'll get a box and we'll fix a bed."

Mary looked down at the warm bundle. It was a furry puppy. One leg was in splints. The puppy whimpered a little and licked her hand.

"But, John, where did you get him?"

"Accident. Over on Linden. Fell out of a passing car. I took him to a vet and had him fixed up. Thought he'd make a cute pet for Alice—" He stopped his work and straightened up. "I'm awfully sorry, Mary. I was a fool."

"It was my fault, John." Their eyes met in perfect understanding. How silly to quarrel. The silence was a more impressive reconciliation than words. Mary broke it nervously, for fear she would cry again. "There are some clean rags in that drawer. And we ought to get him something to eat. He can have this old bowl for his dish." She worked with one hand, cuddling the puppy. "Won't Alice be surprised? And what shall we name him?"

"Ought to have some connection with Christmas eve, don't you think, How about Scrooge, or Marlow?"

"Oh, no!"

"Good King Wenceslaus?"

"Such names for a poor innocent puppy! Maybe we had better see what Alice wants to call him in the morning." She put the puppy down with a saucer of warm milk. John came and put his arm around her, and they stood close together watching their pet lap greedily.

"We ought to call him Peacemaker, honey," said John. "If it hadn't been for him, I might have still been out there in the snow."

"Oh, John!" She held him close. "Weren't we silly? I was so worried when you didn't come. If anything had happened to you I could never have forgiven myself."

"Felt pretty rotten myself. Not my idea of the best way to spend Christmas eve."

"Of course! I forgot! We have so much left to do! The tree, and Alice's doll must be unpacked, and her stocking filled. What time is it?"

He looked at his watch. "Almost midnight."

"Not really!"

He nodded, and put his watch on the table. "Here, pooch," he said, "it's bedtime for you." He lifted the puppy into its bed, and turned back to his wife. "And as for you, milady," he said, "in about ten seconds I want a kiss for Christmas, and then we're going to pitch in together and clean up this mess, and trim the tree, and maybe even chance another batch of candy. OK? Then, it's time, darling, to say Merry, Merry Christmas."

Catch Up on Chic

IF YOU'RE a bit behind in the thrilling game of Sew-Your-Own, Milady, why not take advantage of the holiday season and catch up? Today's trio is especially right for "vacation sewing" because it consists of simple practical pieces that require little time and trouble. Make all three and you'll have gone a long way toward putting the old punch back in the game.

Streamlined Styling.

The slip at the left is all you could wish for from the standpoint of styling. It offers superb lines from the moderately low cut V neck, through the dart-fitted waist right down to the very hem. The clever overlapping back is light proof and provides an action pleat so necessary for complete satisfaction. Important, too, is the fact that you may choose the material you wish in your own color. Better make it in duplicate for many meticulous months ahead.

Pretty in Sheer Wool.

The two-piece in the center is, like the slip, heavy on style. The defined waist is effectively young as is the flowing skirt and little round collar. It is just the frock to give one lots of git-up-and-git for the second semester, or "to break the ice" whenever one is anxious about one's appearance. It can be the height of chic in sheer wool—very pretty in flat crepe.

Modern Home Dress.

When it's home you're thinking of you naturally turn to a frock like the third member of the trio at the right. This button-all-the-way model is different enough to delight you and simple enough to set you sewing at sight. It is cut for comfort but with an ever watchful eye on that elusive little thing called chic. Crisp contrast may be had in the collar and cuffs and in that trim row of buttons that march down the line—and then back again. Look fresh in your version in pretty percale.

The Patterns.

Pattern 1946 is designed for sizes 14 to 20 (32 to 44 bust). Size 16 requires 3¼ yards of 39 inch fabric. One yard of ribbon is required for shoulder straps.

Pattern 1404 is designed for sizes 12 to 20 (30 to 38 bust). Size 14 requires 4⅛ yards of 39 inch material.

Pattern 1390 is designed for sizes 34 to 48. Size 36 requires 4⅝ yards of 35 inch material. The collar and cuffs in contrast require 1¼ yards material.

Send your order to The Sewing Circle Pattern Dept., Room 1020, 211 W. Wacker Dr., Chicago, Ill. Price of patterns, 15 cents (in coins) each.

In the National theater of Mexico City, known as the Palacio de Bellas Artes, a huge glass curtain executed by Tiffany of New York, is one of its most striking features, and is perhaps the only one of its kind in the world. It is composed of thousands of pieces of vari-colored glass and the novel lighting arrangement reveals the snow-crowned volcanoes, Popocatepetl and Ixtaccihuatl, at sunrise, midday and sunset.

Are Women Better Shoppers than Men?
GRANTING a woman's reputation for wise buying, let's trace the methods by which she has earned it. Where does she find out about the advantages and details of electrical refrigeration? What tells her how to keep the whole household clean — rugs, floors, bathroom tiling — and have energy left over for golf and parties? Where does she discover those subtleties of dress and make-up that a man appreciates but never understands?
Why, she reads the advertisements. She is a consistent, thoughtful reader of advertisements, because she has found that she can believe them — and profit thereby. Overlooking the advertisements would be depriving herself of data continuously useful in her job of Purchasing Agent to the Family.
For that matter, watch a wise man buy a car or a suit or an insurance policy. Not a bad shopper himself! He reads advertisements, too!

For the thirty-first year, the tuberculosis Christmas seal gives everyone an opportunity to help in the fight against tuberculosis. Thirty years ago two hundred people out of every one hundred thousand in the United States were dying of tuberculosis. Today, the death rate has been cut more than two-thirds.

Einar Holboell, a Danish postal clerk, in 1904 conceived the idea of selling a penny stamp to raise money for a hospital for children sick with tuberculosis. Holboell's idea now circles the world. The first tuberculosis seal sale in the United States was held in 1907 at Wilmington, Delaware.

$50,000 For Flood Relief

Northern Minnesota farmers had something to be thankful for this Christmas, after the state executive council appropriated $50,000 for flood relief for needy farmers in Pennington, Marshall, Lake of the Woods, Beltrami, Itasca, and Roseau counties.

Following an investigation authorized by Governor Benson into the extent of damage incurred by heavy rains last August, the relief was extended from a special 'calamity" fund. Commissioner of Agriculture Charles Ommodt has appointed Walter Johnson of New York Mills, a dairy farmer, to take active charge of distribution.

"Our purpose is to save foundation herds of dairy farmers" said Governor Benson. "It will be cheaper for the state to save these herds than to make permanent relief clients out of farmers."

Large Crowd At Festival

A large crowd attended the Christmas Tree Festival and program given by the Sunday School at the Nazareth Lutheran Church. The story of the Christ Child was portrayed in a pageant entitled "This Holy Night" and was made beautiful with colored spot lights. There were several solos, group songs, recitatations and readings rendered.

Clara Engebretson came Friday to spend the Christmas holidays with home folks.

Ellestad-Sedlacek Wedding

A pretty wedding ceremony was solemnized Sunday Dec. 19, when Miss Gladys Ellenora Ellestad, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Tollef Ellestad of Spring Grove, became the bride of Mr. Charles John Sedlacek, son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Sedlacek. Rev. O. M. Mikkelson read the ceremony, which took place at four-thirty p. m.

The bride was attended by Miss Bess Sedlacek, of Warren, a sister of the groom as bridesmaid. The flower girls were Luetta Mae Ellestad and Gladys Yvonne Ellestad, neices of the bride. The groom was attended by his brother, Mr. Lawrence Sedlacek of Warren.

The bride was dressed in a beautiful tudor blue alpaca gown and wore a corsage of pink roses and yellow pompons. The bridesmaid wore a maroon faille dress with a corsage of talisman roses and rust color pompons. The flower girls wore royal blue and ruby red taffeta dresses and carried bequets of white pompons.

Following the ceremony a five o'clock buffet supper was served at the home of the bride's parents to which fifty relatives and friends were invited. The bridal cake was a delicious three tiered fruit cake which centered the table.

The bride has been teaching the past years in Marshall County schools.

Mr. and Mrs. Cnarles Sedlacek left on Wednesday for Warren where they will reside on the groom's farm.

FRIDAY LAST DAY FOR LEGAL FISHING

Friday is the final day for taking game fish in Minnesota waters. After December 31st, the order closing all inland waters to fishing becomes effective.

"The closing order was invoked," says Conservation Commissioner Herman Wenzel, "after a survey conducted by expert fish culturists, both from within the state, and from the United States Bureau of Fisheries, had shown that from 75 per cent to 90 per cent of the fish taken in winter time are females heavy with spawn."

Northwest School News

The winter term at the Northwest School of Agriculture at Crookston opens with Registration Day on Monday, January 5. Superintendent T. M. McCall states that the increased interest in vocational training in Agriculture, Home Economics and Business Training will result in at least twenty percent increases in attendance over the all-time high record of 1936. With the record of enrollment of 440 for the fall term, a new record near the 500 mark is expected for the winter term.

A large amount of new equipment in home economics, agricultural engineering, advanced business and general agricultural courses together with visual education equipment has modernized the work of all departments. J. W. Mlinar, registrar and chairman of the housing committee states that dormitory facilities at the school supplemented by supervised dormitory accommodations in Crookston will be adequate to care for the increased enrollment.

The enrollment figures of students by counties released by Registrar J. W. Mlinar show students from eighteen counties of Minnesota and three counties of North Dakota.

Polk County leads the list with 154 students with Marshall and Kittson tying for second place with 44 students each, followed in order with Norman-27, Lake of the Woods-24, Roseau-23, Becker and Pennington-21 each. Counties with less than twenty students includes: Ottertail, Mahnomen, Red Lake, Clearwater, Clay, Beltrami, Mille Lac, Todd, Grant, St. Louis. Trail, Scott and Grand Forks counties of North Dakota are represented by one student from each county.

Do you believe in New Year's resolutions? Whether you do or not, you love life, and because of that you ahould resolve not only to keep that life but also to protect lives of others.

Therefore why not make a good New Year's resolution for 1938 and live up to it? Here are just a few suggestions:

1. I will be a safe pedestrian.
2. I will be a safe driver by exercising care and by protecting the rights of others.
3. I will not take foolish chances.
4. I will help others to drive and walk safely.

While there could be many more resolutions added to these they will be enough if they are faithfully carried out.

Make your New Year's resolutions now to see 1933 through safely.

She was married November 2, 1885 at Brooten, Minn. to Colbjorn Thompson, and leaves to mourn her loss four daughters: Mrs. Nora Williams and Mrs. Clara Swan both of Pontiac, Mich.; Mrs. Josephine Aga of St. Paul and Mrs. Mary Johnson of Minneapolis. ## Concerns Not Moving Out

Typical of the campaign now being waged by Twin City daily newspapers to hurt the cause of labor and the liberal political movement was the story last week that two Minneapolis firms are planning to move their plants to Illinois to avoid "labor costs" and taxes. The tale was promptly and vigorously branded untrue by the officials of the two concerns themselves.

Not only did the daily press stories deliberately distort the reasons for the removals, but actual figures and necessary data was incorrectly given in order to make the story sound more sensational. The president of one firm declared: "Labor costs have absolutely nothing to do with our expanding our operations in Illinois. As a matter of fact union labor scales in our industry are higher in Illinois than in Minnesota. Our plant has already been sub-leased by another firm which I understand will maintain the same production which we are now transfering to Chicago."

Mr. and Mrs. Elling Tollefsrud left here Thursday for Iowa to visit relatives there. From there they will leave for their home at Silverton Oregon.

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Olson and family and Mr. and Mrs. Olaf Erickson visited at the Paul Olson home Sunday.

A New Year's Eve Lesson

by HELEN WATERMAN

"EVERYONE will be at the New Year's party but me," wailed Ruth, "and you promised to take me."

"I know, daughter," her father responded, "but not in such a storm."

"There probably won't be any party," Ruth's mother consoled her. "They'll have it some other time."

"Imagine a New Year's party at any other time!" Ruth laughed bitterly. "I never get any fun. Cooped up here on the farm all winter, and now when there's something doing, father backs down on his promise. Scared of the storm! Why, I wouldn't be afraid to drive over alone."

"Well, you aren't going to! All right, I guess we can make it. Go get your things."

Ruth jumped up and kissed him. Her mother's protests were scarcely heard.

Before they had gone far Ruth admitted the storm was really worse than she had realized. The snow was not very deep, but the howling winds had piled it in strange drifts that made even their own gate and the familiar road seem queer and unreal. The windshield, except where the wiper swung back and forth, was blurred, and she strained to make out the edge of the road. Her father also was having trouble.

They Stumbled On Together, Feeling Their Way.

"We'll have to turn back, Ruth," he said. "There isn't a chance. It's getting worse, too. Better to miss the New Year's party than the New Year."

"Of course, father." Ruth felt relieved.

The car swung around, the brakes jammed. The soft snow settled down under the two front wheels which hung over the edge of the road. "We're stuck, Ruth," her father said. "I doubt if I can get enough traction to back her." They got out, scraped away the snow and tried to lift the car, but one wheel was caught. Ruth shivered. "Hadn't we better hike home before this storm gets worse—and we get too cold?" asked Ruth.

Following the road proved quite a task. They stumbled on together, feeling their way, and at last the welcome lights of home showed them the right direction. "This isn't much of a New Year's eve celebration," Ruth admitted, "but it's a lesson. I'm making my New Year's resolution right now not to insist on my own way."

"That's right, honey," her dad replied, "and if you remember that, I'm sure we'll always have much happier New Years."

HOW TO SEW

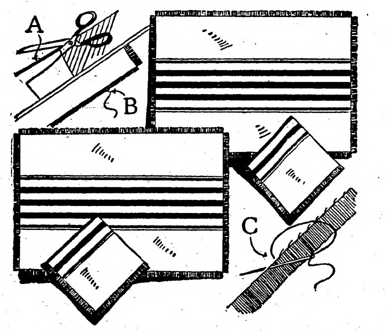
by Ruth Wyeth Spears



Make Luncheon Sets of Striped Material.

THE napkins and mats are fringed and then whipped to keep them from raveling and to strengthen the edge. This is a very quick and easy finish to use for linens of the coarser weaves and is in harmony with peasant dishes and provincial furniture.

In cutting the material for the mats and napkins it is best to pull a thread to guide you so that the edges will be perfectly straight and fringe easily. Cut right along the little opening made in the material by drawing the thread as shown at A. Plan the size of the mats and napkins so that the material will cut to good advantage and the stripes will arrange themselves in a pleasing way through the center of each piece. Napkins for this purpose may be as small as nine inches square. Mats are usually about eleven by eighteen inches.

Pull out the threads to make the fringe at the edge as I have shown here at B. From a half to three-quarters of an inch is a good depth for the fringe. Save the threads you pull out and use them for whipping the edge as I have shown here at C.

Every Homemaker should have a copy of Mrs. Spears' new book, SEWING. Forty-eight pages of step-by-step directions for making slipcovers and dressing tables; restoring and upholstering chairs, couches; making curtains for every type of room and purpose. Making lampshades, rugs, ottomans and other useful articles for the home. Readers wishing a copy should send name and address, enclosing 25 cents, to Mrs. Spears, 210 South Desplaines St., Chicago, Illinois.

Home Heating Hints

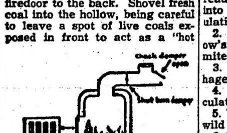
Bank Fire Only With Fresh Coal—Never Smother It With Ashes or Cinders.

THERE is no mystery about how to bank a fire for the night. I'd like to give you the easiest, simplest method I know of, so that you will have no trouble getting abundant heat in the morning.

To make room for fresh coal, shake the grates gently until you see the first red glow in the ashpit! Then pull the live coals toward the front, using a shovel or a hoe, so that the bed slopes downward from the edge of the firedoor to the back. Shovel fresh coal into the hollow, being careful to leave a spot of live coals exposed in front to act as a "hot spot" in igniting the gases given off by the fresh coal, preventing puffs and explosions.



Allow sufficient time for these gases to be exhausted before banking the fire. When this is done, close the ashpit damper, open the check damper, leaving the turn damper as nearly closed as possible. Never leave the firedoor open after the fire is banked for the night.

At a hectic political meeting where representatives of the various parties were gathered, an English politician, while addressing the assemblage, was struck full in the face with the body of a dead cat. But from the audience arose one who said: "Please, sir, I'm very sorry. I meant it for your opponent."

"Well, my friend," came the quick reply from the injured one, "I sincerely wish that you had meant it for me and it hit him."

President's "Must" Program Virtually Wrecked . . . Panay Bombing Still a Live Issue

Ambassador Hirosi Saito of Japan and Mme. Saito photographed as they were leaving the Japanese embassy in Washington for the White House to attend the state reception for the diplomatic corps. ### F.D.R.'s Program Battered CONGRESS, in virtual revolt against the administration, was on the eve of adjournment for the holidays, and the special session in its month of existence had done almost nothing in the way of carrying out the legislative program which the President had laid before it. Once again Mr. Roosevelt turned to Vice President Garner to devise salvage strategy, and summoned to the White House with the veteran Texan were Speaker Bankhead and Senator Barkley and Representative Sam Rayburn, majority leaders of the senate and house.

Vice President Garner

The topic of their discussion was what should be done with the wreckage of the five-point program in the closing days of the session and how much of it should be demanded of congress in the regular session in January.

It was hoped the new housing bill could be pushed through the senate before adjournment, having been approved by committee after passage by the house, 325 to 23. There was not much opposition to this measure, which administration leaders said would lead to the construction and sale of millions of new homes, most of them to cost about $6,000.

Crop control bills were passed by both senate and house, but they differed widely and early final enactment was impossible because the joint conference between committees of the two houses to reconcile the measures could not get into action before January.

Wage-Hour Bill Killed

WHEN the bill for regulation of wages and hours, approved by the senate in August, came up for action in the house the President suffered one of his greatest legislative defeats. Southern Democrats and the Republican minority combined to send the measure back to the labor committee, which meant its definite defeat. This bill, which would have set up an administrator with dictatorial powers over labor and business management, was considered only second in importance to the farm bill. It had the support of the C. I. O., so John Lewis shared in the defeat. The A. F. of L. had offered a substitute which was rejected, as President Green had expected it would be.

No action was taken on the President's other "must" measures, which were for revision of antitrust laws, regional planning and federal government reorganization.

Advocates of the ever-normal granary bill, which passed the senate, contend it will stabilize both prices and supplies of five major crops and so benefit farmers and consumers. Opponents not only question its efficacy but say it calls for harmful regimentation.

Nothing definite was done by congress concerning revision of the taxes which are hampering business and industry.

Cummings Accuses Judge

CONGRESS was asked by Attorney General Cummings to investigate the conduct of United States District Judge Ferdinand Geiger of Milwaukee in connection with the latter's discharge of a grand jury which was investigating the automobile finance industry.

In a letter to Chairman Sumners of the house judiciary committee Cummings charged that Geiger's conduct was "so obstructive to the administration of justice that I could not justify a failure to bring it to your knowledge."

Geiger, presiding over the Eastern Wisconsin federal district, discharged the grand jury without permitting it to report after a three months' investigation into the activities of three companies, which, Cummings said, were "identified in interest" with General Motors corporation, Ford Motor company and Chrysler corporation.

Cummings charged that the grand jury was prepared to return indictments when it was dismissed.

Panay Incident

WHILE Washington was awaiting a formal reply from Tokyo to the American notes concerning the murderous attack by Japanese airmen and machine gunners on the U. S. Gunboat Panay, it was reported that Hirohito, emperor of Japan, had taken personal charge of the matter. If true, this would be a severe blow to the all-powerful military and naval factions in the Japanese government which have been doing about as they chose. It would be an astonishing development in another way, for hitherto the "Son of Heaven" has always held himself aloof from such concerns. The Japanese cabinet was called in extraordinary session to discuss the Panay incident and determine what reply should be made to the American protests.

Hirohito

In Washington Ambassador Hirosi Saito added his voice to the many apologies offered. In a radio address he termed the bombing of the Panay and the Standard Oil ships a "shocking blunder" and said that "necessary steps are being and will be taken so that guarantees of safety will be assured all foreign persons and interests" in Japan-controlled areas of China.

Washington's second note was especially sharply worded because of the revelation that the Panay and the boats carrying its dead and wounded to shore were fired upon by machine gunners in Japanese army boats. The stories of the survivors, including several newspaper men, and motion pictures of the attack were all in the hands of the American officials and seemed irrefutable, although General Harada, the Japanese military attache at Shanghai, issued a report which contradicted them in several vital particulars. It purported to be "the sum total of staff officers' investigation" of the incident.

China Won't Give Up

IN HANKOW, now the Chinese capital, high officials declared China would make no peace overtures to Japan but would fight to the end. Generalissimo Chiang Kai-Shek was perfecting a new plan for military operations.

Chinese blew up and burned most of the Japanese-owned mill area of Tsingtao, the damage being estimated at 100 million dollars. All of the 300 Americans in that city were reported safe. Three American warships were there ready to aid them if necessary.

Wire Tapping Banned

THE Supreme court ruled the 1934 communications act prohibits use in federal criminal proceedings of evidence obtained by wire-tapping.

The decision, delivered by Justice Roberts, reversed a ruling by the second Circuit court of appeals upholding the government's use of such evidence in obtaining conviction of four men on a charge of smuggling alcohol into New York. Justices Sutherland and McReynolds dissented.

War Vote Plan Blocked

OPPOSITION of President Roosevelt and Secretary of State Hull was believed to have effectually blocked the proposal of Representative Louis Ludlow for submission of a constitutional amendment requiring a popular referendum before the declaration of war except in case of invasion of the country. Ludlow obtained the necessary 218 signatures to force the house to consider the plan during the regular session, but no one expects its approval in the near future.

Liberal Coalition

UNDER the leadership of William Allen White, noted Kansas editor, a liberal coalition has been formed, representing the church, education and the general public. Its announced purpose is to protect guarantees that labor may bargain collectively and organize freely. The organization is called the "American Association for Economic Freedom" and White is temporary chairman of its policy board. The vice chairman is W. Jett Lauck, chief economist for the United Mine Workers and adviser to John L. Lewis' Committee for Industrial Organization.

Frank To Help G.O.P.

DR. GLENN FRANK, former president of the University of Wisconsin, was selected to be chairman of a committee to draft a new charter for the Republican party. He said he probably would accept this job of formulating the party's policies, and National Chairman Hamilton said the committee would be an absolutely independent agency of the party. Many members of the committee have been named by the executive committee of the national committee.

Frank is identified with the liberal wing of the G. O. P., but he is not friendly with the La Follettes of Wisconsin, since they forced him out of his post at the university. His political and economic views suit Hoover and Landon and many of the party leaders of both the West and the East.

Ambassador Bingham Dies

ROBERT WORTH BINGHAM, American ambassador to Great Britain, died in Johns Hopkins hospital, Baltimore, of a rare abdominal ailment. He was sixty-six years of age and already had submitted his resignation because of ill health. Mr. Bingham was one of President Roosevelt's first diplomatic appointees. Previously he had gained considerable fame as a newspaper publisher in Louisville, Ky. His body was taken to that city for burial and lay in state in the Kentucky capitol in Frankfort. King George and Queen Elizabeth of Great Britain cabled a message of condolence.

Another notable death was that of Gen. Erich Von Ludendorff, German commander in the World war, at Munich. He won international fame as Von Hindenburg's chief of staff on both the eastern and western fronts and then was made chief quartermaster general of the German army. Just before the war ended he quarreled with the kaiser and was dismissed from his post. In his later years the embittered old warrior attacked all factions in Germany, though friendly relations with the Hohenzollerns were reestablished on his seventieth birthday.

Farm Income Larger

IF THE statisticians of the Department of Agriculture are right, the farmers of the United States have had a pretty good year. They estimate the cash income from crops and livestock for 1937 at approximately $8,500,000,000 compared with $7,920,000,000 in 1936. This increase of $580,000,000, the department said, is in spite of the fact that prices for farm products were lower.

The better yields which farmers had on virtually every major crop, combined with increased income through government soil conservation and benefit payments, were responsible for the increase in total cash payments. Government subsidies totaled $380,000,000, compared with $287,000,000 in 1936.

Farmers' cash income for 1937 was the largest since the 1929 boom year, when income was $10,479,000,000, and about twice the 1932 income of $4,328,000,000, which was the low since 1924.

U.A.W. War Chest

OFFICIALS of the United Automobile Workers said in Detroit that all resources of the union were being concentrated in a half-million-dollar war chest for the organization of the Ford Motor company employees. All union members who work five or more days a month are being assessed $1 and international officers and organizers are asked to donate 10 per cent of their salaries.

AROUND THE HOUSE

Egg Celery Sandwich. — Chop hard-cooked eggs up fine and season them with salt and pepper. Add half as much finely chopped celery and enough mayonnaise to make the mixture easy to spread.

• • •

Removing Ink From Carpet.—Carpets stained with ink should be treated at once with salt. After removing the soiled salt, rub with a cut lemon and finally sponge with warm water.

• • •

Wax Linoleum. — Linoleum wears better if it is polished with floor wax instead of washed. The wax preserves and hardens and gives a good polish.

• • •

Save Chicken Fat.—Chicken fat may be used as a butter substitute in cooking. Consequently, it is a good plan to save the fat from boiled, stewed or fried chicken.

• • •

Washing Window Shades. — Soiled window shades may be washed by spreading each shade on a flat surface and then rubbing it with a clean cloth or sponge and soapsuds.

• • •

Polishing Furniture.—That foggy appearance on highly polished furniture can be removed by sponging with a cloth dipped in a solution of one quart clear water and two tablespoons of vinegar, wiping dry with another cloth and rubbing.

• • •

Saving Leather Chair. — The comfortable old leather chair that was sent to the attic years ago because the leather had finally become shabby can be made usable again if the worn part is concealed by a slip-cover. If it is covered in nice, dark blue the chair may be used winter and summer.

Safe Pleasant Way To Lose Fat

How would you like to lose 15 pounds of fat in a month and at the same time increase your energy and improve your health?

How would you like to lose your double chin and your too prominent hips and at the same time make your skin so clean and clear that it will compel admiration?

How would you like to get your weight down to normal and at the same time develop that urge for activity that makes work a pleasure and also gain in ambition and keenness of mind?

Get on the scales today and see how much you weigh—then get a bottle of Kruschen Salts which will last you for 4 weeks and costs but a trifle. Take one-half teaspoonful every morning—modify your diet—get a little regular gentle exercise—and when you have finished the contents of this first bottle weigh yourself again.

Now you will know the pleasant way to lose unsightly fat and you'll also know that the 6 salts of Kruschen have presented you with glorious health.

But be sure for your health's sake that you ask for and get Kruschen Salts. Get them at any drugstore in the world and if the results one bottle brings do not delight you—do not joyfully satisfy you—why money back.

Let's go to town —at home!

NO TELLING what tomorrow's weather may be. It fools the best forecaster. But we do want chintz for the windows. We do need a carpet sweeper, a new percolator, and a new end-table in the living-room. And we don't want to slosh around rainy streets to hunt them. Problem: How to thwart the weather man. Simple enough! Let's sit down by the fireplace and read the advertisements. Here it's comfortable and snug. We'll take the newspaper page by page, compare prices, qualities, brand-names. Tomorrow, rain or shine, we'll head for the store that has what we want, and be home again in a jiffy.

● "Buying at home"—through the advertising columns—gives you wide selection, more time to decide, and satisfaction when you decide.

● MAKE IT ONE OF YOUR PLEASANT HABITS!

Frog Nests in Trees

A certain South American tree frog builds its nest in the trees. Two leaves are joined together to form a cup for the eggs. The young remain in this nest until they develop internal gills and then they drop into underlying water to go through their next stage of development.

Saloon Keeper's Business Card

The Ketchikan Lutheran tells about a saloon keeper in Flagstaff, Arizona, who added the following statement to his business card. No comment is necessary: "Friends and Neighbors: I am grateful for the past favors and having supplied my store witn a fine line of choice wines and liquors, allow me to inform you that I shall continue to make drunkards, paupers and beggars for the sober, industrious, respectable part of the community to support. My whiskies will excite riot, robbery and bloodshed. They will diminish your comforts, increase your expenses and shorten your life. I shall confidently recommend them as sure to multiply fatal accidents and incurable diseases. They will deprive some of life, others of reason, some of character, and all of peace. They will make fathers fiends, mothers widows, children orphans, and all poor. I will train your sons in infidelity, dissipation, ignorance, lewdness and every other vice. I will corrupt the ministers of religion, obstruct the Gospel, defile the church, and cause as much temporal and eternal death as I can. I will thus 'accommodate the public' it may be at the loss of my never-dying soul, but I have a family to support— the business pays— and the public encourages it. I have paid my license and the traffic is lawful, and if I don't sell it somebody else will. I know the Bible says: 'Thou shall not kill'. No drunkard shall 'enter the kingdom of heaven' and I do not expect the drunkard-maker to fare any better, but I want an easy living and I have resolved to gather the wages of iniquity and fatten on the ruin of my species. I shall therefore carry on my business with energy and do my best to diminish the wealth of the nation and endanger the safety of the state. As my business flourishes in proportion to your sensuality and ignorance, I will do my best to prevent moral purity and intellectual growth. Should you doubt my ability, I refer you to the pawn shops, the poor house, the police court, the hospital, the penitentiary and the gallows where you will find many of my best customers have gone. A sight of them will convince you that I do what I say. Allow me to inform you that you are fools, and I am an honest saloon keeper." From the Lutheran Reminder, Bellingham, Wash.

Storm Hit Grand Marais

One of the worst storms in many years hit Grand Marais on the north shore of Lake Superior on Friday last week. A heavy gale blew the lake water into the city so fast that the streets were covered a foot deep with icy water and a new snow slush that accompanied the hard wind. Basements were flooded and lake shore property suffered heavy damages amounting to thousands or dollars. This was the worst storm that has hit Grand Marais since 1905.

An Abandoned Cemetery

On the NW corner of the SW one-fourth of Section 25 in New Solum township is an almost forgotten cemetery. There are no monuments to mark the last resting place of a number of Marshall county pioneers and some of their children who are buried there.

This cemetery is about four miles NE of the village of Rosewood and about seven miles east of Viking on what is known as the Nels Anderson homestead. So far as we can learn there was no cemetery organization and the ownership of the plot apparently rests with the present owner of the farm.

No records of this cemetery have been found but it has been learned from reliable sources that the following persons have been buried there: John H. Wolhaupt, March 15, 1888, 17 years; Mrs. Augusta Decker, May 23, 1888, 38 years and 10 months; Maick Swenkey, Oct. 3, 1889, 33 years; Emma T. Wolhaupt, June 4th, 1890, 9 years, 10 months, 25 days; Edward Rux, Sept. 28, 1893, 7 months, 15 days; Mrs. Margtalena Wolhaupt, Oct. 25, 1893, 43 years, 10 months, 18 days; Louis A. Anderson, April 10, 1895, 3 years, 5 months, 23 days; Alfred J. Anderson, Jan. 29, 1896, 3 months, 23 days; Walter H. Schwartz, July 19, 1899, 3 months; August Zimmerman, Aug. 1, 1902, 77 years, 1 month, 27 days; John Rux, Sept 3rd, 1909, 75 years, 9 months, 10 days; Jeffie Buckholz, Sept. 15, 1889, 1 year, 5 months and 3 days.

There is another grave just across the road on the NE corner of the SE one-fourth of Section 26 where Mr. and Mrs. Joahen Meieyer once lived and where their baby was buried. We have not been able to learn the date of death or exact age at time of death. The site was marked by a lilac bush planted near the grave.

The above information was obtained from Mr. and Mrs. John Haider, Newfolden, Minn.; Lawrence Anderson, Angus, Minn.; Mrs. Fred Heiser, Albany, Ore.; Mrs. Louise Cleemen, Miles City, Mont.; Mrs. Albin Knauf, Thief River Falls, Minn.; also the county records at Warren.
Investigator: S. D. Lincoln.
Date: Dec. 23, 1937.

Circles Have Annual Meetings

Circle 2 of the Nazareth Lutheran Ladies Aid met at the Ole Lunke home on Wednesday afternoon. During the business session the following were elected officers: Mrs. Alfred Larson, president; Mrs. A. C. Conklin, vice president; and Mrs. John Benitt, secretary-treasurer. Mrs. Ed Furr, Mrs. Ole M. Larson and Mrs. Bertil Nass were accepted as new members in that circle.

Circle 3 held its annual meeting at the Lars Ring home on Thursday Dec. 30. Mrs. Hilmer Moberg, Miss Bertha Moberg, Mrs Geo. Moberg, Ethel Vattendahl, Mrs. Knute Nelson and Mrs Chas. Wilson became members of that circle. Election of officers took place resulting in the election of Mrs. Hjalmer Johnson, president; Mrs. Anton Peterson, vice president and Mrs Geo. Johnson as Secretary-Treasurer. This circle has moved geographically as the members used to live in the Mud Lake Area but are now residing near Holt and so close together as to continue their circle work efficiently.

Annual Telephone Meeting

The annual meeting of the Excell Telephone Co., the North Holt Telephone Co., and the Farmers and Village Switchboard Co. will be held at Holt on Friday, January 14, 1938, at 12:30 o'clock p. m. for the purpose of electing officers for the different companies and to transact any other business that may come before said meeting.

It is absolutely necessary that all members of the various companies be present at this meeting

FEW PEOPLE FISH IN WINTER MONTHS

That only slightly over one per cent of the Minnesota's anglers are actively interested in winter fishing, is revealed in figures released this week by Harry E. Speakes, Director of the Game and Fish Division.

"Of the 482,383 fishing licenses sold in 1937, only 5,400 or 1.12 per cent were sold during January, February and March, indicating that this is the percentage of people who were interested in fishing during the months closed this year," said Mr. Speakes.

In Hennepin County the percentage was 1.13 and in Ramsey County only .9 percent purchased licenses during the first three months of the year.

"In the light of these figures," said Mr. Speakes, "it is obvious that those who protest the ban on winter fishing are a very small minority who are trying to prevent the Conservation Department from im proving all year fishing in Minnesota waters."

The most important thing in all the world is the thing you have in mind to do. No sane man will leave his house unlocked, windows open, a fire burning in the fireplace, the gas water heater turned on, and the electric iron still plugged in.

No safe and sane driver will leave his truck unattended unless he does the following things:

Shuts off the engine and sets the emergency brake; places it in low gear; makes sure that he is not stopped on a curve, or on a crest of a hill, or at any point where traffic can not see his vehicle from all directions.

These are some important things in driving.

"SAVE THE COMPTROLLER"

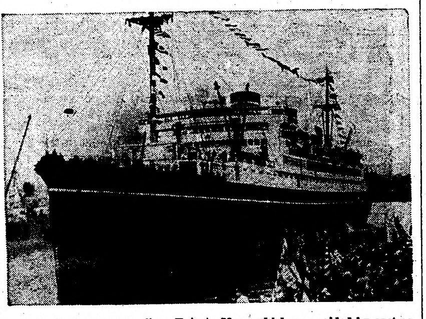
Byrd Opens Fight on the Reorganization Bill . . . Panay Incident Closed by Japan's Pledges



This is the Japanese liner Tatsuta Maru which was raided by custom agents just before she sailed from San Francisco for the Far East. The agents garnered a sheaf of letters, supposedly connected with operations at the Bremerton navy yard on Puget Sound.

Byrd in Battle Early

ONE of the big fights scheduled for the regular session of congress is to be over the President's reorganization bill, which aims, among other things, at abolishing the office of comptroller general, popularly known as the "watch dog" on federal spending. This officer is the agent of congress in seeing that expenditures are made only in accordance with law.

Senator Harry F. Byrd of Virginia, one of the Democrats who insist on economy, projected himself into the battle over this measure early by issuing a public statement in which he pointed out that the new auditor established in the measure would report to congress only after money had been spent.

This would be like locking the stable after the horse is stolen, Senator Byrd declared.

"This proposal to give the spending branch of the government a free hand with upwards of $8,000,000,000 a year strikes viciously at the vital elements of good government, good business and the general welfare," said the senator.

"In the committee hearings," he continued, "the only complaint of consequence against the comptroller general was that this official at times delayed the quick spending of public money and compelled the department heads to show that the funds were to be disbursed in accordance with the laws enacted by congress. No proof, however, was given that any expenditure was prevented when authorized by congress and made legally."

Tax Load Is Heavy

OUT of every national income dollar in 1938, the tax collector will take 20 cents. This is the ratio which has been regarded as the danger signal.

This is the declaration of a special committee of the United States Chamber of Commerce which has been studying taxation. The report estimates that the nation's tax load, federal, state and local, this year will reach a new all-time high of 13½ billion dollars. The national income, it is figured by the government, will be slightly less than the 69 billion dollar estimate for 1937.

Tax collections for 1938 on the basis of tentative estimates made by the committee, include 6 billion 400 million dollars for the federal government and 7 billions 100 million dollars for state and local governments.

Although the revenues for the federal government are estimated to reach an all-time high in 1938, there is doubt in congress that the budget can or will be balanced for the fiscal year beginning next July 1, the latest goal set by President Roosevelt.

Boomlet for Ickes

FROM Chicago comes the interesting news that friends of Secretary of the Interior Ickes have started a small boom for him as the favorite son candidate of Illinois for the presidential nomination in 1940. It is said Democratic leaders in Illinois have been approached with the plan to enter Mr. Ickes in the presidential primaries. So far there has been no enthusiastic response to the proposal for the leaders would prefer to wait for the development of other candidacies. Besides that, the secretary has been notably independent of party organization control.

Harold Ickes

Naturally, the proposal would carry no weight unless President Roosevelt makes it plain that he will follow tradition and refuse a third term. The Ickes adherents believe their man would stand a fair chance in a wide open race for the nomination, and they assert his independence would add to his strength and attract many Republicans.

Newton D. Baker Is Dead

NEWTON D. BAKER, one of the World war men who did a tremendous job well, died at his home in Cleveland, Ohio, of coronary thrombosis at the age of sixty-three years. Called to Washington in 1916 to be secretary of war in President Wilson's cabinet, Mr. Baker accomplished the great feat of mobilizing the huge American army and getting it across the Atlantic in time to be the decisive factor in winning the conflict. It was he who selected General Pershing to command the A. E. F., and counseled him to keep the American army intact.

Mr. Baker was eminent as a lawyer and a close student of international affairs. Though always a Democrat, he turned against the present administration mainly because of the Tennessee Valley authority projects and the usurpation of state rights.

Jap Pledges Accepted

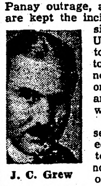
JAPAN has promised that there shall be no recurrence of the Panay outrage, and if her pledges are kept the incident may be considered closed. But Uncle Sam is going to keep close watch to see that there are no further attacks on American life and property in the war zone in China.



J. C. Grew

Ambassador Joseph C. Grew handed to Foreign Minister Koki Hirota a note from Secretary of State Hull accepting in the main Japan's amends for the destruction of the Panay and three American merchant vessels.

The American note, however, refused to accept Tokyo's explanation that the bombing of the Panay was the result of a "mistake," preferring to rely on the findings of the naval board of inquiry. The report of the board said the identity of the Panay and the three American oil tankers was unmistakable; that the attack was deliberate; that the weather was clear and the visibility perfect; that the Japanese naval planes swooped down and released their death charges on the ships flying the American flags and then fired on them with machine guns; and that Japanese river craft directed machine gun fire on life boats carrying the wounded from the Panay and other vessels.

Under a Japanese decree establishing strict regulations for the conquered areas in China, Americans and other foreigners were made subject to the death penalty for crimes against the armed forces of Japan. This seems to raise the question of treaty rights of foreign powers in China.

The spokesman for the Japanese embassy in Shanghai announced the complete occupation of Tsinan, capital of Shantung province.

Unemployment Grows

ACCORDING to the Works Progress administration, 2,000,000 persons have lost their jobs since September 1 and 1,000,000 more may be out of work by the end of February.

The estimate was made by Leon Henderson, consulting economist, while a staff of federal employees was speeding compilation of the mailman census of the unemployed made more than a month ago. It was conceded that if the unemployed are increasing at the rate indicated in the Henderson estimate the post card census will be worthless as a basis for attacking the unemployment problem.

Monopolists Blamed

BLAME for the business slump was placed at the door of monopolists by Assistant Attorney General Robert H. Jackson, and he uttered a warning that government spending would be increased unless prices are brought more in line with consumers' income.

Jackson, head of the Justice department's anti-trust division, said that the impression that steep price increases are traceable to wage boosts resulting from the growth of labor unions is "not accurate—or at the most, only half accurate." As an example he cited the steel industry, where wages, he said, were increased 10 per cent and prices were tilted 21 per cent from December 1, 1936, to March 1, 1937.

Wheeler's Rail Plans

SEN. BURTON K. WHEELER of Montana said in Washington that he would soon lay before President Roosevelt a plan to "stabilize" the railroads.

Wheeler, who is chairman of the senate interstate commerce committee which has been investigating the railroads, said his proposals will be based on the committee's findings. He did not indicate what would be proposed, but said he would call on the President to "see if we can't work out some constructive legislation." Recently Wheeler said it might be necessary to broaden the powers of the interstate commerce commission so that it could force co-ordination and consolidation of railroads.

Mme. Perkins "Not Biased"

IN HER annual report to congress Mme. Frances Perkins, secretary of labor, denied the frequently heard charge that she is prejudiced in favor of John Lewis and his Committee for Industrial Organization. She said her department had followed a strict rule of impartiality.

Mme. Perkins

Mme. Perkins also told congress the nation wants Lewis and Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, to stop bickering and permit labor to present a united front.

The secretary defended the national labor relations board and urged employers to get rid of their misconceptions of the Wagner act.

The Ford Motor company, ordered by the labor relations board to reinstate 29 discharged employees and to cease anti-union activities, prepared a legal campaign of resistance, and it also spurned overtures from the United Automobile Workers of America.

From Kansas City, Homer Martin, international president of the U. A. W. A., telegraphed a request to Harry H. Bennett, Ford personnel director, for a conference to promote industrial peace and proper labor relations.

"If I answered Martin's telegram —which I have no intention of doing —my reply would be phooey," Bennett commented.

Convention Book O.K.

ATTORNEY GENERAL HOMER S. CUMMINGS said that criminal prosecutions against the Democratic national committee for selling souvenir convention books to corporations "would not be warranted." He made this decision in reply to Representative B. H. Snell who complained that the committee had violated the corrupt practices act when it sold such books, autographed by President Roosevelt, for as high as $250 each and obtained more than $400,000 for the party's coffers.

Cummings said, however, in his letter to Snell, that the act was too lax and that shortly he would recommend to congress amendatory legislation to make it more effective in important particulars.

By Air to New Zealand

PAN-AMERICAN AIRWAYS' big flying boat, the Samoan Clipper, landed at Auckland, New Zealand, completing the last phase of its flight from Honolulu to the southern terminus of the new ocean air line. Capt. Edwin C. Musick and the crew of seven logged 1,180 miles in 12 hours 7 minutes. The clipper remained in Auckland only a few days and then started on its return trip to Honolulu with mail and express.

Spanish Loyalist Victory

SPANISH government forces won a decided victory by capturing Teruel, the key point of the rebel salient into loyalist territory 135 miles east of Madrid. The place had been besieged for seven days and losses were heavy on both sides. Madrid hailed this as the greatest loyalist victory of the whole war.

Labor Peace Parley Ends

THERE will be no early peace between the American Federation of Labor and the C. I. O. The negotiations in Washington came to a sudden end when the federation's representatives refused to consider anything but unconditional surrender of the Lewis forces, which the C. I. O. men scornfully rejected.

The strategy of Green and his lieutenants was dictated by information that the C. I. O. was on the verge of bankruptcy, that its ranks were torn by dissension over the communist element

It is one of those so-simple, so-sweet little affairs that every mother and every daughter has a weakness for. The new prints or criss-cross gingham will look more than appealing on your little "forty pounds of charm," especially if the trimming is of gay red ribbon to match the bows in her hair.

Confessing Faults

HOW hard it is to confess that we have spoken without thinking, that we have talked nonsense. How many a man says a thing in haste or in heat, without fully understanding or half meaning it, and then, because he has said it, holds fast to it, and tries to defend it as if it were true! But how much wiser, how much more admirable and attractive, it is when a man has the grace to perceive and acknowledge his mistakes! It gives us assurance that he is capable of learning, or growing, of improving, so that his future will be better than his past.—Van Dyke.

We Admire the Chap Who Can Stand the Gaff

We hear of some individual who, in spite of misfortune and handicaps, has faced life with a song on his lips and who has continued the battle against disagreeable circumstances, and we profess great admiration for him; but when we are assailed with troubles, we are apt to make a great outcry about injustice. We cannot stand the gaff that hooks us for our own heedlessness.

There is some human injustice in the world, but not enough to occasion the getting out of an "Extra," with black headlines.

HOW TO SEW

by Ruth Wyeth Spears

Making a Chintz Bed Spread With Corded Seams.

WOULD you like to make a chintz bedspread to match your curtains? Of course, such a spread must have seams in it, for most chintzes are only 36 inches wide, while the average double bed is about 54 inches wide. But seams need not detract from the beauty of the spread.

Eleven and a half yards of 36-inch-wide chintz will make this spread and pillow cover for a double bed. In the diagrams at the right I have given the dimensions for cutting these for a 54-inch-wide bed. It is best to cut the center portions first; then cut the 18-inch side sections for the pillow cover; then the 10-inch strips for pillow cover and spread. This leaves a long 26-inch-wide strip for the side ruffles of the spread.

Cable cord for the corded seams may be purchased at notion counters. Prepared bias trimming may be used for the cord covering. Baste the covering over the cord, as shown here at A; then place the covered cord in the seam, as shown, and stitch as at B, using the cording foot of your machine.

Every Homemaker should have a copy of Mrs. Spears' new book, SEWING. Forty-eight pages of step-by-step directions for making slipcovers and dressing tables; restoring and upholstering chairs, couches; making curtains for every type of room and purpose. Making lampshades, rugs, ottomans and other useful articles for the home. Readers wishing a copy should send name and address, enclosing 25 cents, to Mrs. Spears, 210 South Desplaines St., Chicago, Illinois.

New York Fair Hall to Feature Radio and Television

NEW YORK (Special).—Radio, television, movies, telephone, telegraph, photography, news and magazine print—all those factors as they relate to communications in American life—will have their own pavilion and ten-acre exhibit zone at the New York World's Fair of 1939, according to an announcement by Grover Whalen, President of the Fair Corporation.

The Hall of Communications will be built this year on the 1216½-acre exposition site within a few minutes ride from mid-town Manhattan. Its location is adjacent to that of the unique Theme Centre structures, which with their "thousand wonders" will dominate the Fair grounds. About the Hall will be grouped ten acres of buildings to be erected by private exhibitors in the communications industry, said Mr. Whalen.

Before the building will be two ultramarine pylons, 160 feet high and faced with continuous glass lighting fixtures. Features of the structure are a great hall, in which will be placed the focal exhibit summing up the role of communications in the World of Tomorrow, and a glass-walled restaurant opening onto a dining terrace and garden. The total length of the Hall of Communications will be over 400 feet. Its cost is estimated at $100,000. Numerous other Fair structures are emerging from stages of design. Construction of the exposition, however, will not reach its peak until early next year.

1939 NEW YORK FAIR'S TWO MILE AMUSEMENT LOOP

NEW YORK (Special).—"The 1939 New York World's Fair has planned to have the largest area and the greatest number and variety of amusements ever provided for any exposition in the world," announces Grover Whalen, President of the Fair Corporation, "but let it be understood, too, that we are already assured of producing a fair that will be remembered for its bold treatment of today's problems and for its pathfinding to the World of Tomorrow."

The accompanying photograph shows the design of the Fair's two-mile, 280-acre amusement zone as released at the time of Mr. Whalen's announcement. The sector is being laid out with a greater visitor capacity than that of any amusement park in the world. Following an entirely new pattern that lends itself to the development of new and novel amusement and entertainment features, the sector is featured by the two-mile looped thoroughfare, flanked on one side by a continuous facade 70 feet high and on the other by the more open and landscaped area extending to the east shore of Meadow Lake.

The upper end of the lake-shore region will be dominated by a $1,600,000 State amphitheatre with a marine stage for presentation of aquatic shows, operas, pageants and extravaganzas of all sorts. On the far side of the lake, as sketched, will be every conceivable kind of show, spectacle, device, ride, and eating place.

HOLT WEEKLY NEWS

Issued Weekly From The Home Of The Biggest Co-operative Creamery In Marshall County

Anderson Named Chairman

Arthur Anderson, fourth district commissioner from Newfolden, was elected chairman of the Marshall County Board of commissioners to serve during 1938 at the session of the board held last week at Warren.

Mr. Anderson succeeds A. W. Sommers of Radium, first district commissioner, as the head of the board. Ole Bergman, Alvarado, third district commissioner was elected vice-chairman for the coming year.

The first business the board took up was to check funds in the county treasurer's office and also drew up the list of grand and petit jurors for the spring term of district court for Marshall county.

Bids for the official county publishing were opened on the first day of the session. The bids were low and also very close with the Warren Sheaf and Stephen Messenger offiering individual bids for all publication, with the Messengers bid for the second publication of the financial statement being conditional on the acceptance of the Sheaf's bid for the first publication of the statement.

The Marshall County Star and Holt Weekly News offered one bid together. They bid to do the publishing of all official proceedings for Marshall County for 1938 for 1 cent. First publication of the financial statement for $1.00 as a complete unit and second publication at 45 cents per folio. The delinquent tax list at 10 cents per description.

Using the 1937 figures of the number of folios published as a base to compare the bids this year for low and high, the Star and Holt Weekly News had the lowest bid. The Sheaf and Messenger were awarded the county printing with the Sneaf being designated as the official paper for the coming year.

We have not so far been able to find out what the county board used as a base to figure that the Sheaf and Messenger bids were low. The bids as published in the official proceedings for January does not show they were the low bidders.

Naplin, Director of the Division of Hotel Inspecton.

Made New Attendance Record

Another new attendance record has been set in enrollment at the Northwest School of Agriculture at Crookston, when a total attendance of 464 was reached on Tuesday, January 4. Registrar J. W. Mlinar states that through the formation of new sections, class size has been kept down to good working numbers. The boys, dormitories are now filled to capacity and off campus rooming houses have been able to accommodate the over-flow from the girls' dormitories. New courses in cooking, and sewing, under the direction of Miss Retta Bede and Miss Elsie Kingston, have been organized for special home economic students. A new course in conservation will be led by a number of instructors including Supt. T. M. McCall, E. R. Clark, R. S. Dunham' A. C. Vogele, H. A. Pflughoeft, R. J. Christgau, O. M. Kieser, and also conservationist from the State department.

Squads for the livestock and crops feeding and debating teams are working out daily to earn places on their respective subcollegiate teams. Crops and livestock teams under the guidance of Professor E. R. Clark and O. M. Kiser will compete against the other sub-collegiate teams at the Red River Valley Winter Shows in February. The debating team, under the direction of Professor D. C. Streeter will compete against the other schools of Agriculture early in March.

Will Need Special Session

Relief has undeniably become problem No. 1 for the nation and for Minnesota, all reports show. In every corner of Minnesota the cry is coming for more relief funds, as the bia-business-stimulated slump continues to result in more mass lay-offs in the industrial centers—not only in this state but in the states which are the vital customers for Minnesota's farm products—the ranks of the unemployed approach record size.

It appears likely at this writing that a special session of the state legislature may yet have to be called to correct the brutal slashing of relief appropriations by the conservatives last summer. At that time, despite the results of painstaking surveys by the state to determine the exact need for funds, the conservatives cut exactly in half the requests of the administration, with the result that hunger and misery have descended upon hundreds of Minnesota families.

Floods in the Lake Superior region, lay-offs in the Twin Cities and in southern industrial towns, and general emergency conditions among wide sections of the farming population now aggravate an already desperate situation regarding relief financing.

Due to the cold weather the Fisch Construction Co. of Barnesville, Minn. who were moving the Farmers Elevator from Middle River to Angus, abandoned the work for the winter about three weeks ago. They left the elevator near the highway southwest of Strandquist.

Governor Benson Honored

Three Minnesota liberals have been granted national recognition for their progressive activities during 1937. Yearly, the Nation magazine, leading eastern weekly, chooses from the ranks of the American public figures those whom the Nation editors say "deserve the applause of their countrymen."

Governor Elmer Benson is given special notice on the publication's honor list "for withdrawing the license of the Pinkerton detective agency for industrial espionage, and for showing what a Farmer-Labor governor can do in furthering a program of social legislation." He is one of two governors so honored.

Minnesota congressmen Henry G. Teigan, Minneapolis, and John T. Bernard, Eveleth, are lauded for their work in Congress during 1937 -- the first year in Congress, by the way, for both of these men—and "for their courageous fight in the House against the principalities and powers of reaction." The Nation lists Mr. Teigan and Mr. Bernard among several so-called "young Turks" who, led by represetative Maury Marverick of Texas, constitute the spearhead of the liberal forces in Congress.

Hartley Peterson, Boy Scoutmaster and several of the older Boy Scouts made an overnight camp in an old log cabin out in the woods last Friday night. The boys all reported having a fine time and that as far as the weather being quite cold, they knew nothing about it in their snug camp. They ate their supper and breakfast out on the trip

License Cost More In 1938

Automobile licenses on all but minimum rate cars will cost more in 1938 than they did in 1937, Secretary of State Mike Holm said. F. O. B. prices on all new cars have been advanced, Holm said, and the registration rates in Minnesota are based on current new car prices for models comparative to the older ones being registered. Sale of 1936 licenses begins Monday and will continue to Feb. 15. In 1937, 850,000 cars and trucks were registered with fees totaling about $9,000,000.

The local Boy Scout Troop will give a pancake supper at the Nazareth Lutheran church basement on Friday evening, Jan. 21.

Government To Buy Potatoes

The attention of potato growers of Marshall County is directed toward the offer of the U. S. Government to purchase potatoes grading U. S. No. 2 or better for diversion to livestock feed.

Any farmer in order to avail himself of this chance to dispose of his No. 2 potatoes must file an application requesting to dispose of such potatoes with the county committee or the county agent. This application should contain the following information - the number of bushels to be disposed of, the place of storage.

The potatoes should be placed in a separate bin or in sacks so that they can be measured and rendered unfit for human consumption. When a person is then ready to start feeding these potatoes he should call for an inspector who will go to the place of storage, inspect them for grade, measure them and complete the necessary form so that the farmer may obtain payment.

Farmers should not start feeding potatoes before they are measured and stained.

If a farmer wishes to dispose of potatoes in this way the government will pay 25c for each hundred pounds of potatoes grading U. S. No. 2 or better.

Farmers should send in their requests at once.

BEING PUT ON THE SPOT

Otto Johnson, Marshall County Commissioner from Eastern Marshall County said he had been put on the "SPOT" when asked about the awarding of the County Printing to the Warren Sheaf and Stephen Messenger. We wonder what spot he had been put on? That is a statement that he should clarify. And who put him on the "SPOT." Surely this eastern Marshall County Commissioner should not have such a conglomeration of interests that there should be any "SPOT" to put him on.

We remember a year ago when this same Commissioner raised several questions regarding the legality of the Holt Weekly News, when the bid by thta publication was the lowest bidder. Is Otto Johnson serving the interests of Marshall County, or does he get those interests mixed up with his own?

WELCOME

Another Liberal newspaper has made its appearance in Minnesota, the Kelliher Progressive. That the four-page publication is meeting with friendly response is indicated by the support in a ubscription drive participated in by businessmen and farmers alike.

Verner Nelson, who also publishes the Northern Minnesota Leader at Roseau and the Marshall County Star, is responsible for this newest addition to liberal journalism in the state. Active in Farmer-Labor circles for many years, Mr. Nelson has always taken a fearless and courageous stand on all questions having to do with the public welfare. The new publication will contribute further to the Farmer-Labor cause in northern Minnesota.

Emil Fandrich, with the Leader at Roseau for the past two years, is in charge at Kelliher—Minnesota Leader.

BOSSES OR SERVANTS?

Some public officials assume an attitude that they are "BOSSES" in place of servants. And if someone is ready to call their hand they become offended. Personally we have always contended that it was a necessity to have some people who are not afraid to call their hand. To do so may at times cause temporary financial losses, but daring to "BEARD THE LION" in his den is, after all, quite a thrill. And over a period of years financial losses at first are generally compensated later.

Simple or Sophisticated?

A PRETTY girl is like a melody and her frock is the swing in it that makes you remember her—and never lets you forget. Sew-Your-Own puts that "remember me" ingredient into all frocks, from its simple all-occasion models to its more exclusive fashion firsts. You, Milady, have an exceptional opportunity today to choose an engaging frock from this taking trio. Just send for your pattern and Sew-Your-Own will do the rest—see you through every step to a happy, successful finish, or, in other words, to a thrilling frock fortified with much "Remember me."

Five Shipshape Pieces.

Start your day in an attractive morning frock if you would leave a bright all-day impression on the family. Sew-Your-Own suggests the new, young-looking dress at the left for creating a really lasting impression. It will impress you, too, for the five pieces fit together so effortlessly and produce such shipshape style that you'll be not only pleased but thrilled. Gingham, percale, or seersucker is the material suggested for this popular frock.

Exclusive Looking.

A beautifully styled frock that will lend a festive feeling and a note of glamour to every occasion is the smart new piece, above center. It is modern of line, gracious of detail, and flattering beyond belief. The new tucked skirt looks important, yes, even exclusive, but happily for you, Milady, it's as easy to sew as any you've done. Note the little button trim and youthful collar and cuffs to add that telling touch of good taste. Make a copy for now in satin or silk crepe.

Come-Get-Me Look.

Winter is here, but Spring is packaged up for an early delivery, which would behoove the fastidious young woman to now turn her gentle thoughts to the problem of what-to-wear. The slim-waisted model, above right, should set one straight, both in matters of thoughts and actions, for it has that come-and-get-me look that's so typical of the modern Sew-Your-Own. The "act" of sewing is most simplified in this little number, as the seven pieces and the cut-away diagram clearly illustrate. Make this frock in duplicate for your complete chic and resistance to clothes worries.

The Patterns.

Pattern 1431 is designed for sizes 36 to 52. Size 38 requires 4¾ yards of 35-inch material. The collar in contrast requires ⅝ of a yard.

No Retreat from New Deal Objectives, Says the President . . . Attitude Toward Business

Silk to feed anti-Japanese bonfire flames is being gathered from the shapely limbs of girls at Vassar college, Poughkeepsie, N. Y., where the delegates to the third annual convention of the American Student Union staged a demonstration for a boycott against Japanese goods. Silk stockings, shirts and neckties were burned.

No New Deal Retreat

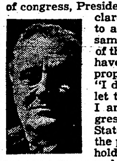
READING his annual message on the state of the nation before the senate and house at the opening of congress, President Roosevelt declared his purpose to advance upon the same fundamentals of the New Deal that have hitherto been proposed. He said: "I do not propose to let the people down. I am sure the congress of the United States will not let the people down. We hold our principles and our objectives to be sound. We will never go back on them."



President Roosevelt

The President again urged congress to enact legislation for control of wages and hours of work. He asked that all segments of the nation co-operate with the government to achieve better economic balance. The budget for 1939 which he was preparing, he said, would show a further decrease in the deficit, though not an actual balance.

Reasserting his approval of proposed changes in tax laws, he said: "Three things should be kept in mind. First the total sum to be derived by the federal treasury must not be decreased as a result of any changes in schedules. Second, abuses by individuals or corporations designed to escape taxpaying by using various methods of doing business corporate and otherwise—abuses which we have sought, with great success, to end—must not be restored. Third, we should rightly change certain provisions where they are proven to work definite hardship, especially on the small business men of the nation.

"But speculative income should not be favored over earned income."

Speaking of his attitude toward the nation's business as a whole, Mr. Roosevelt declared:

"The overwhelming majority of business men and bankers intend to be good citizens. Only a small minority have displaced poor citizenship by engaging in practices which are dishonest or definitely harmful to society. This statement is straightforward and true.

"No person in any responsible place in the government of the United States has ever taken any position contrary to it."

Mr. Roosevelt declared that when attention was called to specific misuses of capital "there has been a deliberate purpose on the part of the condemned minority to distort the criticism into an attack on all capital. That is a willful deception but it does not long deceive."

He called for prompt agreements on a farm program—now in conference between the house and senate—and asked specifically that congress "keep the cost of its administration within the figure of current government expenditures in aid of agriculture."

Concerning international matters, the President said:

"I am thankful that I can tell you that our nation is at peace. It has been kept at peace despite provocations which in other days, because of their seriousness, could well have engendered war.

"Resolute in our determination to respect the rights of others, and to command respect for the rights of ourselves," he added, "we must keep ourselves adequately strong in self-defense."

Power Loans O.K.

THE Supreme court ruled the government could make loans and grants for publicly owned electric plants.

Secretary Ickes, the public works administrator, said the decision would affect construction of 52 power projects costing $84,026,288 for which his agency had allotted $30,191,944 as loans to be repaid and $21,674,408 as federal grants.

The constitutionality of the government's activity was challenged by the Alabama Power company and the Duke Power company. They sought to enjoin federal financing of projects in four Alabama municipalities and at Buzzard Roost in Greenwood county, South Carolina.

Justice Sutherland delivered the opinion of the court.

Farley Finds a Surplus

JIM FARLEY, in his annual report as postmaster general, was able to show a surplus of more than 12 millions for his department. To do this, however, he deducted an expense item of about 60 million dollars, calling it a "nonpostal" item. He charged off the air and ocean mail subsidies and all free mail.

Dealing with the activities of the postal inspection service, Farley said the traffic in spurious lottery tickets is believed to have been broken up with the arrest and conviction of a band of racketeers in the East who disposed of more than 10 million dollars' worth of such tickets in the last few years.

Dies Wants Investigation

MARTIN DIES, Democratic congressman from Texas, wants congress to investigate the charges made by administration spokesmen that big business brought about the current economic recession in an effort to discredit the New Deal. Dies referred specifically to what he called astounding charges by Robert H. Jackson, assistant attorney general, and Secretary of the Interior Ickes.

R. H. Jackson

The Texan asked for appointment of a committee of seven house members to determine "who are the monopolies or monopolists engaged in the sitdown strike to produce economic chaos" and to afford Ickes and Jackson an opportunity to "vindicate themselves from the grave charges that they are demagoging to arouse the hatred of the majority against the minority."

Worst Year for Strikes

ACCORDING to the national labor relations board, the United States passed through the worst labor strike period in its history in 1937, but the board believes the prospects for 1938 are much better.

The board revealed in a secret report that there were 4,017 strikes during the first ten months of 1937, more than ever recorded during any entire previous year, and that 56 per cent, another all-time peak, were caused through efforts by employees to organize for collective bargaining.

It blamed the situation on refusal of employers to recognize rights of workers to organize under the Wagner labor relations act.

Boulder Dam Payments

JOHN C. PAGE, reclamation commissioner, informed Secretary Ickes that Boulder dam, which cost about $123,000,000, returned more than $2,000,000 to the federal treasury during the first year of operation.

Page said the dam, completed two years ahead of schedule, yielded $1,100,000 in power revenues during 1937 and $906,000 in payments for generating machinery by power purchasers.

HOW to SEW

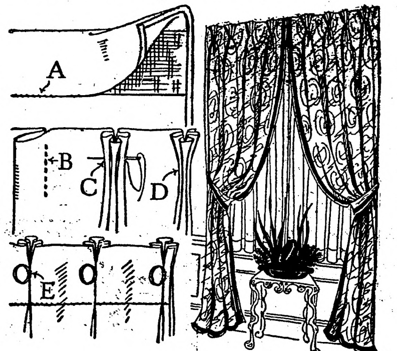
By RUTH WYETH SPEARS



A French Heading for Your Draperies.

WHETHER you line your new draperies or not will depend on how heavy the material is. It is important, however, that the top of draperies be stiffened when a French heading is used. A soft canvas which may be purchased in drapery departments is generally used for this purpose. From four to six inches is a good depth to cut the heading canvas. Turn the top of the curtain material over it and sew as at A.

Start to sew the plait about an inch down from the top of the drapery and sew it the depth of the stiffening, as shown here at B. Pinch this plait into three small plaits and, starting two inches down from the top, sew through as at C. Sew these plaits the depth of the stiffening, so that they appear as shown here at D. Now turn to the wrong side and sew a ring to the back of each plait as at E.

Every Homemaker should have a copy of Mrs. Spears' new book, SEWING. Forty-eight pages of step-by-step directions for making slipcovers and dressing tables; restoring and upholstering chairs, couches; making curtains for every type of room and purpose. Making lampshades, rugs, ottomans and other useful articles for the home. Readers wishing a copy should send name and address, enclosing 25 cents, to Mrs. Spears, 210 South Desplaines St., Chicago, Illinois.

Thread Needle This Way.—Always thread the end of cotton broken off the reel into the needle, not the loose end, and it will never knot. When using double thread knot the two ends separately—this prevents any tiresome twisting and knotting.

• • •

Non-Skid Clocks.—When an ornament or clock slips on a polished mantelpiece or sideboard, try cutting four small squares of felt from an old hat and sticking one to each corner of the base of the article. It doesn't show and it's quite "non-skid."

• • •

Unrolling Tape. — Scoring the sides of friction tape with an old razor blade, or sharp pocket knife will enable you to unroll it without tearing the edges.

• • •

Washing Walls.—When washing dirty painted walls with soapy water containing a cleaning powder, the job is made easier if a little flour is added to the water to make a paste. The paste will hold the mixture to the wall long enough for the powder to dissolve the dirt.

Favorite Recipe of the Week

Shrimp Creole for Sunday Night Supper.

SHRIMP Creole is an excellent dish to serve for Sunday night supper, not just because it is especially good to eat, but because it can be made the day before or in the morning and reheated when ready to serve. That is a real convenience for the housewife who does her own work.

Shrimp Creole.

2 medium size onions sliced
¾ cup sliced celery
2 tbsp. shortening
1 tbsp flour
1 tsp salt
1 to 2 tbsp chili powder
1 cup water
2 cups canned tomatoes
2 cups canned peas
1 tbsp vinegar
1 tsp sugar
2 cups canned shrimp
3 cups hot boiled rice

Cook the onions and celery in the fat until a delicate brown. Add the flour, salt and chili powder and blend until smooth. Add the water (use the liquid drained from the peas as part of the water). Cook until thick and smooth, stirring constantly. Add the tomatoes, peas, vinegar, sugar and shrimp and heat thoroughly. Serve with the hot rice.

If the shrimp creole is made before serving time, you will find a double boiler, or casserole convenient to use for reheating it.

The amount of chili powder to use depends upon personal taste. It would be a good idea to add just one tablespoonful and after the finished product has been sampled more can be added if desired.

Strange Facts

Italy Conquered with Chalk

"HE CONQUERED Italy with a piece of Chalk." That is what Machiavelli wrote of Charles VIII of France. Two years after Columbus landed in America, this French king took soldiers into Italy for the first time armed with hand guns. Because Charles had weapons fired by gunpowder, Machiavelli meant that he could go where he pleased. All he had to do was chalk off areas on a map and go there. Nothing could resist these new weapons.

The earliest missiles were arrows padded to fit the bores of the weapons. Gunpowder was first used about 1331 to fire cannon, but the hand gun did not exist until almost a hundred years later.

The early hand gun consisted of a short iron tube prolonged behind into a rod. This rod was hitched under the arm when the gun was fired. The charge was inserted from the muzzle. It was ignited by a wick match applied to a touch-hole on the side of the iron tube. The match was held in a hinged fork mounted on the stock, enabling it to be brought into contact with the gunpowder in the priming pan. This match lock, so arranged, was called the "harquebus." The early hand gun was called an arquebus.

Charles VIII set out for Italy in 1494 with 140 heavy cannon and with one-tenth of his infantry armed with hand guns. Before the year was over his victorious army had entered Rome.

The hand guns probably frightened more people than they killed. The smouldering wick match and the powder in the firing pan were exposed to rain so a gun often misfired.

However, the new weapons were effective and Charles VIII entered Naples in May, 1495, in great pomp and splendor to claim the kingdom of Naples which his father had inherited. Charles planned to conquer Constantinople, but he died three years after his famous conquest of Italy, at the age of twenty-eight.

Five Million For Roads

With $11,318,000 worth of state highway construction accomplished in 1937, Minnesota was assured of another year of progress in its highway improvment and safety program by allotment to the state by the secretary of agriculture of approximately $5,500,000 in regular federal aid, grade crossing elimination and secondary and feeder road funds.

The allotments followed upon the heels of the refusal of the special session of congress to cancel federal aid allotments for the fiscal year beginning July 1, 1938. This refusal postponed the fight over proposed curtailment of federal aid funds until the regular session of congress now convening.

Immediately upon receipt of the federal allocations, N. W. Elsberg, state highway commissioner, announced that the 1938 improvement and maintenance program will be shaped with a view to providing a maximum number of jobs in the face of the present unemployment situation.

Commissioner Elsberg said that he felt certain the 1937 total of 18,000 man-jobs provided by trunk highways maintenance and improvement work should be equaled and possibly exceeded without sacrificing economy or accomplishment.

The Skating Rink

In spite of the heavy snowfall last weekend the children have lost no time in their enjoyment of the skating rink. It seemed an effortless task for them to take the initiative in cleaning the snow away Monday morning.

The adults should turn out and try their fortunes on the blades again, they would enjoy it without a doubt. Mothers and fathers are urged to come out and watch their youngsters enjoy themselves skating under the new light that has just been installed on the rink.

Due to the large number of youngsters that have been coming out to skate it has been deemed necessary to restrict hockey playing on the rink to only 4 p. m. to 6 p. m. This has been done to allow everyone a more enjoyable time during noon hours and evenings.

Arthur Tureen, farmer living northwest of Holt has this week moved out to his farm the large barn which he purchased some time ago from Knute Nelson of his Mud Lake farm. He hauled the building across country on sleighs with a large caterpillar tractor,

Sickness In Community

No doubt many people have been quite concerned about the apparently great amount of illness in the community since Christmas vacation. It is our belief that with due care we can consider ourselves well over what for a time seemed to be an epidemic. Parents are urged to be particularly careful in checking the true nature of any illness that may occur in their families. They are advised not to send other children in the family to school until certain that those who are ill have nothing that is contagious. In all events, do not allow children who have been ill to be careless in taking care of themselves as only too often the after effects of many of the common ailments turn out to be serious.

Attendance at school is rapidly improving. Kindly notify the school when anyone is ill as such consideration may help the school in preventing others from being exposed.

Safetygrams BY FRED W. BRAUN © The Safety Man

Again we are confronted with the hazard of slippery roads. For the next few months the danger of skidding will have to be kept in mind.

What precautions are you taking? Do you drive along at your usual rate of speed and trust to luck that you will not encounter anything that will call for a sudden stop? Many motorists do, and later regret it. Applying your brakes, when driving at a high rate of speed, does not help. You merely slide along the icy pavement. The safe thing to do is this: drive slowly; approach intersections, stop signs, school zones, and traffic signals with caution and care; think.

Safety In School Transportation

From September 1, 1937 to January 1, 1938, twelve accidents involving thirteen vehicles transporting pupils have been reported to the State Department of Education. In these accidents three children, one not a pupil, have been killed, and nineteen pupils have been injured. Seven pupils were injured in each of two accidents, and three were seriously injured and one killed by passing automobiles hitting pupils while the latter were crossing the road. The above stated facts are significant, and should influence all of us to exert every effort to prevent such accidents. Special care should be taken in meeting and over taking school busses especially when they stop at their stations.

The Weather

Last week we mentioned how nice the weather had been. Well so far it has not changed to anything else but nice. On Sunday morning at 2 a. m. the thermometer was hovering around 26 above. On Sunday we had a light snowfall and since then have had above zero weather.

HOW TO SEW

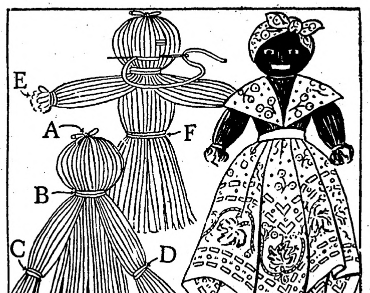
by Ruth Wyeth Spears



A Bandanna Doll Has Old Time Charm

IF YOU want to make a very big doll, use two hanks of yarn and the biggest red bandanna handkerchief you can find.

Tie the hank at the top as at A, then cut it across the bottom. Make the head by tying the yarn in as at B, then separate part of the strands at the sides and bind them together to make the arms as at C and D. Cut these strands off as at E to make the hands. Bind the rest of the yarn around as at F to define the waistline. Thread a large needle with white darning cotton and make the mouth and eyes with several stitches made as shown here. Sew small black buttons or beads in the middle of the eyes.

Cut a square out of the center of the handkerchief. The square piece you cut out should be big enough so it may be cut through the center from corner to corner to make two triangles—one to be used for the head kerchief for the doll and one for the three cornered shoulder kerchief. When this is done, gather around the square hole in the center of the bandanna and draw up the gathering thread to make the full top of the skirt.

Every Homemaker should have a copy of Mrs. Spears' new book, SEWING. Forty-eight pages of step-by-step directions for making slipcovers and dressing tables; restoring and upholstering chairs, couches; making curtains for every type of room and purpose. Making lampshades, rugs, ottomans and other useful articles for the home. Readers wishing a copy should send name and address, enclosing 25 cents, to Mrs. Spears, 210 South Desplaines St., Chicago, Illinois.

WHO'S NEWS THIS WEEK...

By Lemuel F. Parton

NEW YORK.—It seems possible that Rockefeller Center was trying for a delicate cultural balance in getting three alien artists to do its murals. Right, left and center, in the order named, Jose Maria Sert, Diego Rivera and Frank Brangwyn, were the muralists.

Right, Left and Center Represented

There was an inevitable clash, and now, after five years, a compromise. Lenin's head, by the hard-boiled, hard-bitten Mexican Rivera, blocked out in 1934, has been replaced by a conventional mural by the Spanish Sr. Sert, with the orthodox theme of America's continuing development along the old lines. The compromise appears in Sr. Sert's restrained sepia monochrome, instead of his usual lavish outpouring of gold and scarlet, verdant green and ecstatic blue.

Sr. Sert is the most millionairish of all living painters. Here he pipes down. If we didn't go left with Lenin, our new era isn't going to be as gaudy as the last one.

It will be a sober, industrious, thrifty, monochrome age, with no more high kicking and low thinking. That seems to be what Sr. Sert and the Rockefeller Center people are saying.

When the big, booming, sixty-one-year-old Spanish painter is going strong, he makes Vernonese just a wet wash with a touch of bluing. He was a regular stand-by and emergency painter for his friend, King Alfonso. "Con mucho gusto," he can swing the whole spectrum, with bold, regal effects which are the delight of kings.

He has done many magnificent rooms in Europe, including the Madrid chapel of the duke of Alba, now Franco's commercial envoy to England, and Sir Phillip Sassoon's resplendent ballrooms. His first exhibition in this country was in 1924, when he received prolonged critical salvos.

He was born in Barcelona of the ancient Spanish gentry, and studied in Paris in his early youth.

Sert Swings Spectrum With Gusto

From the first, he developed boldness and exuberance, both in color and technique. Briffault's pre-war Europe—which was to have gone on forever, but didn't—knew him for its very own. His new monochrome fits an age "sicklied o'er with the pale cast of thought."

In the current argument between government and business, it is interesting to note that the temple of business gets back to the Muses and the classical symbols of work and labor, after its brief leftward deviation in 1933. In Washington, such bold innovators as Henry Varnum Poor and George Biddle still state tortuous new themes in the government murals. But there's not so much splash in those Rockefeller Center murals as there might have been in, say, 1928.

YOUNG BURGESS MEREDITH, at the age of twenty-eight, is picked to run Actors Equity association, for a time at least. A star on Broadway, a country squire, a Hollywood success, he has had more tossing around than a roller-coaster addict, with the up-grade all in the depression years.

Meredith Was Tossed on Upgrade

In Lakewood, a suburb of Cleveland, his father was a doctor and his grandfather an evangelist. His Uncle Joe, whom he greatly admired, was in vaudeville.

He washed dishes and tended furnaces during one sad and lonely year at Amherst, ran a haberdashery shop with his brother in Cleveland, went bankrupt, was a reporter on the Stamford Advocate, until they caught him at it, sold roofing, vacuum cleaners and cosmetics, worked in Macy's department store, sang in church choirs for $4 a Sunday, lived a week on breakfast food samples, and was for a time one of the migrant army of jobless youth.

The depression brought him luck. In 1929, he got a letter of introduction to Eva le Gallienne and a payless job as an apprentice actor. His climb was slow.

Depression Was Really Lady Luck

He first attained high visibility in "She Loves Me "Not," in 1933. He clinched his gains in his three Maxwell Anderson plays, "Winterset," "High Tor," and "Star Wagon."

His estate is near that of Mr. Anderson in Rockland county, New York, where he is very busy with house-building, dogs, and books. He has an eager, avid mind, buzzing with new ideas.

He is a faithful intellectual understudy of the older Mr. Anderson and his genius chimes in perfectly with Mr. Anderson's exalted blank verse dramaturgy.

He is five feet, seven inches tall, weighs 135 pounds and is no matinee idol—listed briefly at booking agency as "blond and homely" when he first went after a job in the theater. His wife is the distinguished actress, Margaret Perry.

Modern Bridge of Sighs for China

Reflections of the invading Japanese soldiers stand out clearly in the placid water below as they march across a picturesque bridge in North China. Cogs in an inexorable war machine that is rolling juggernaut-like across China, these fighting men might be mistaken in the distance for peaceful workers homeward bound.

SKATING CHAMPION

A graceful picture of Miss Cecilia Colledge, brilliant young English skater who holds the world's women's figure-skating title, shown at St. Moritz, Switzerland, as she prepared for an international meet in which champions from many countries participated.

A Kiss for Carter Glass

Sen. Carter Glass of Virginia, oldest member of the upper house of congress, shown being kissed by his niece, Miss Nancy Carter Boatwright, on the occasion of his eightieth birthday recently. The elderly statesman insisted on attending the sessions of the senate on his birthday in spite of doctor's orders to the contrary.

Octogenarian Bishop at Play

Although he is eighty years old, Rt. Rev. Arthur F. W. Ingram, bishop of London, England, just refuses to feel old. The bishop is shown here (right) as he took part in the annual hockey game for the old Malburnians against Radley college in the grounds of Fulham palace recently.

ODD POWDER PUFF

You can't beat nature. Miss Barbara Bronner, one of the many visitors to the recent New York poultry show, utilizes the crest sported by this white crested drake as a powder puff. She says it's softer than the kind you buy at the store.

German Liner Lands High and Dry

Like a huge fish out of water, the German steamer Manissa is shown shortly after running aground on the shore of the Mediterranean near Adalia, Turkey. Fogs and a heavy sea threw the ship off its course and landed it on shore.

A Lift Toward Spring

GOOD frocks and true are these currently exhibited by your favorite designers, Sew-Your-Own. There's an ultra-polished model for informal evenings (dancing and that sort of thing), called the "Good-night frock." Then there's the more home-loving "Good-morning" number, and, to complete the trio, a swell little afternoon frock for tea-time goings-on. Why not spend happy days ahead in these very frocks? All you need do, you know, is to Sew, Sew, Sew-Your-Own!

Spring Frock.

The girl who has a flare for streamlining will see at once that the frock at the left is meant for her—just for her. She will make it of satin if she's thinking ahead to Spring; of wool if her mind is on the present or near future. She will puff the sleeves gently, give the girdle tie a fair but firm snugging-up, adjust the chic cowl neck—and she'll be something lovely to look at. Yes, Milady, this is the "Good-night frock" and if it's the last thing you do, you must add it in your new wardrobe.

When you greet the little family with that bright and cheery "Good morning," be sure your frock reflects an equally sweet note. Sew-Your-Own's most assuring number to this end is pictured above center. With a copy or two in gay gingham or seersucker you'll breeze through your day's work like nobody's business. The shirtwaist styling offers style and comfort that make this your best bet for early season's wear.

And for a charming "Good afternoon," choose a frock with plenty on the personality side. Such is the new young model at the right. Buttons in a line down the front tell you in so many dots and dashes that here you have "go-gittin'" what it takes—these are things that prompt Sew-Your-Own to put this frock in its Fashion-First Review for the Spring season. Make your version soon, Milady. That invitation to tea will find you unafraid and eager to go.

Favorite Recipe of the Week—

Salmon Hominy Casserole.

THE combined flavors of salmon and hominy is pleasing, the combined texture of them is interesting, and the appearance of the two in a casserole dish is appealing indeed. Try this combination for a tasty luncheon or supper dish.

In preparing the salmon and hominy for the dish, save the liquid drained from the cans as it adds flavor and food value to the sauce for the dish.

Salmon Hominy Casserole.

|---|---|
| 1 No. 2 can hominy | 4 tbsp. flour |
| 1 No. 1 tall can salmon | ¼ cup grated American cheese, salt and pepper |
| 1 tbsp. butter | ½ cup buttered bread crumbs |
| 2 cups liquid, part milk | |

Arrange the hominy in the bottom of a greased casserole and lay the salmon over the hominy. Melt the butter in a saucepan, add flour, and stir until smooth. Add the liquid which is made up of the portion drained from the hominy and salmon and enough milk to make 2 cups. Cook until the sauce is thick and smooth, stirring constantly. Add cheese, season with salt and pepper, and pour over the hominy and salmon. Sprinkle crumbs over the top and bake in a moderate oven (400 degrees) until the crumbs are brown and the mixture thoroughly heated, or about 30 minutes.

An asparagus tip salad with tart French dressing would be good with the casserole dish. The canned asparagus is available in all green, all white, and white with green tips, so your fancy has an opportunity to choose the variety preferred.

You don't have to be told that there's plenty wrong with this picture! In fact, the Farmer who was asked to discard his 3-bottom plow and hook the hand plow up behind the tractor thought the photographer had escaped from somewhere.

It Doesn't Make Sense

But it illustrates the way it is proposed to make the Railroads haul the Farmers' products

This Farmer has invested about $1,500 in a powerful tractor. Pulling a 3-bottom plow, he can do the work of several farm hands—speed up his plowing—reduce his costs.

But, it makes fewer jobs! Suppose the farm hands protest—go to Congress and get a law passed that makes it illegal to pull more than a 1-bottom plow!

There's a proposal before Congress that would have the same effect in the long run on the Farmer's costs—the cost of transporting what he produces to distant markets.

The U. S. Senate already has passed a bill to limit the length of freight trains to 70 cars. It would force the railroads to split up heavy-tonnage trains. The cost of railroad transportation would be increased just as the cost of plowing would be increased if there was a law reducing the number of plows that could be pulled behind a tractor.

Limiting the length of freight trains to 70 cars would add 125 million dollars a year to the cost of railway transportation.

The "excuse" for this extravagant proposal is Safety. Let's turn to the record. From 1923 to 1935 there was an increase of 16 per cent in the number of cars in the average freight train. During the same period accidents to trainmen caused by sudden stops, starts, lurches or jerks, was reduced by 61 per cent. All train accidents were reduced by nearly two-thirds!

During 1935 and 1936 the Great Northern operated 5,102 iron ore trains that averaged 173 cars each. There was only one employe injured in an accident that had any relation to the "slack" in the train. And that mishap could have occurred just as easily on a train of less than 70 cars.

Two trains safer than one? Does anyone suppose that accidents at grade crossings will be reduced by running more trains over the crossings? Or that accidents to yard and track workers will be reduced if there are more trains?

Of course, it doesn't make sense—but this counterfeit safety bill may become a law unless you who sooner or later have to foot the bill, let your Representatives in Congress know what you think about such legislation. Hearings on The Train Length Limit Bill (known as S. 69) are now being held by a House Committee.

STATE IRRIGATION PROJECT GIVEN O. K.

At least one Minnesota farmer, Mr. Albert Loffenmacher, of Fairfax, will protect his fruits and berries from drought with the completion of an irrigation dam and reservoir on his farm on the banks of the Minnesota River.

License was recently granted by the Minnesota Division of drainage and Waters to Mr. Loffenmacher for the construction of a dam at a cost to him of approximately $5,000, impounding the waters of a small creek for irrigation purposes.

Surplus waters coming down the creek will be impounded in the reservoir and will be pumped to the plot to be irrigated. It will be possible to store sufficient waters to provide one inch of irrigation three times during the summer.

"Although this project is more or less of an experiment, it is just an added indication," says Director Walter S. Olson of the Division of Drainage and Waters, "of the attitude of the people of the state and the use to which our surplus waters can be put to add to our annual income."

Arrangements have been made with Mr. Loffenmacher for the use of a portion of his property for experimental purposes to determine the value of irrigation in the production of fruits and berries.

Born to Mr. and Mrs. Olaf Halvorson on Sunday, a girl, at Physicians hospital at Thief River Falls.

"Church Chimes" New Paper

A very fine new paper came into the homes of this community last week when "The Church Chimes" a monthly church bulletin, edited and distributed by Rev. T. C. L. Hanson, pastor of the Nazareth Lutheran church, made its first appearance.

This fine little church paper deals with the problems and activities of the church and those who receive it will no doubt, derive some blessing, and many will be drawn nearer to our Lord and Savior, Jesus Christ, thru this letter herald of words.

The editor of the News extends his congratulation to Rev. Hanson for the fine job he did on the first edition and hopes that he can continue every month.

Returned From Hospital

Mr. and Mrs. Christ Engen returned home from Thief River Falls where they spent a few days. While there Mr. Engen underwent an operation at the St. Luke's hospital. He will remain at home for awhile and then go back for more treatment.

FORESTRY PROGRAM NEEDS "STEPPING UP"

That Minnesota has lagged sadly in a comprehensive reforestation program that could bring back to the state a permanent annual income of 40 to 50 million dollars, are the conclusions of Ellery A. Foster, Director of the Division of Forestry.

"To date only about 40,000 acres of devastated forest land has been planted as compared with about 11 million acres that should be planted," says Mr. Foster.

Of these 40,000 acres, the state has planted only about 12,000, while the federal government has done the rest. Most of the work has been done in recent years by CCC and WPA. This year the state planted about 3,000 acres.

"We are still in an indecisive state regarding our tax delinquent lands, while Michigan and Wisconsin have developed an orderly legal procedure which is basic to a sound conservation program," commented Mr. Foster.

"Minnesota's eleven million acres that need planting are in two classifications," the forester said. "About four million acres are devastated forest land which cannot come back without aid, while the other seven million acres are poor aspen, scrub oak and brush land of very little forest value.

A speaker with first-hand information on the Far Eastern Crisis will feature the Wednesday evening program.

Otes Barton, an associate of William Beebe, will present a picture-lecture on Life in the Deep Sea, on Thursday evening, and the Northwestern Minnesota Singers, augmented by outside professional artists, will present their annual concert to conclude the shows on Feb. 11.

The Weather

The weather the past week took some drastic changes from what we have had this winter. Over the week end it warmed up in swell shape and on Sunday the weather reports show that we had 38 above zero here. Monday started out with the temperature dropping and a strong cold north wind blowing over this area, blocking up some of the country roads to auto trafic.

Since Monday the weather has been cold with 20 below zero readings every morning.

29 Factories Move Into State

From the cry of "Boost Minnesota," which for years has been the theme song of Minnesota civic and business organizations, the cry now seems to be: "Move your factory out of Minnesota. That is the way we can beat the Farmer-Laborites."

News of an industry moving to another state, either because of discriminatory freight rates or any other cause, is now front page stuff for all the dailies, and is magnified out of all proportion to its true worth. The facts of the case mean little. For example, two firms were played up in the front pages of the Twin Cities dailies as leaving the state "to escape Farmer-Labor taxes and intolerable labor conditions." A check-up, however, disclosed that in both cases the firms were driven to locate elsewhere because high freight rates in Minnesota make it impossible for them to compete on equal terms with manufacturers in other states. This was unquestionably concealed for the reason that the Farmer-Labor administration could, by no stretch of the imagination, be blamed for those freight rates.

Over the radio, we hear skits about Minnesota, each with the "industry leaving the state" theme cleverly interwoven. One would almost be inclined to feel that there is a desparate effort on foot to create an industry exodus. Mighty big price they are willing to pay to defeat the present liberal administration.

But the game isn't working so well. They just can't get the exodus started, which in itself is a tribute to the state. J. N. Jackson, president, St. Paul Association, writing in the St. Paul Pioneer Press, says, "During the past year, general business conditions in St. Paul were showing healthy improvement until the present NATIONWIDE depression made itself felt in the early weeks of the fall." That seems like a discordant note.

But Mac Martin, Twin Cities advertising counsellor, in a large advestisement the other day in the daily press, gives some interesting figures on the number of factories which, during 1937, have moved into the Twin Cities and the number which, during the same period, moved out. The factories which moved in number 30; those which moved out total the grand sum of ONE—a net gain of 29 factories.

But we expect the radio skits to continue and the chorus of "Industry is moving out" to become louder and louder. Funny game, this politics!

SORE THROAT WITH COLDS Given Fast Relief

Take 2 Bayer Tablets with a full glass of water.

Crush 3 Bayer Tablets in ⅓ glass of water—gargle twice every few hours.

The speed with which Bayer tablets act in relieving the distressing symptoms of colds and accompanying sore throat is utterly amazing . . . and the treatment is simple and pleasant. This is all you do. Crush and dissolve three genuine Bayer Aspirin tablets in one-third glass of water. Then gargle with this mixture twice, holding your head well back.

This medicinal gargle will act almost like a local anesthetic on the sore, irritated membrane of your throat. Pain eases promptly; rawness is relieved.

You will say it is remarkable. And the few cents it costs effects a big saving over expensive "throat gargles" and strong medicines. And when you buy, see that you get genuine BAYER ASPIRIN.

Making Winter Hours Count

SEW - YOUR - OWN means most at this season of the year when dark and long winter days make time hang heavy on your hands. You can get your Spring wardrobe well started by making these days count. This is the time to sew and sew—and then when the first crocuses show their heads, you will be all ready for Spring; your wardrobe in order and the right clothes to wear. With sew-your-own patterns and a few yards of material, you can make short work of this whole business of sewing.

Practical Slip.

This four-gore slip is the choice of every woman who likes comfort. The side panels prevent the slip from twisting and turning and keep it comfortably in place on the most strenuous day. The pattern includes built-up and strap shoulder—and you can make it for your own wardrobe in a few hours at a fraction of what you would usually spend. Keep the pattern, you will use it again and again once you see how really comfortable this dress is.

Cheery Morning Frock.

No matter how many of these informal dresses you have, you never have enough. So start right in to sew now and make two or three of them for Spring. This dress (the one in center) is designed on clever shirt-waist lines and buttons from neck to hem. Piping is used at edge of collar, cuffs and pockets. It's the neatest, trimmest little frock you have ever seen. You'll enjoy it all through the summer.

Sweet and Simple.

The figure at right is wearing an afternoon frock that is as fresh and new as a daisy. The gored skirt flares like a ballerina's and the bodice is smoothly fitted, closing with two wide scallops trimmed in smart ruffling. Wear this dress for bridge parties now—and wear it all through the Spring and Summer. It is one of the most popular silhouettes—nicely made up in silk or cotton.

Strange Facts

Cavalry Captured Dutch Fleet

A FEW men on horseback once conquered the Dutch fleet. This happened during the cold winter of 1794-95. In France there had been a revolution and the king, Louis XIV, was executed. The French, already at war with Austria, now found themselves forced to fight England, Holland and Spain.

Most of the fighting took place in what is now Belgium. The Dutch were protected until the winter of 1794-95. Then the French generals drove the Austrians across the Rhine, the English soldiers under the duke of York embarked for home. The army of the French general Pichegru crossed frozen rivers, a country bare of supplies, densely intersected with dykes to conquer Utrecht and finally Amsterdam.

North of Amsterdam is the long thumb-like peninsula of North Holland and that great inland sea, the Zuider zee. Between the islands and the tip of North Holland the Dutch fleet had anchored for the winter. The winter of 1794-95 the fleet was frozen in at Texel.

Shortly after Christmas 1794 a small troop of Pichegru's cavalry rode out across the frozen waters. A handful of hussars surrounded the battleships. The Dutch fleet, though well-armed, surrendered to a few Frenchmen on horseback. —© Britannica Junior.

WHAT DO THE COUNTY WORKERS DO FOR THE PEOPLE

There is much misunderstanding concerning the work of the Social Workers. We have given them the authority and the great responsibility of looking after all the needy families—a work which is never finished but is increasing at the present time. We who look on do not realize the enormous job they have on their hands with caring for the Relief Clients, Old Age Assistance recipients, Dependent Children, and the Blind.

Here is one little thought to think about: One man seems to have all he can do to provide for his own family by figuring out some means to budget his salary in order to take care of the needs of the family, such as food, shelter, clothing and medical attention for them when necessary. Yet we expect a Social Worker to take over a case load of one-hundred or two-hundred families and see that all the attention is given the fatter one man sems to find hard to do for his own family.

If people would only realize that the Social Worker is trying to help, not hinder, the people to help themselves, instead of regarding him with a suspicious air and believing that the Worker is keeping the Client in the same status of life as he found him. The Worker figures a budget for each of his clients, considering his income, number of people in household, and the need in this family. This budget is adequate for the family needs if spent in the way it was intended, and that is something which I believe is one of the reasons for the continuous discontent with some of the Relief Clients. They do not know how to buy wisely enough to make the best use of their orders which they receive from the Relief Office, so back they come to the Relief Office with the complaint that the Worker is not allowing them enough to live on. Here is a big job for the Worker; to teach the Relief Client how to economize and make the most of what they have.

Yes, we have a long ways to go in raising the standards of living among the ranks, but if the Social Worker could gain the confidence of the people with whom he works and assure them that he is doing his best for them, I think the Client would co-operate more with him and become interested in his own future seeing that the Worker is interested in it. It will give him self-confidence again and he will try to earn his own way rather than to be dependent on someone else. Where should he earn his board and room? True that perhaps everyone couldn't find a place to work that is where changes in our economic system must come. The large and perplexing task of welfare Workers is to re-habilitate individuals and help them to fit themselves for that place that will need them. When socity has made the changes in the the economic structure to when people who want to work shall not be denied that privilege and good concientous people will not have their spirit broken by unempolyment and the accompanying loss of homes.—Contributed.

HOW TO SEW

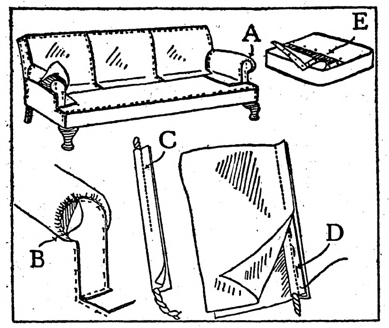
by Ruth Wyeth Spears



A Slip Cover With Welt Seams.

IN THE sketch at the upper left you see the pieces of a davenport slipcover fitted with seam lines pinned. The material is wrong side out as the welt or corded seams must be stitched from the inside of the cover.

Before the seams around the front of the arms are pinned as at A the arm cover edge of the seam must be gathered as at B. It is important to allow just enough material so the arm cover fits easily.

The cable cord that is covered with bias material and fitted into the seams to make the welt may be purchased at any notion counter. The material to cover it must be cut on a true bias and stitched in place as shown here at C. The cording foot attachment for your machine must be used for this stitching so the sewing will come close to the cord. The next step is to either baste or stitch the covered cord to one edge of the right side of the seam as shown here at D. Then, using the cording foot again, stitch the seam as shown. Clip the seam edges around curves so they will not draw.

It will be necessary to leave an opening in the back to be fastened with snaps. Openings must be arranged on the underside of the seam cushions as shown here at E.

Every Homemaker should have a copy of Mrs. Spears' new book, SEWING. Forty-eight pages of step-by-step directions for making slipcovers, dressing tables and curtains for all types of rooms. Making lampshades, rugs, ottomans and other useful articles for the home. Leaflet of patchwork stitches now included if requested. Readers wishing a copy should send name and address enclosing 25 cents (coins preferred) to Mrs. Spears, 210 S. Desplaines St., Chicago, Ill.

WHO'S NEWS THIS WEEK . . .

By Lemuel F. Parton

Hoboes Will Pay Honor to Bard of Home

NEW YORK.—One of this department's favorite monarchs has long been Jeff Davis, king of the hoboes of America, who now leads his following of nearly 1,000,000 in a plan to erect a national memorial to John Howard Payne, author of "Home, Sweet Home."

There is perhaps a bit of personal pride involved, as your correspondent helped establish the dynasty. That was many years ago, when a series of hobo stories in the Chicago Tribune elevated Dr. Ben Reitman to the kingship. Dr. Reitman, however, was a backslider, turning at first furtively and then brazenly to regular work, went into politics in Chicago and became a cautious and solvent citizen, too fat to ride the rods.

I saw him last at the house of the late Jack London, in Sonoma county, Calif., and, if I remember correctly, Mr. London reproached him as one recreant to his ideals and in danger of succumbing to industry and ambition.

Until a few years ago, I used to get letters from the hoboes of America, on letter-heads like those of any national bank, carrying the names of the "jungle judges," "shacks" (organizers) and "track-walkers" and "supreme knights of the road."

King Jeff Is Elected to Job for Life

They had to do with some misunderstanding in the organization over the lingering sovereignty of Dr. Reitman, but that is all cleared up now. Mr. Davis' rule is undisputed and his name appears on the letter-head as "Jungle Judge, King of the Hoboes, elected for Life."

Mr. Davis, now fifty-three years old, has covered his first 1,000,000 miles on the road, and plans to start his second million on an organizing trip in Europe early this year. His father, James Davis, who died in Cincinnati a year ago at the age of ninety, had been vaguely identified as a newspaper man, working on several Cincinnati newspapers, but with no news as to what department.

Young Jeff, born in Cincinnati, started rambling when he was thirteen and now fetches up with a round forty years on the road. Bald and genial, working harder at the hobo trade than do most men on their regular jobs, he campaigns for better migrating and loafing conditions for his subjects.

He wants the railroads to establish a one-cent-a-mile rate for box car passengers. He says the plan has worked fine in France. He moves about the country, fighting the bum blockades set up by various states. He denounces the "fuzzy-tails" in his following—hoboes who talk a lot but never toss anything into the jungle stew.

Italy Wins Radio Duel in Desert

CORRESPONDENTS on the British-Italian radio war front in Arabia report a victory in the first engagement for Abdul Wahab, the desert Rudy Vallee, crooning for Italy. The sheiks, according to news accounts, tuned out Britain's broadcast, which included news of a death sentence for an Arab found in possession of arms, and tuned in Italy's cheerful crooner.

The Italians also were one-up on the Britons, due to the fact that the former had supplied many of the radio sets and taken precautions to rig them against Britain's thirty-one-meter wavelength.

Sir John C. W. Reith, grim, purposeful and, incidentally, Scottish, director general of the British Broadcasting corporation, led off for England, paced by Big Ben and "God Save the King." Abdul countered with "Just a Little Oasis for Two," and "Aldebaran and You," in Arabic. It was no contest after that, say the news reports.

Sir John's last appearance was at Edward's solemn valedictory. The tall, bald, frosty mogul of British Broadcasting, lord of the empire air waves, takes the microphone only when imperial interests demand it. Recently he said: "To set out to give the public what it wants, as the saying is, is a dangerous and fallacious policy."

Lord of Air Keeps B.B.C. Out in Front

Those who know him say he will go on giving the Arabs what he thinks they ought to want, and probably get away with it. He has been lambasted as a dictator all over the empire, but has ridden through labor and conservative administrations and keeps the B. B. C. steadily advancing.

He is the most inaccessible man in England, forty-seven years old, the son of an old-line Scotch clergyman, trained in engineering at the Royal College of Glasgow, successful as an engineer in London, before becoming general manager of the B. B. C. in 1922. His salary is $35,000 a year.

Safetygrams
BY FRED W. BRAUN
© The Safety Man

Who cares about the right-of-way if an accident depends on it? Why worry about the right-of way at an intersection, crossroad, private driveway, or other road entrance when a few seconds delay will eliminate the possibility of a smash-up? Give the right-of-way to the other fellow and let him be on his way. In another two seconds you yourself will be on the safe side. That is courteous driving. It is the safest way.

To drive openly and defiantly headlong into an intersection simply because you have the rigt of-way is not an act of courtesy nor is it safe driving.

Just ordinary good manners in driving an automobile will prevent as many accidents as reasonable care. The two go hand in hand and are inseparable.

Governor Benson Returned

Governor Benson, returned from the vacation on which he departed late in December, has plunged into the problems of relief facing the state and local communities. Reports which he requested before he left have now been completed and are ready for his analysis. Upon this analysis hangs the Governor's decision as to whether a special session of the Legislature is needed in order to provide a greater state's share of relief financing.

Benson has pointed out that the decision actually rests with local communities, because with relief rolls approaching record highs in most sections of the state, the financial needs of townships, counties, and cities will be the most weighty factor in deciding whether the state must extend its relief aid.

Asked to comment on the filing for the governorship of Railroad and Warehouse Commissioner Hjalmer Peterson, the Governor declared he had nothing to say. "When shall I file? Certainly not until after the Farmer-Labor party's convention in March" he added.

NELSON FINDS MINNESOTA FARMERS READY TO ORG.

Minneapolis—George A. Nelson, national organizer for the Farmers Union, reported upon his return here after a swing around the north and western section of Minnesota that farmers are ready to organize.

"I have never seen a better response in a great many years of organizational work," Nelson said.

Fifteen hundred new members were added during his two-week's trip, he reported, with large crowds greeting him at every point.

Nelson, whose home is in Milltown, Wis, was directed by the natoinal board of his organization to spend a minimum of six months in Minnesota ironing out differences in Farmers Union groups and directing a state-wide organization drves

Scouters Hold Meeting

The officers and scout troop committee men from the Thief River Falls district of the Boy Scout Organization met at the Florentine room at the Evelyn hotel at Thief River Falls on Wednesday evening to discuss plans for the coming year for the organization. Fifteen officers and committee men were present for the occasion.

C. W. Sande, Thief River Falls, president of the district, presided at the meeting and Peter S. DeJong, Conncil Executive of Grand Forks was there and outlined the program for 1938. The matter of finance was discussed at length by R. J. Lund, finance secretary of the organization. The matter of taking care of outstanding pledges for 1936 and 1937 which are delinquent, was disposed of at this time.

Another meeting will be held in about two weeks when it was decided that groups who are sponsoring the Boy Scout movement will be invited to be present and hear the reports of the progress made in the program for 1938.

The Boy Scout movement has gone forward at a great stride the past two years and we are looking forward to making 1938 a bigger and more progressive year in this work. In many places, including Holt, the Mens' clubs of churches have taken it upon themselves to sponsor the Boy Scout troops of their communities. This is a fine work and those who are taking an active interest in it are to be commended for their efforts to further the scout movement. We feel confident that with close cooperation this year we will be able to show some fine results in this district and hope that you will lend a hand in scout work.

Those from Holt who attended the meeting were H. O. Hanson, Vice-President of the District Organization, Hartley Peterson, local Scoutmaster and Sam Lorentson and Olaf Ness, Committeemen.

378 Violated Road Code

The Highway patrol of the Minnesota Highway department brought 378 traffic law violators into court during the month of December the report of John P Arnoldy patrol chief, revealed.

Fines totaling $4,924 were imposed, bringing the year's total to $98,743.76. Improper equipment led to the arrest of 120 drivers, while 63 were apprehended for going through "Stop" signs, and 41 were arrested for driving while drunk.

The patrol gave aid to 3,492 motorists during the month, according to the report. Of this number minor adjustments and repairs accounted for 1,202 of the stops. Fourteen injured persons were given first aid. During the month the guardians of the highway tested 5,199 pairs of headlights.

Because of illegal equipment, "must repair" tags were handed out to 1,482 highway users and 5,864 violators of the traffic code were warned to mend their ways. Improper lights brought 1,572 of the warnings.

Being the last month of the year, license correction receipts took a drive to a low of $2,322.90. Funds thus recovered for the entire year enriched the state by $221,169.28, the report stated.

Will Lower Thief Lake Dam

Announcement was made here by Hans Peterson of Peterson Brothers, Inc., Montevideo, Minnesota contractors, that the Minnesota department of conservation had awarded to the firm the contract for lowering the height of the dam at the outlet of Thief Lake eighteen inches. The work will commence Feb. 1, and is scheduled to be completed by March 10, Mr. Peterson said.

The action was taken by the conservation department as the result of agitation by farmers in the Thief Lake area who have contended that the flooded condition arising from heavy rains last summer was due in large part to the impounding of water by the dam at the lake outlet.

The Eastern Marshall County Protective association, sponsor of the campaign for the lowering of the dam, also is working for further remedial steps in the Mud Lake area and the removal of a large number of dams recently installed in the system of drainage ditches in Eastern Marshall and western Beltrami counties.

The water level in Thief lake last August for the first time since the construction of the dam at the outlet reached to the top of the structure. The dam was built some years ago by the same firm that now has the contract for lowering it.

The Luther League gave a program at Middle River on Sunday evening. A large delegation from Holt was present.

First Strike In Thief River Falls

The first strike of consequence in the history of Thief River Falls went into effecton Friday last week when approximately 50 employes of Barzen Co. a milling concern, walked out and prevented movement of trucks and railroad cars to and from the plant.

There was no violence, police reported, but big crowds were gathered around the plant most of the day and pickets were patrolling the property. A dispute over wages was declared the basis for the walkout.

Police reported that organizers for the C. I. O. have been working in the city for some time and that workers in several branches of industry have been organized.

Strange Facts

Elephants Without Trunks

THE largest of the true seals are known as sea elephants. Full-grown bulls are sometimes 25 feet long and weigh over 2,000 pounds. They are called sea-elephants not on account of their size, but because the ends of their noses are so shaped as to resemble short, wrinkled trunks. Their hair is gray except for a patch of white on their necks and they have long tusks. Sea-elephants were once common all through the Pacific ocean, but their fat bodies yield so much oil that they have been hunted mercilessly. Now they are found only in the South Pacific ocean.

Next to the sea elephants the largest of all the seals are the sea lions. Steller's sea lion, which is common throughout the North Pacific, sometimes exceeds 10 feet in length. The short ears of sea lions differentiate them from true seals; also their necks are longer. Since their forelimbs are triangular paddles and their hindlimbs are web-toed feet which do not turn back like seal's feet, they can use all four limbs on land. They can easily climb up rocks and cliffs.

Ironing Linens.—When ironing ecru linens always iron them on the wrong side. Ironing them on the right side makes them look faded.

Hanging Out Clothes.—Before hanging clothes on the line in freezing weather, put pins on clothes in the house, then snap on line with double clothes pins.

• • •

Judging Cod.—Cod should be judged by the redness of the gills, the whiteness, stiffness and firmness of the flesh, and the clear freshness of the eyes. These are the infallible proofs of its being good. The whole fish should be thick and firm.

• • •

Preparing Oysters.—A little baking powder added to the flour in which oysters are rolled before frying will make oysters light and fluffy.

• • •

Nut Cakes.—One-half cup of butter, three-quarter cup sugar, one-third cup milk, two eggs, one and one-third cups flour, two teaspoons baking powder, one-half teaspoon salt, one cup almonds, blanched and cut in pieces. Cream butter, add sugar and continue beating. Add well beaten yolks and then milk, sifted dry ingredients and nuts alternately. Fold in stiffly beaten whites. Bake in individual tins 20 minutes in a hot oven. Plain icing, sugar or nuts can finish off cup cakes with the proper touch.

Something for Everybody

SEW-YOUR-OWN spells economy and a better wardrobe for all the family, as these patterns indicate. You can sew at home during brisk winter days and have a new dress for all the family in no time at all and at very little expense. When you sew, you spend only a fraction of what you would usually pay for dresses of this character. Enlist the family's enthusiasm, and you can make winter days cheery for all of you by planning something new to wear.

For Big Sister.

A charming Princess frock on trim and tailored lines. Note that it buttons from neck to hem and that the waistline is belted to add a snug line. This is a young-looking dress with plenty of swish for the most fashion-knowing college girl. Make it up for Spring in thin wool, alpaca or print crepe. You'll like its clean-cut lines.

For Little Sister.

A copy of the popular Big Apple frock with the same flaring skirt, fitted basque and short, puffed sleeves. The dress that your little girl will adore wearing, for she likes these copy-cat fashions. Make it for Spring school days of chambray, percale or cotton broadcloth. For immediate wear, try it in serge or flannel. It is a dress that has flaring, graceful lines.

For Mother.

This slenderizing coat frock is one which you will find becoming and comfortable to wear. Designed on Princess lines with long surplice collar and two button closing at waistline, it is as easy to get into as a coat and as easy to wear.
